Astounding Wolf-Man Review

By Toe Fu

Ya know, this book got me to thinking that old Michael Landon take on the Wolfman catches a lot of unnecessary flack. Sure he eschewed normal man-wolf behavior and opted to choke a bitch out instead of dispatching a victim in the expected feral fashion, but the man was breaking down stereotypes. The average woof-man would likely bare fangs then proceed to gnaw off an arm while claw slashing an abdomen to midriff release a steaming miles long pile of intestinal fortitude. Not ol' Landon, the Highway to Heaven creep took lupine mannerisms to an up close and personal vibe and wrapped paws around neck and gave it a furry pressurized squeeze. I could only imagine the victims thoughts as she was being loomed down upon by an adult male sized plushie. "Is this beast going to hug me or pelvic thrust my leg? Oh wow, those hairy mitts are kind of soft on my collar. Oh shit, this mutt is strangling me. Does Wolfman really have nards?"

The modern day lycanthrope get all aggro and it's like they are listening to Master of Puppets and snorting ground up tiger balls before they embark on their nightly forage of flesh. No class at all like my man Michael. No….class….at ….all. Oh, so anyhoo, I am sitting here banging on keys to write a little something about this book. When my friend first told me there was a collection of Wolfman comics, a tickling wave of excitement washed over me and I envisioned classic movie monster shenanigans and the bustin' of silver bullet caps. Nope, it's an average hero imagining with highly unlikable characters engaging is some typical comic book treadmill trudging. The writing by Robert Kirkman, also of Walking Dead fame, is standard fare and it takes 7 issues to wade through before any eyebrow slanting actions take place. Somewhat surprising since The Walking Dead constantly shocks the shite out of me. The art by Jason Howard doesn't satisfy my style palate at all and seems like it might be more at home in an issue of Disney presents-Crap for Kids.

Overall rating- 2 stanky squirrel and chipmunk bone laced Wolfman lawn droppings out of 5.

I still want to check this out. You just can't go wrong with werewolves. Even if they can talk and from what I saw they also appear to be friends with a dracula.

The one aspect of the werewolf I have yet to see touched upon is their genitals. Seriously no one tells you what happens to the junk packet.
I mean does it retract like flying birds, or turn into a dog lipstick or is it hanging out snagging on bushes and stuff. I mean how did Michael Landon deal with that? I bet he wore a cup.

Too Fucked, No!

September 15, 2010

Toe, go back to your comforting X-Masturbationism. If a comic with a brain- or just as well a werewolf with a brain, that LOOKS like a wolf for chrissakes- is beyond your capability to enjoy, or if you miss Grant Morrison-esque fetishism or double-page obscenities lovingly rendered in print (and this is coming from somebody who _liked_ The Invisibles), don't pop out a rat-shit review like this and expect people who actually do have more brain cells that you can count on your fingers to take you seriously.

Nobody's asking you to like it if you don't. Comics are one of the few places I think can really tell stories without being obscenely prudish or pretentious (though it certainly does happen, needlessly or otherwise) but what we do expect from you in this case is to think on the matter long enough not to say a fucking thing if you can't accept that people (UNLIKE YOU, right?) actually like it.

Sit down and shut the fuck up, Michael. My only beef with Wolf-Man is that it didn't go any further than #25. (Niiiiice gatefold.)

It’s all bitter on the inside

Sometimes when you decide to be a baker you aren’t a good mixer and when you make cakes and things the batter has all those secret lumps of bitter things like baking soda and powder and cream of tartar, things that hurt your salivary glands. I bet you didn’t know that those secret bitter lumps are where the souls of cakes are housed.

So the next time you are a baker and your mixing skills aren’t so hot and someone has the audacity to complain about tiny cream of tartar landmines in a cake that was baked for them for free, just point out that they just ate the cake’s soul, and it is a very rare thing to be able to devour a cake soul because many things have to align at the very moment of batter conception to guide your hand to miss the mixing and allow a cake soul to come into being. They should be honored and have some dignity, after all you don’t see Shiva devouring souls and then complaining that the are all bitter and powdery, and he eats his soul worlds at a time.

And seriously,what the fuck do you expect a soul to taste like, cotton candy? You’re lucky it doesn’t taste like dorian fruit. Look here, don’t expect anymore cakes from me, and you know what don’t ever talk to me again you ungrateful soul eating son of a bitch. Good Day Sir!

You’re going to have to go somewhere else for your cake needs

Jon & Kate Plus 8 Disabled Children

So after several years of not having cable and not really watching tv, I am back in the game. One of the best parts of having cable is that you can just sit around doing nothing but watch tv until 3 or 4 in the morning even though you have to work the next day. Channels like TLC and Discover Channel encourage this with huge blocks of the same show starting late at night. A few nights ago I got sucked into a marathon of Jon & Kate Plus 8 which I imagine is known to it's fans at JKP8DC. Oh wait those children aren't disabled. See that's what drew me in. I saw all these downs syndrome kids and though, "how do they take care of all 8 of them? Man this is gonna be good."

Well as it turns out all the kids are healthy, and for a reality show it's a nice break from all the drama a lot of these shows concoct. I watched several hours of this and was quite interesting to see how these humans interact with their children. No snapping his belt, or telling them "I'll give you something to cry about." Not even an accidental burn on the arm from a cigarette or a butt blowing in through the back window on their laps. I mean it was actually kind of boring. No trips to the dumpster behind radio shack to get remote controls that the employees were "throwing away." And the parents don't even yell at each other or at the kids.

These kids are yelling and crying because they can't hang out with their dad. They are having cupcake making parties and doing projects. I watched it long enough that I sort of felt like I was raising the kids myself. What a great parent I turned out to be. I think that was enough to hold me over for a few more years.

It's like the time I was in my kitchen and heard this crying sound for like 10 minutes. I couldn't figure out what it was. I was looking all around. Then I noticed that a kid was crying below the tree in my neighbors yard. I felt pretty bad for him and thought, "shit that kid fell out of a tree, I wonder if he's hurt?" I watched him cry for like 5 more minutes, then I went out there and was like "are you okay?" He cried out a yes and something about some kids pushing him off a wall. Sounds like some of the friends I had when I was a kid. I identified with him. So I said what my dad would have said. Where's your mother? He said the mother and everyone else were away. He said he fell on a big rock and hurt his back so I was like alright let me see? It looked kind of bruised up and whatever, but what could I do? I just said "It's not too bad. Well you better go home. Lay down for a while and you'll feel better until your mom get's home."

I was proud. I think his own dad would have handled it the same way. Plus I couldn't hear that annoying crying anymore.

That kid is actually alright though. My dog ran away once and he caught him for me. A few weeks ago his dog ran away. I saw it running all around the neighborhood, but couldn't catch it. As I went past their house I told the father "your dog ran away, I cant' catch it." He said,"not my dog."

He was looking right at his own dog and didn't even recognize it. 5 minutes later the whole family was after it. The mom and dad went off in their cars. The kid took to the streets. He came back carrying the dog. I was proud of the kid. I think maybe when he grows up he's going to be a dog catcher.

> Man, kids are fucked up devil tools. I remember this one time it was the first week of school starting and I was looking out the window as all the little children were climbing that big ass hill from the bus stop and there was this one scrawny kid dragging a big ass tuba case up the street, he was all sweaty and looked like he was going to cry any second, and there was this other kid following him calling him names but the scrawny kid just kept dragging that big ass case up the street and wouldn't even give the asshole kid the time of day.Well the asshole kid followed him a good bit of the way and I guess got tired of the whole mess so he stopped following. When the tuba dragging kid was halfway up the street the asshole kid was twirling around a telephone pole and yelled, "You'll die naked and alone!" I pressed my face against the screen to see the little scrawny kid's reaction. He didn't even turn around, he was toiling on with his case like some kind of crazy Tolstoyan Sisyphus. That was the most shocking and profound thing

September 23, 2008

That was a particularly assholey batch of kids. Some kids are funny and cute. Some are monsters. I was walking past the school the other day. These kids were playing a game. A few of the kids were standing by the fence and I overheard them talking. One kid was like this game is boring. The other one was like yeah. Don't you want to be chased? I want to be chased?

I started thinking. Is that what makes you an adult. At whatever age you cease to want to be chased, you are officially a grown up.

September 9, 2009

I think sometimes grown ups like to be chased like when they eluding police speeding down the highway, they know there is no escape and the whole thing is really pointless they just want to be chased because everyone is always like man we are all grown up now novbody chases anybody anymore, it's just not done, but there are some people who really do want to be chased and they go on living a lie but they can only do it for so long and then one day they snap and they are taking 57 cop cars on a 90 mile an hour chase down the freeway. Maybe if someone said to them hey do you want to be chased I do, let's go! the world would be a better place

Officer Dodges Bullet, Kills Baby

With the new fall tv season just ready to go, my REM sleeping mind has decided that my own personal broadcasts are ready to go back on the air. Last night's episode was a good one. The beginning was a little slow, not really worth mentioning.I wasn't paying too much attention to the middle of the show either, but the ending was insane.

The show finale involved a large group of criminals escaping from the scene of a crime. You know the drill. People running everywhere, scattering into separate escape vehicles. One hardened criminal drove away with a woman hanging on the side of his door. She wasn't even involved in the crime, just an innocent bystander. Scared by the gunshots, she wanted to get away anyway she could. The next shot was of the woman still hanging on the outside of the car, only now the criminal and she were in the middle of an intense lip-lock session. In a show of love, the criminal took her hand, he moved his hand in a way that they held his weapon together, aiming at the office driving the police cruiser behind them. He was trying to bring her into his world. make her like him. She accepted, not thinking of the consequences. The man squeezed her finger, firing the weapon at the officer. The officer ducked, revealing in the back seat behind him a woman and her baby which the bystander has just been forced to shoot.

Can't wait to see what happens next episode.

Terminators, Shirley Manson, A Toilet???

This season of Terminator: The Sarah Connor Chronicles started off with a bang. It really did, and you have to love a show that gives you what you want. Hot girl killer robots, 'splosions, aging female rock stars, flipped cars, and stapled faces. It was one of my favorite shows last season topping Lost and Heroes and it looks like the trend is going to continue.

I'm still shocked at how Brian Austen Green has somehow transformed into a tough guy. From his very annoying role on 90210 in the 90's you'd think was impossible, but he managed to pull it together.

The kid who plays John Connor seems to be toughening up a little bit too this season. I hope he does because he can get annoying with all the whining. You can't save humanity if you're crying all the time.

The hot girl robot from Firefly got really beat up last season and they didn't fix her looks. Her face is all bashed open and she even staples her cheek shut at one point. I hope they repair her somehow because the show really benefits from the eye candy.

As an added bonus, Shirley Manson from the band Garbage has joined the crew as a villain. The highlight of the show was when, for no logical reason, she transformed T2 liquid metal style from the form of a urinal into a woman – just to kill a guy who pissed in her. It's bad writing at it's finest, but it's funny as hell.

I like the feeling of the show. Things are just slightly different for the new season. It's a back to school, hey I look slightly different for the fall freshness that I like. Does that make this an emo blog? I hope so because someone (we'll call him baby jake) mistakenly though I invited them to an emo blog today because our domain is emtoast.cc. I guess he

The HDTV feed on this show is incredible too. With the exception of a few too many slow-mo scenes at the beginning, it was really nice to look at. They didn't cheap out on the filming process. Shows like this make me happy that I made the jump to HD.

I don't know about that Brian Austen Green. He banged Tori Spelling and that does something to a guy, it takes away your humanity, your souls, it turns you into a monster, capable of horrible things, it withers you up inside and turns your soul into one of those stinky dried voodoo roots hanging in a haitian botanica, even if it was just on TV for pretend. If you can pretend a thing that heinous, you are capable of every deplorable act imaginable, worse than anything Disney, China, or the Mormons could ever come up with. I'm boycotting Brian Austen Green.

But that whole urinal thing is genius, you can deprogram all the little kids who just got potty trained with that shit.

Camden Area High Schools Pioneer New Trend in School Curriculum

Remember back in the day when you and your friends would steal the colored sharpies from the art room and draw Celtic crosses, tribal designs and Tazmanian Devils all over each others calves and forearms in the back of economics class? Do you remember how sad you were when they finally faded and you regretted telling everyone they were real? Well children no longer have to endure such impermanence and heartache. Now the heartache and regret can last forever.

Many high schools around the country have added some new courses to their art programs. In addition to Crafts 1&2, Drawing 1 &2, students can now study Prison Tats 1, Tattoo 1, Tattoo 2 , and Scarification 1.

The Advanced Education Programs offer Advanced Body Modication and Penile Bifuraction and Castration.

One of the first schools to offer these programs was Don Rico Buscardo Batarde High School In Camden, NJ.

Here are some examples of students endeavors from 2007.

Check out this third period Tattoo 2 beauty done by Roshanda entitled “Piccolo? Noooooooooo! Toxic Avenger? Nooooo! Who are you?”

What a mysterious gem.

Prison Tat 1 student Sebastian scratched out this beauty during 4th period . He is working on mastering the Sharpie look,only without the impermanence.

Mr. Lubner's 3rd period student, Erika, had a few points taken off her rendition of " An Ink Rose for Emily " because she used a sander and developed a staph infection. Next year she says she wants to take Scarification 1, because she thinks she has a knack for it.

Dalton from Mr. Squillaces 7th period Prison Tats 1 is learning that there is no such thing as practice makes perfect when it comes to anarchy and Gwar.

“That boy had better slow down and save some skin for Prison Tats 2”, Mr. Squillace remarked.

Dalton did this whimsical pectoral piece on his dad Fred as extra credit. Dalton is pioneering what he calls the shabby chic crackle effect.

When asked about his curious style Dalton said, “Yeah, I want my ink to be special I want people to see and know who did it, I want them to be like whoa dude! You know?”

Riley from Ms. Destiny’s 9th period Tattoo 1 class is well on his way to perfecting the multifaceted Tramp stamp.

Ms. Destiny said that, “… he really has an eye for shading and design, but he needs to work on fine detail. He’s in mitten mode right now, and all of his faces seem to look like Aphex Twin masks.”

She holds out hope that next year he will decide to take Tattoo 2 and hone his skills.

On a visit to the school last May, President Bush was quoted as saying, “Way to go kids! Keeping American traditions alive is as American as it can get. I commend you and your contributions to society. If you study hard and do all your homework you can be a fine part of the lower middle American slice of the American pie that people sometimes eat, that we also like to call life. Nothing can hold you back from your dreams as long as you don’t typify ethnic stereotypification mannerisms particular to your racial agenda.”

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

For now these classes are mainly offered in highschools located in urban centers around the country." The popularity of this program has far exceded our expectations," Superintendant Sutphen, was quoted as saying. It seems that the majority of public schools will be adding these classes to their line up by fall 2009.

Dear Internet,

Sometimes I wish Al Gore never ate that quarter pound of ‘shrooms and invented you. Before you came along, I took pride in and enjoyed being part of little movements and sub-cultures that molded me into the man child I am today. Those are all near extinct thanks to your infinite vaginal squirting of information and easily available tools to create instant cool in the youth of today.

I know this may all sound like bitter old man banter or maybe even elitist, but fuck it. I’m 100% anti-ego and have the self esteem of a sea slug, but I can flaunt that I know my shit. Coming up as a kid with heavy interests in music there was no world wide web for me to turn to and have some pretentious music site or hipster blog fill me in on what’s “now” or whatever trend is fashionable. I had to earn it. No free full musical library downloads to give me immediate cred. It was about actively seeking new labels and artists and taking chances with your limited funds to hopefully stumble upon something fresh. Hopping a bus to the city and scouring record stores for mixtapes and record singles and having a genuine feeling of excitement and that I was part of something. I remember a time when I would meet people and tell them I was into jungle and their face would take on a look of confusion like I just proclaimed that I poo out fountain soda. Now everything is so

So fuck off internet….and fuck you too you little unoriginal bastard kids running around trying to look dirty and hip but you have on $300 jeans and haircuts from Salon Le' Douche. If it wasn't for Al Gore and his insane imagination you would still all be jocks celebrating date rape Saturdays and weekly skater-fag bashings.

I feel better now.

The internet is inseperable with the masses now with cell phones and wifi, people need to pick up a book and physically flip pages instead of clicking a mouse.

Ciezarney: Secret Language of Our Fathers

By EMToast

Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: ciezarney, Hulk Hogan, language, Toastmaster

Several times growing up, my dad claimed to know a secret language. He would utter several sentences of phrases containing more z's than my mind could comprehend. At one point, my sister even seemed to be picking up on it. I thought they were both crazy. It seemed impossible to me that my dad could know anything of the sort.

Twenty odd years later I found out I was wrong. I'm listening to Robin's news on Howard Stern. She plays a recording of Hulk Hogan and his son talking over the prison phones. The son speaks English, then switches over to a combination of code words and a language containing z's galore and that sounded exactly like what my Dad had spoken so many years earlier.

Howard and the crew were stumped. Via telephone, they brought in one of Hulksters friends and fellow Sirius broadcaster Bubba the Love Sponge. He revealed that Hulk was speaking a language called Carnie. Professional wrestling got it's start in carnivals where a secret language was used to communicate behind the backs of the public.

Here are a few good explanations of carnie

http://www.chass.utoronto.ca/~cpercy/courses/6362-ellis

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

“Carnie cant, the secret language native to the American carnival circuit, also called z-Latin, alfalfa, or Ciezarney (amongst other titles). In Carnie, consonants are sporadically followed by the sequence <iez>; so, to use Russell and Murray’s pedantic example, phoneme becomes phiezoniezeme”

http://www.goodmagic.com/carny/ciazarn.htm

“A little like pig-latin… you insert an invariant nonsense syllable after each consonant. In Carny, the syllable is always “eaz”, pronounced “ee-uz…Carny was once common inside the ring among wrestlers and referees, very much like Pig-Latin where a syllable is added to any word — “finish” being turned into “fee-ya-zin-ish” or “gimmick” being turned into “Gee-ya-zimmick.”

Dad was never into wrestling, but he did work for a zoo/carnival back in the day. I guess he picked up a little carney speak along the way.

I can still hardly believe it believe it. Dad actually was speaking something of a language. Sorry I doubted you Dad!

the only phrase i remember was zif zyou wzant, back when you were in school and he used to take me to sit at the counter at the coffee shop and let me load a cap gun with raisins and pretend to shoot people, he used to talk like that, I think I only understood some of it because he would say shit like, you want a chocolate cupcake and I really didnt know exactly what he was saying but there was a cupcake so I had a basic comprehension. And he would watch me all day while you were at school because he worked at night, most of the time he was asleep though and i used to run around the apartment just touching things I wasnt supposed to and he would take me to the junk yard and shit and lift me up into the double stacked cars and make me get knobs and that he couldn't reach. Man those were the days, he would take me to the coffee shop and sit there drinking coffee for ever talking to the guy behind the counter and i would spin around on the stools and then the guy would yell at me for sticking my tongue inside a can of coke because those were the days of those razor sharp pull tabs, I'd be sitting right next to daddy but he was so busy talking that the guy he was talking to had to yell at me, I always thought that guy was a dick, but I guess I really could have cut my tongue off. I used to speak Ciezarnie, with a few friends at a hospital where I worked years ago. Most have since died, so no one to talk with much anymore as I have since moved to another town.
I loved learning the language and we often used it to talk about fellow employees while in the cafeteria, without them having a clue as to what we were saying. I believe because we learned to speak fast, it was harder for anyone to actually know what was being said. Glad I found actual references to this dying/dead art of secret speech.

I credit my Yahoo Home Page for featuring a video dealing with the, "Bootililng", language that is dying out in Bootville, CA, for bringing the art of speaking Ciezarney back to my attention.

Adventures in Voodou

We've all seen these workplace voodoo kits, they show up at Christmas parties and birthdays, and everyone gets a laugh and pretends that it's funny and they pretend that they don't really want to kill their boss.

Well, Fuck that shit!

I wanted to find out what would happen if you got some bonifide voodoo going on in the work place.

So I did some research on Hoodoo, Obeah, Voodoun, Palo myombe, Santeria and the like.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

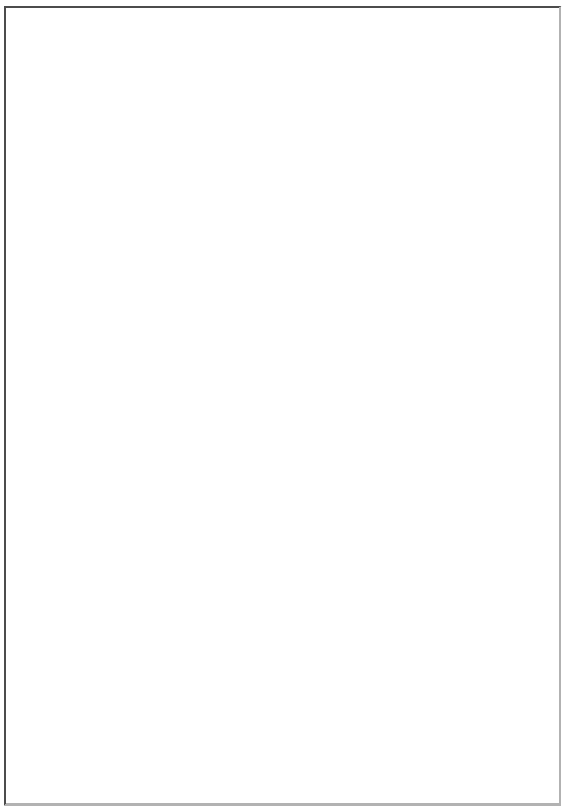
It really is some fascinating stuff.

Then I found the self-proclaimed world's largest supplier and manufacturer of occult and mystical products.

I perused the pages of the catalog and I went to work ordering my tools of smite, or culturally anthropological researchical items, whatever you want to call it. I went straight for the big guns, Holy Death Oil, Run Devil Run Alter candles, and a whole slew of Seven African Powers shit and all kinds of toxic herbs that probably aren't legal under their real names, everything is legal in Spanish though.

This company is so seedy that my credit card company called me and told me that they had a fraudulent charge on my account and canceled my order. For a moment I thought maybe this is a sign that I shouldn't be tampering with the dark arts, but then I thought of zombies and all the cool shit I saw and I said hell no, if what I read is true that just means my enemies are working against me and trying to prevent me from gaining the upper hand, I am going to get me some voodoo if I have to petition every orisha on the seven African powers candle to do it! So after a few phone calls with people that had some really crazy accents I could not quite place and a valley girl, my order is on it's way. I think the valley girl must have been their zombie slave,

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast



She didn't seem to fit in at all, I bet she pissed off a hougan in a Starbucks and is doomed to be their slave forever and ever and ever, filling orders of alligator feet, devil nuts, and anointing oils. Oh well, sucks to be her.

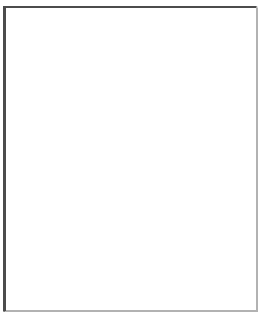
I am giddy with anticipation.

Giddy

I check the UPS site everyday tracking the progress. The slow, slow progress, like that rough beast slouching towards Bethlehem to be borns yo.

It is scheduled to arrive tomorrow. By tomorrow night I will be dressing my Seven African Powers and Run Devil Run candles and petitioning Chango to do some interceding and let the fun begin.

What else are you going to do on a weeknight?



Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Now I realize that this sticker could actually apply to many types of folk magic because there are a whole lot of jesus candles involved in this stuff and sometimes you have to talk to jesus to get stuff done and it's all about 3s for the holy trinity.

I bet some rootworker stole my first one. Now those bitches have to scratch at my window like a cat at the door trapped in a snowstorm because I taped it to the inside. Ha, you will have to break my window this time assholes.

professional, not the streetwalking kind, at least I don't think so. She was going on about how she sacrificed so much in her life and was making her face look like it was going to squirt tears. Like she sacrificed it all for her career. And the guy was going right along with it. He may have just been trying to get some action, but I think maybe she found a couple pieces of his hair on the office floor, burned them up and snorted them to make him fall in love with her.

I bet.
I think she would actually have to get him to ingest her hairs for that kind of trick to work. Those kinds of tricks usually incorporate bodily effluvia such as semen and vaginal secretions I guess hair could work just as well., especially a pube, That whole Clarence Thomas and Anita Hill sexual harassment thing went down like that.

Hill alleged that Thomas had harassed her by claiming to have found a pubic hair on an unopened can of Coke in their office.

As a sexual harassment charge, the pube hair on a Coke seemed freaktastically bizarre but since both parties were African American some say that it seemed obvious that Thomas was accusing Hill of trying to hoodoo him with a very common love spell which would involve her passing an unopened drink can or bottle between her legs and rubbing it on her peeper. That shit is dangerous down there, voodoo vagina dente.
I read that some women will go so far as to "dress" thier own vajajays, so that when a man enters, she can hoodoo his nature and make him hers forever and if they break up and she does not undo the trick he will be doomed to a life of withered peepee if he does not realize that she has hoodooed his nature and take the necessary actions to undo it. supposedly you can piss on a red ants nest or on a knife blade and let it run off and then you will have your shit restorified. See bitches are evil. In many cultures young men are told never to eat or drink dark liquids from an unmarried woman because she can make him hers by adding some of her menses or other bodily fluids to red sauces, coffee, red wine, and then he will be fucked.
But he can turn the trick back on a bitch by stopping up her fluids in a bottle and burying it in the ground or hiding it in the crook of a tree. It will stop up her organs and she will die.
I think this is the real reason behind so many unexplained cases of the pussy whipped. I mean how else would you explain a bitch being mean and nasty and hideous inside and out and their guy chops off his nuts and puts them in her purse and raises all 23 of her kids from 12 other men and works his ass off all day and she sits home on the couch while she teaches the little ones to hose her down so that she doesn't have to miss her stories on TV for a shower and then comes home and cooks them all Kraft dinner and sits home watching army wives with her and massages Crisco oil into her hump every night.

X-files Season 15: The Fringe

By EMToast

Tags: Fringe, serious faces, Toastmaster

I've just finished watching the pilot episode of Fringe of Fox. I don't want to ruin it for anyone who has Tivo'd it or is planning to watch the encore showing on Sunday night, so I'll just give a quick impression. If I close my eyes real hard I can imagine a world where Fox has kept the X-files on air well beyond the days where T2 Robert Patrick took over for Mulder and into the Season 15 world where Pacey from Dawson Creek and some unknown blonde are saving the world with the help of their lunatic grandfather. I think I remember something about Pacey being brought onto the show sometime in late 2002 during the controversial X-files / Dawson Creek Crossover. Also I'm guessing they defeated the aliens around season 8 because nobody said anything about them. Chris Carter has handed the show reigns over to JJ Abrams of Lost fame. JJ has an expertise in loud violin sounds at the exciting parts and a firm belief that every new series should begin with an airplane disaster.

The show wasn't bad. I'll give it a chance. The things I liked about it are: disintegrating people, lady with robot arm, communicating with the dead, resurrecting the dead in future episodes (zombies here we come!!), scientists who know all kinds of occult magic, one good explosion, killing a man with a pillow, Pacey roughing a guy up Dawson creek style, car chase, car flip, and several characters with extremely scary eyes.

I thought Pacey was baby william? It always amazed me how Mulder wasn't all sad and bitter about Scully shipping their love child off to some couple in some place like Wisconsin or some shit and they don't even know where he is. I forgot all about the psychic spawn until I saw Mulder and Scully shacked up in that movie, it was so shitty I don't even feel cheated that I downloaded it from some site where some guy filmed it in the theater from a camera in his armpit and then I watched it on winamp.

ok, so im watching fringe right now. So I saw the 80 year old man baby and was like yeah no, then Walter's ridiculous accent had me saying yeah no even more, and then when they are like yeah the dude knocked her up and passed the rapid growth on to the spawn, and the whole think with the pituitary gland was just retarded the way he was like oh yeah he has to take the victims glands to keep him from aging, and I was yelling yeah no at the TV. I know it's scifi shit, and they don't operate in reality, but my suspsension of disbelief was just like gone.Then when it got to the eyeball camera I just said come on now! It was like that pottery episode in csi where they recorded the voices in a bowl or some shit on the potterswheel Maybe I am just jaded and I've seen too many things along this vein but it seemed old. Even the little insignificant details were derivative. The whole hand in the jar in the car inthe dirty old garage was totally silence of the lambs, and there was shit from the x-files, and jacobs ladder, and the list goes. I will still give it another chance. I didn't see the first episode, I think the material for this episode was just poorly thought out, It's like when you buy an album, you know that only about 85% of the album is going to be good, but that doesn't make you hate the album, but when the first song on the album is their shitty We're-going-to-break-into-a-new-genre song, then it makes it a little harder to really get into the rest of the album. I also think I just have a problem with the plausibility of 80 year old man babies and growing test tube super soldiers in general, it's tired old shit and it doesn't intrigue me. Don't get me wrong it had it's good points, I just can't see them right now.
There is still hope for me, I hated primeval and torchwood when I first saw them, and now I can't stop watching. I will just chalk it up to me being overly critical.

Oh yeah and the on screen text is just ridiculous how they attach the name of the building to the building and make it look like part of the environment. But I won't deduct points for that because it's original.

September 16, 2008

Yeah I didn't particularly like how they went for the csi style crime at the beginning then solve it formula, but what can you do? It was a cool intro, I have to admit. Listen Up, Then Listen Again

By EMToast
September 12, 2008
Categories: Curious Ideas
Tags: bad music, mp3, Toastmaster

There are a lot of albums from 10-20 years ago that when I listen to now sound better to me than almost anything else. My theory is that it's all in the repetition.

I once dated a girl who honestly didn't like getting new music. Once I bought her a new album and she was disappointed. She said it took her too long to get used to something new. In a way she was onto something. Some albums click right away. Others you have to listen to repeatedly before you love them. But if you listen to them enough they can become part of you.

When you listen to something enough times, you really get to know it. You begin to hear and appreciate things you didn't hear before. You derive pleasure knowing that a certain bass line or guitar solo is coming up. You can't wait for a lyric or chorus. If you listen to it on a different stereo or headphones, it's a different, even new, listening experience.

This is the danger in listening to bad music. If you expose yourself to something long enough, you adjust and become used to it. After a while, you might even come to like it. One of my darkest times when I found myself working at a warehouse and being forced to listen to the Backstreet Boys over the PA over and over and coming to the realization that I had inadvertently memorized the words. Luckily I escaped liking the music.Sometimes my mp3 player will die on me. I'll scan through the radio dial and a song will come on the pop station and it sounds ok to me. A song like Umbrella by Rhianna will come on and it doesn't sound half bad to me. If I listened to it enough, it might become my favorite song. That's too frightening for me to ever allow, I change the station.

In the old days, I had limited funds and limited access to music. I could only carry so many albums with me so the good ones would get multiple listens. Those are the albums I love even now. Those are the albums that I will always own even if I don't have them any longer. I think it's all due to the repetition.

In today's world it's limitless. I barely listen to an album twice anymore because there is just so much. Because of that few albums really stick with me anymore.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Should I stop listening to new music and stick to what's good? No. There's still so much new music to discover. That would be giving up. What I need to remember is that it's not the quantity, it's the quality, and the repetition.

> The market is so much more saturated now…and that's not even my old man voice shouting out. So much shit comes out and it becomes overwhelming. Back when we were young and broke, it was a necessity to have an album on repeat, now its listen to once and if it doesn't automatically resonate, its most likely disappearing amongst the clutter of your musical library.

The Art of Looking Busy

By bixby
September 14, 2008
Categories: Curious Ideas
Tags: Bixby, office worker, pretend, slacking

Chances are if you work in an office environment you are always being watched to make sure you aren't surfing the net or making personal phone calls or doing anything that could be categorized as slacking off.

Slacking off can be very rewarding, but it can also be very dangerous. If you aren't careful about it it could cost you your job.

Maybe your job is too easy and you finish most of your work in the first 2 hours of the day and you have 6 hours of free time, and you aren't an idiot and do not want to alert management to the fact that you could use some extra work. Or your job doesn't pay as much as you think you should get paid so you only do as much as you get paid for so you find yourself with a lot of extra time on your hands.

What do you do?

No matter how you fill your time at work, the key is to always look busy.

Here are 12 Tips you can't live without:

1. ALWAYS LOOK ANNOYED AND BE SHORT WITH PEOPLE WHEN THEY APPROACH YOU.

It shows you are into your work and don't like to be distracted from it because work is all important to you.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

2. TALK TO YOURSELF.

Not only does it show people that you are totally focused on your work, it always says you could be potentially crazy. People will steer clear of a crazy person and you can go about pretending to be busy without distraction.

3. PLAN AHEAD.

Fucking off takes a little work, plan ahead and pay attention to details.

4. HAVE EYES IN THE BACK OF YOUR HEAD.

While you are busy with your non work you must still be aware of your surroundings. Set up your desk so that passersby have a difficult time seeing what's on your computer screen. Position shiny things such as frames pictures or wall pockets so that you can see people coming up behind you. Darker colored wall pockets work far better than the clear ones.

5. ALWAYS LOOK FAR TOO BUSY TO APPROACH. BUSY BORDERING ON HOMICIDAL.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

People will steer clear of your desk and think twice before asking you for shit.

6. HIRE MIMES TO COME FUCK UP YOUR SERVER.

It will keep management from paying attention to you and your marathon session of spider solitaire.

7. ALWAYS CARRY PROPS.

This is probably the most important tip.

If you are away from your desk carry something like a few files or memos, clipboards are also very effective. You can also pretend to read them and talk to yourself a little. Make sure that it is a work related item.

If you are at your desk playing solitaire, or reading some crazy shit from project Gutenberg make sure you spread some files around and hold a page in your hand or a pen while you type. You should also leave a folder open on your lap while your reading Chekhov on your monitor.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

8. KEEP YOUR DESK MESSY

Your desk should be messy during business hours then clean it up at the end of the day. It shows you have lots of work but you are organized, and you never leave unfinished business. It also makes it very hard for people to tell what you are doing.

9. 1-800 NUMBERS

Assemble a list of 1-800 numbers that have automated messages. You can dial them up and avoid doing shit and look busy when the boss comes to you for something. You can listen to pre-recorded messages about informative shit like tourism and cancer all day. Most times they will see you are on the phone and come back later. Sometimes they stand there and wait for you to get off the phone, this can be awkward what I like to do is say, "What the heck the voice mail is full?" Then you just hang up and look at your boss or whoever it is and say something like, " I guess I'll just have to fax an invoice over. Sorry about that, what do you need?" 1-800-4cancer is a personal favorite. They have lots of options so you can press lots of buttons and they update their messages regularly.

10. BURN A CD

Download some fascinating shit to read; like project Gutenberg, it has a giant catalog. Once you find something to read, make sure to change all the text to something uniform like times new roman 12 point font, then name all the files after work files and burn them to CD. This way it won't draw attention from passersby, they will just assume you are hard at work.

11. TAKE A NAP.

Personally I look foward to taking a nap in my car everyday at lunch. Sometimes you can't wait until then. So you can set your cellphone alarm and take a ten minute nap in the bathroom

This one I cannot stress enough.

12. STAY AWAY FROM THE WATER COOLER!

Whatever you do, not matter how alluring it may seem stay away from the water cooler. No good can ever come from it, it is clearly a non work area and management knows this.

Good luck People! Be smart and plan ahead.

This is some of the most brilliant advice I've ever seen. They should post this shit on careerbuilder.com.

I believe I pioneered the clipboard technique back in my warehouse working days. You have to walk a little fast with this one, don't interact with anyone. Act like you are on your way to something urgent. I always thought of it as free exercise time.

Another good tip is to join a committee. Safety committee worked well for me. Then I could walk around the warehouse with my clipboard "inspecting." for safety violations. Offices often have similar positions.

#5 is pretty effin scary. The technique I have mastered at my office job is to just have no personal relationship whatsoever with anyone so they eventually forget you work there. Then it's uninterrupted i-nets surfing and cartoon doodling all day. Also, if you are ever questioned for being away from your desk for extended periods of time, do not feel ashamed to blame it on frequent trips to the bathroom due to tummy issues. No one ever questions a bad case of the green apple splatters.

EMToast: Top 5 Werewolf Sightings

By EMToast
September 16, 2008
Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: Toastmaster, werewolf

EMToast has done extensive market research and delved deep into EMToast personal memory banks to bring you the top 5 werewolf sightings of all time.

1: The Howling

This is the mother of all modern werewolf movies. It is the first known appearance of the long eared dog footed werewolf. In the year 1980 terrifying commercials appeared across the country on late night television. These commercials were so frightening that two young children aged 6 and 4 are said to have refused to go upstairs into their apartment because they were afraid that monsters known as “howlings” were waiting for them up there. This film is EMT rated #1 for authenticity and for strict adherence to lycanthropic legend. It has what is considered to be the greatest of all werewolf transformations.The actor who played Eddie Quist was reportedly held in a Spanish prison for several years. Quist was vacationing in Madrid when several extremely Catholic Spanish officials had him imprisoned under their strict anti-witchcraft laws. After being held underwater for several minutes, Quist admitted to being a werewolf and as such was sentences to a minimum term of 5 years in los prisona de federales.

The ending of this movie also has one of the worst werewolf transformations where the lady reporter turns into some kind of a poodle. It’s still #1 though. Too late to change it now.

2. An American Werewolf In London

Another top werewolf movie. No CGI here. The transformation is one of the best around, but points were taken off because the werewolf in this film an actual wolf and not a wolf-man.

This is probably the best cinematic example of the werewolf. Ticket sales were so high on this one that after factoring for inflation even box office blockbusters like Titanic can't touch it.

There was recently a bootleg CGI remake of this movie called An American Werewolf In Paris, but we'd suggest skipping it.

3. FOX Werewolf TV Series

When the FOX network was just beginning back in 1986-87 they only had a few shows. You had Tracy Ullman which spawned the Simpsons, Married with Children, and Wednesday nights brought Werewolf.

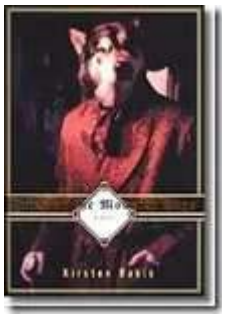
This is another great example of the long eared dog legged wolf, however these wolves had extremely long arms and in some circles are called werewolf apes.

In an alternate universe Werewolf has been on the air for over 20 years and the Simpsons was cancelled after just 2 seasons.

4. Altered Beast

Sega's greatest creation featuring an undead werewolf bid to rise from his grave by the god zeus. If you punch a white wolf in real life, I believe the orbs will allow you to "power up" Punch 3 wolves and you become a wolf. Go ahead and try for yourself.

5. Lives of the Monster Dogs



This book is about dogs who walk upright and talk. They also have prosthetic arms. Although they live as humans and even wear slippers and ascots they sometimes go crazy and shit the floor and scratch things up like they were regular pissed off dogs. They aren't technically werewolves, but close enough. This one isn't even a joke. Check Amazon if you don't believe me.

So there you have it, the top 5 EMToast werewolf sightings complete with lies, embellishments, and conclusive market data.

What are your top 5 werewolf sightings?

September 18, 2008

> The Talisman has awesome werewolf action in it, and it is a good book even if it is Stephen King, but I think the quality has to do with the fact that he wrote it with Peter Straub and it was pre-hit-by-a-van-and-now-I-write-for-lifetime-television-for-women days. Mix one parts 28 Days Later, one part Return of the Living Dead, one part Excalibur, and one part Escape from New York. Mix it all together and what do you think you get?

Right, one hell of a bad movie.

I'll give you a quick rundown to save you the trouble of wasting your time watching it. Just like in 28 Days Later, the people of a British Isle get infected with a virus (1 pt 28DL.) that kills them. Sadly they leave the good part out and it doesn't make them into zombies. Stereotypically evil leaders wall the place off to protect the outside world from the virus, killing everyone inside. A little girl gets shot in the eye and then escapes on a helicopter.

Fast forward thirty-five years and the helicopter brings the girl back grown up and ready to kick some infectee ass. As it turns out, not everyone inside the walls is dead. The evil leaders figured out there was an immunity cell in the blood of the survivors, so they sent the girl in. Like Snake Pliskin from Escape from NY (1 pt EFNY) the one eyed girl is on a mission to bring back a human specimen. Except she doesn't need to wear an eye pach, she has a robot eye that she likes to let roll around in the dirt before she pops it back in her socket.

Inside the walled in city we find 2 groups at war. One group is a bunch of punk rock barbarians (1 pt ROTLD). The other group are like the knights of the round table complete with horses, armor, and a castle (1 pt Excalibur).

Keep in mind, this is the future. It's 2045 and we are to believe that everyone inside the walls thought it was a good idea to return to living like either medieval times or a barbarian version of 1976. I don't really get it, but it makes me wonder if there was a third group of future guys who were smart enough to hide underground from these idiots like the underground people of Beneath the Planet of the Apes.

The movie then has a lot of boring fights and basically everyone gets killed. Tthe one eye girl finds a car inside of a wood crate buried in a fallout shelter that after 35 years sill runs great and still has shiny paint. Also the roads are perfect. Better than the streets outside my house. Britain must have some fantastic asphalt. One eye brings some other girl back to the helicopter to cure the world with a guy who fell in love with her when he fell on her in a train.Then the one eye girl goes back to become the leader of the punks.

It's as ridiculous as it sounds. And I'm leaving out the part of the scientist who becomes a king and has a wizard and a jester and a knight. I am a fan of bad b-movies, but this wasn't even bad enough to be good.

I give it 1 out of 5 fucked up toasts.

A first grade teacher has been punishing the male students in her class by pinching their nipples.

When a male student asked her why, she answered because I want to turn you guys into A cups.

As for the girls, the teacher said they already have boobs, she doesn't want to turn theirs into bigger ones than hers. The funny thing is, the teacher won the city's best teachers award a couple years ago.

Horrorscopes for the Week of September 22nd

By bixby

Tags: Bixby, bowels, Cancer, Hanta virus, horoscope, Weekly Horrorscope

Aries You're feeling lucky this week, well, you are not. Black tie events are in your future, don't screw it up. Beware of large dogs bearing gifts on Friday. A chance meeting with a Scorpio will have you in a rage on the 27th. Stay away from psychic vampires this week.

Cancer The person you have latched onto as your meal ticket will be exiting the picture. Fear not dear Cancer, with some misinformation you could find yourself on easy street again. By mid week the voices in your head will be very persuasive, heed their advice on the 25th. A dark family secret will rear it's transgendered head by Friday.

Taurus If you're not careful those dust bunnies you've been ignoring for so long under the bed will prove to fatal. Clear out the dark corners in your life on the 23rd. Thursday will be an adventure and introduction to Post Traumatic Stress Syndrome. The yellow pages will reveal the answer to a question you've been pondering for some time.

Gemini This week could be the best you've had in years, full of romance, fortune and wonders, it could also be the worst week of your life thus far. Stay flexible and be prepared for anything that comes your way. Remember a positive attitude can only take you so far, Pharmaceuticals can take you the rest of the way.

Leo You will learn a valuable lesson on Wednesday, you should probably write it down. Corn dogs have no place in your life this week. Pay attention to your dreams on the 27th. It would serve you well to read up on the Hanta Virus. Perhaps you and Taurus should pool your resources and hire a cleaning lady.

Virgo Your body is trying to tell you something this week, On Wednesday you had better listen or pay the consequences. An encounter with an old friend on the 22nd will leave you with a sour taste in your mouth, it's thrush. The rest of the week will be smooth sailing for your Sims characters.

Libra Touch base with friends on Monday, but be careful not to touch their bases, they may take it the wrong way. You will find what you have been seeking this week. An old man will call you Sonny Jim on Friday, let him, it will prove to be profitable. Your attempts at astral projection will leave you stranded on another plane.

Scorpio Your fear of plushies, will no longer be unfounded. Now is the time to break out that bear mace you've been hanging on to. Do not mince words on Thursday or you will find yourself in hot water with the powers that be. You will make a connection between two unrelated incidents, this will prove to be embarrassing on a large scale. A foreign gentleman will ask you where the bathrooms are, do not mislead him or you will pay the price.

Sagittarius The planetary alignment suggests that you dear Sagittarius are in for some exciting news. Electrolysis on Wednesday will prove to be a wise investment on Friday. Take time this week to think about the things that you think are important to you, they really aren't. Go ahead and play the lottery this week, you won't win.

Capricorn You will find something that does not belong to you this week. It would be in your favor to keep this a secret for 7 years. You should not remain complacent this week in any aspect of your life. If you see something you want, take it. Beware of people who say they aren't cops.

Aquarius Start planning a trip on Tuesday, but stay away from the water. You will have an overwhelming urge to do good this week, deny this as best you can. Yield to your desires and you will be trampled, to death. Seek advice from your cat this week and it will be smooth sailing. Be cautious of oranges on Saturday.

Pisces Jupiter's alignments suggest that it would serve you well to stay away from drinking establishments this week, and dancers with dirty feet. You will be in for a surprise on Thursday, it's nothing wd-40 and $700 can't fix. This week is the perfect time to start a project, just don't expect to finish it. If you are not careful a bowel resection is in your future.

A man had been having the hots for his neighbor's young Vietnamese wife for a long time. One night he couldn't take it any more and decided to sneak into the neighbor's master bedroom to attack the wife. He got into bed naked and had his hands all over the woman in bed. The woman woke up and started screaming. When the lights came on, it turned out the woman was the hot young wife's old mother visiting from Vietnam.

Ass Ponys: Favorite Albums We Forgot Existed

Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: Ass Ponys, Toastmaster

There are albums out there that we love. Albums we have listened to over and over again. Albums we have forgotten. Albums that for a brief moment were our favorite ever.

If we were to hear a song off one of these albums, we'd go, " hey I know this!!" But wouldn't even be able to name the band. It's a shame and embarrassment that we all experience.

Luckily, these days it's pretty easy to find out the name. Just slap a lyric into your little handheld iphone google search thingamabobber and find out the name.

But what happens if we never hear the song again? Chances are we've lost that music forever.

But sometimes we luck out and the favorite album we forgot about is hiding, buried behind a pile of jumper cables and zip cords in an old truck out in the garage. Fortune lets us find this hidden gem, aka Ass Ponys – Lohio, listen to it and realize how poor our human memory really is and become sad and nostalgic that there is probably a lot of good stuff that we have forgotten about.

Economic or Cruel? Pet Food Alternatives Under Fire

By Electricspatula

CLEVELAND, OH- The effects of a sliding national economy are being felt around the world, with many middle and lower-class, working families finding new ways to fend for themselves. As prices rise from the pump to the grocery store, an unconventional and controversial method for stretching dollars is gaining popularity in low-income areas.

People are finding that it is more economically feasible to feed their animals live prey as opposed to buying canned or bagged food from the grocery store. In fact, the recent pet food scandals have added fuel to this practice, causing many working-class families to turn to animal shelters and rescues for inexpensive alternatives.

Winston, a 7 year old Russian Blue, prepares for his evening meal of two kittens from LIVE FEED.

“It is unacceptable to turn our beloved canine and feline companions into cannibals” says Lucy Metzer, PETA spokeswoman. “This practice is nothing short of abuse.” Douglass Plower, an advocate for LIVE FEED, a local kitten and puppy farm, disagrees. “We are giving folks an economical and highly nutritional method for caring for their pets in these trying times. Most animals, in fact, take to eating their own kind with amazing ease” Plower urges the public to look at the facts. “A can of Friskies can cost upwards of forty-nine cents. Yet, a trip to the right dumpster during kitten season is free, and can provide enough food for days for the average cat or dog.”

Government officials are looking into the practice, but so far, no rulings as to its legality have be made. “Give a cat some cat food, it eats for a day” recites Plower, “Teach a cat cannibalism, it eats for life.”

TNA Impact! Wrestling Review aka How I Paralyzed My Baby Bro

By Toe Fu
September 23, 2008
Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: Toe Fu, wrestling

There was a point in time that I was a total wrestling junkie. I can admit this with no shame in my game because it was in the early 90's and around the same time I was also wearing a Napalm Death t-shirt and masturbating to a pre-self inflicted headshot splattered Savannah. I remember an instance when I was reenacting moves with my younger brother, who was probably around 8 years old at the time. For some reason, all logic escaped my brain and I delivered a pretty solid back-breaker to him. The exact moment his pre-teen spine connected with my bony knee I knew I done fucked up. I stared in horror as he lay on the carpet motionless and sobbing gently. Holy shit, I paralyzed my baby brother. Now I will have to live a life of servitude to my crippled sibling and be subject to daily colostomy bag draining and trying to get him to eat by playing airplane with a spoon. Thanks for the great influence Ric Flair, you albino haired flamerod. Luckily my brother rose to his feet after a few time-freezing moments and I probably ended up just giving him a DDT a half hour later.

I still really have no interest at all in this sport that ranks so high in the pastimes of Midwestern jug blowers. I'm actually convinced these video games are only produced so the wrestling organizations can track the sales trends and target the exact location of their demographic. Why should they pack up the squared circle and bring the road show to someplace like Newark? The locals there are only interested in going to see the new Flo rida- Ignorant as Fuck tour.

On to the game, first you can use the create-a-wrassler function to obviously make the most hideous abomination your mind can conjure up. My dude is a chubby, balding gentleman with a green face and white pupils. His favorite colors are pink and green. Then you basically just get all intimate with other oiled up dudes. The controls are kind of sketchy, so sometimes you want to go into the patented Reverse Dry Hump special move, but you end up just miming the act of Montezuma's Revenge in a public bathroom hover-squat. I'm so uninspired to describe anymore of this grappling game. I wish I could still play Royal Rumble in the arcades, but consoles put them all out of business. That's another rant for another time.

My rating for TNA Impact! Wrestling for the Xbox 360 – 2 homoerotic tales of young men rubbing their nipples together while grabbing each others groins in front of a sold out stadium in Tennessee out of 5.

Hasslehoff Arrested, Puppy Hostages Freed

HOLLYWOOD, CA – David Hasselhoff is at it again.

In a stunt that shocked Knight Rider viewers and animal rights activists alike, David Hasselhoff held two puppies hostage in a failed attempt to avoid a mandatory stint in rehab.

The events unfolded last week at Hasselhoff's sprawling Hollywood estate, as stunned onlookers watched from the streets. "At, first, he was slurring his speech so badly, we thought he said he was going to strangle "puppets" if we didn't leave." reports Officer Jacob Freeman, who was on the scene. "That's when he held up the puppies, and suddenly it clicked. We were pretty happy, though, because the idea of him strangling puppets was pretty unsettling"

Hasselhoff remained in his home for four hours, until former Baywatch Co-Star Pamela Anderson, an animal rights activist, arrived and threw her UGG boots at him, knocking him off balance and forcing him to release the puppies, who were quickly escorted to safety. PETA will be honoring Anderson for her quick thinking during a fund-raiser in Washington in October.

Hasselhoff is set to appear before a judge next month on charges of disorderly conduct.

Speed Racer Actor Soars to Fame; Defends Ninjas

Guys across the country are praising the new DVD/ Blu Ray release Speed Racer for it's colorful display action packed race sequences.

But their ladies have a different take. They're saying, "That monkey's a good actor."

This catch phrase is credited with propelling Speed Racers Simian superstar's to unheard of levels of fame and fortune.

"This guy can't lose!"his agent claims. "Ladies love him."

With assets totaling over 35 billon dollars with just one film under his belt, Fuzzles, the chimp who plays Chim Chim in the movie, certainly doesn't seem to be able to lose.

His quick rise to fame and huge salary puts previous monkey actors like Ronald Reagan's sidekick Bonzo and the infamous Lancelot Link to shame. Hollywood's top actors are taking notice.

Speed Racer co-lead Emile Hirsch has publicly stated that he will not even attempt to match Fuzzles fame, popularity, or income. "That guy's golden. Nobody in Hollywood can touch him these days. You get too close to him and you're going to get burned. That said, he's a really good actor."

Insiders say progeria infectee Paulie Litt who plays Spritle in the movie has a different take. He was recently overheard complaining about Fuzzles in the greenroom of a popular late night show. "That damn guy. I swear my own mother likes him better than me. Freakin monkey's a good actor. Bitch."

Fuzzles isn't just another rising star. He honed his skills acting in dozens of plays ranging from Greek tragedy, Shakespeare and Restoration comedy to modern American and British drama. He took on notable roles ranging from Shakespeare's Othello to the sadistic Nazi dentist Christian Szell in Marathon Man.

Asian fans have recently applauded him after he turned down of the lead role in the upcoming flick Beverly Hills Ninja 2. A vehement ninja supporter and long standing member of Ninja Rights Council, Fuzzles has publicly denounced the movie stating that he will not suport the recent hollywood trend of “degrading ninjas.”

The monkey truly is a good actor.

Speed Racer Star Hospitalized After Attack

Fuzzles Of Speed Racer Fame and Clyde, Clint Eastwood's one time companion and star of Every Which Way But Loose, were involved in a brawl on Wednesday.

The altercation took place at an HSUS fundraiser the two simian stars were attending.

Sources have yet to confirm what started the fight.

One attendee, Deanna Russo, stated that," I think it all started when Clyde made a remark to Fuzzles about being a sell out and wearing clothes. I really think he was just jealous that he hasn't had any real work in like 25 years."

Apparently sources report that Fuzzles fired back calling him "a washed up has-been", this is when the scuffle began.

"Oh it was so brutal. That poor little guy, he was so scared he actually pulled a gun off of one of his security guards, but that giant orangutan was on him before he could do anything," said Gina Carano of Oakland, California.

It took 4 tasers and 12 of Fuzzles security guards to separate the two, but not before Clyde gave Fuzzles a severe bite to his left cheek.

Fuzzles was rushed to the hospital, where he has been listed in stable condition.

One terrified witness to the attack, Nick Young, stated that, "…yeah that other orange monkey, I guess he was a crazed fan just started pounding on Fuzzles. It was horrible. Cliff or Clyde whatever his name was he was acting like an animal, just totally out of control, you know? He was frothing at the mouth and stuff."

Clyde was euthanized following the incident and his head was removed to test for rabies.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Fuzzles doctors aren't taking any chances and neither are his agents, they started the multimillion dollar star on a rabies treatment immediately.

Fans have been gathering outside the hospital with flowers since he was rushed there yesterday afternoon.

No determination has been made yet as to whether Clyde was suffering from rabies or just jealous rage.

Perfume: Supersniffer Snuffs Senoritas

By EMToast

Perfume: The Story of a Murderer. A movie about a creepy sniffling baby who grows up to be a creepy sniffling guy. This is the kind of movie that you hear about and then just kind of forget. If you're a guy, chances are a movie entitled Perfume:The Story of a Murderer probably isn't all that appealing. I nearly skipped it myself until I was reminded that it's a movie about a guy who is trying to make the perfect perfume – out of virgins.

Note to the ladies: Don't wear too much perfume. It stinks and gives me a headache. And at least make sure it's a nice smelling perfume or it's all over. Here's an example. One of my girl friends had a friend who I thought was cute. I kept maliciously joking with my friend that I was going to knock up her friend. This friend did not want me going near her friend who seemed to me to be damn near puritanical status. Anyway somehow I got her number, I think I tricked my friend into giving it to me somehow and managed to set up the date I was looking forward to it. I stopped at her house to pick her up. As she got into the car, her smokey scented perfume hit me. This wasn't cigarette smoke, this was perfume. Heavy smoked salmon scented perfume. My sense of smell barely exists, so believe me it was some strong stuff. From this point forward the date was ruined. I went through the motions of the date, but that scent was such a turn off that it was the last time I ever took her out.

Back to the movie.

Things I liked: Accidental suffocation, mass murders +12, tons of various deaths and executions, X-men caliber super sniffer, nudity, dark ages push up dresses, perfume messiahs, building collapse,

cannibalism

Things I learned: You can't extract perfume scent from cats, copper, or glass. If you live in a stone building, don't ignore personal earthquakes. Dustin Hoffman knows a lot about making perfume. It takes a lot of work to extract essential oils from things. France is dirty.

Things I disliked: Feeling like I could actually extract essential oils and create my own 12 note perfume. White wigs and powder

All in all it was a great flick. I give it 4 out of 5 toasts with 3 pieces of half cooked bacon on the side.

Horrorscopes for the Week of September 27th

By bixby
September 29, 2008
Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: Bixby, Weekly Horrorscope

ARIES- People are going to hate your guts this week, and it might have something to do with the things hovering around Uranus. This week will prove to be lonely; you may as well be living in a crater on the moon. Take heart and buck up little Aries. Don't take your love to town just yet, unless you plan on checking driver's licenses. Be on the look out for people who are not what they say they are and dogs that eat lipgloss.

TAURUS- A bad case of schistosomiasi has you wanting more out of life. On Thursday make the most of your situation; think about a collaboration of some kind with your parasitic blood buddies. A symbiotic relationship where you can both benefit could be the best thing that's ever happened to you, so live it up X-files style. Take precautions so that you don't get a case of pubic lizards to go with that schistosomiasi.

GEMINI- Something is in retrograde this week and it just might be your luck. Beware of flaming genitals somewhere around the 30th. It would be in your best interest to stay home this week and do some thinking. Even though you're in astrological quarantine it doesn't mean you can't call up Dominoes and befriend the delivery guy. As everything around you takes a turn for the worse you might be heard saying, "Goddamn that fucking retrograding mercury."

CANCER- A communication break down will occur this week. My dear crustacean, make sure that you are nowhere to be found on Friday. The stars will be working their magic on the 2nd, do not decline a white rice pedicure from a homeless man or you will throw everything off kilter. Perhaps you should buy some scratch offs this week, or maybe not, either way it just doesn't matter. You will discover a snake washing baby.

LEO- Little lion, you will get the chance to show off your skills this week, unfortunately they will be sub-par. You will play Wizards of War on Tuesday and suffer a seizure. Your third house is totally screwed up from Mercury's retrograde so keep your trap shut , because nobody wants to hear your mouth. Just remember, keep your thumbs up buddy. You will try to trick someone into accepting baby hedgehogs as currency, it works.

VIRGO- Don't go making plans for Michaelmas that you have no intentions of keeping. Free drink syndrome will have you feeling down this week. You should try a British accent on Wednesday, it might just get you somewhere. You will have an opportunity to try out the Heimlich maneuver, even if it is unwarranted. Bring an extra pair of pants with you on Saturday, they will come in handy. You will end up apologizing for something this week

LIBRA- Don't let the situation at hand dictate your future. If you own a dog, now is the time when he will reveal he is converting to Judaism. On Wednesday you will degrade a ninja and pay the consequences. This is the time to shine in the entertainment industry, all those drunken nights of karaoke embarrassing yourself in front of tens of fifteens of people have not been in vain.

SCORPIO- Dear little Scorpio, your carnivorous arthropod nature will surface this week, try not to scare too many people. Now is the time to get rid of all that porn you've been hording on your computer. On Thursday you will discover a secret level in something you've been playing at for many years. Your dreams will be plagued by space cat, pay attention he is telling you something important.

CAPRICORN- Get out there and do something this week, switch things up a little. Think about trading in Halo for some Mortal Kombat this week. You will become an expert in something on Friday, but only in your own mind. Watch out for gossipers this week, they want to get the dirt on you. You should probably quit smoking this week, it has gotten way out of hand.

SAGITARIUS- Your guts are churning on Monday is it that rancid Kung-Pow you had over the weekend, or is it your conscience? Let it all out dear Sagittarius, you really have no choice in the matter so just go with the flow. This week is not the time to be starting up new things, it's not the time to be finishing up old things either. Now is the time to sit and do nothing. Beware of werewolf contact wearing celebrities bearing gifts of herpes this week.

AQUARIUS- Matt Damon has nothing on you this week. Don't let your daydreaming trip you up in the office this week. The possibility of getting carjacked this week is great, you might want to think about mass transit starting on Wednesday. A sever groping at the back of a bus is in your future. Make sure you keep your pockets filled with kittens on Friday.

PISCES- Dear little fishy you will find it easy to be with people this week, and that's not just because the people you surround yourself with are easy. Tell yourself you are a winner and you will start believing it soon enough. Attend a sporting event this Tuesday, you will start a trend when you shout " Show us your skeleton!" from the stands.

Man Kicks Wife In Box, Threatens to Glue Her Shut

A woman filed for divorce claiming her husband forces her to have sex with him even when she does not want to. He wouldn't give her any money and he would steal money from her and on top of it he would even beat up his mother in law who comes to clean their house for free.

One night the woman went out with friends and came home late. The husband beat her up, tried to suffocate her, he even took lipstick and drew all over her face. He and kicked her in the groins and threatened to super glue her shut so she can never have sex with anybody else again if she says no.

He would even have sex with her in front of their 1yr old boy. The Woman claims that their boy started doing these weird moves because the husband forced her to have sex in front of their kid and that the boy was imitating his father's moves.

The judge granted the divorce.

Weirdo Tells Neighbor's Wife to Tighten Love Muscle, Breastfeed

By French Toast
September 30, 2008

Fifty two year old weirdo has been eyeing his neighbor's 26 yr old hot wife who just had a baby. He would casually say, "you should breast feed so your breasts would be big and that fill up your blouses nicely" or "you should learn to tighten up your muscle". He even tried to accidentally brush over the wife's chest with his shoulder to feel her up. The husband caught it and filed a complaint to the local police. Charges are pending investigation.

I think that it is definately very common. Lots of men like boys feet, but it is really taboo to mention it. People don't say anything because they don't want to be laughed at. It is kind of funny to think about. I'm a big beefy masculine guy and I like a small teenaged boy to dominate me with his feet and make me suck his toes. Its usually boys who want to be bullies but are too short or small who usually are happy when I tell them they can dominate me. They probably would be unfulfilled otherwise. I would be. So we each serve a function for the other.

This cartoon on the article has been drawn by a pervert mind,as the boy's testicles are intentionally highlighted in the sketch.
unfortunately most men are very excited about younger boys feet,the way I see it,they are also excited about other parts of the boys but because of law and fear of being detected they show interest in feet which is considered "non sexual" organ and so toleratable.

just search youtube words “young boy stinky feet” etc and you’ll be shocked by amount of young boy feet fetish videos..boys themselves are sometimes encouraging men with their seducing videos..some even show their erected penis undernetah short and wear panties while they are showing their smelly feet..something should be done to stop this madness.

Hey Flipper, what strange fetishes do you have? Don't tell me you're all "vanilla" and do only missionary style and don't get off on different things "out of the norm".
Don't pass judgement on people you don't know and a fetish you know nothing about.
Yes, I too love feet, but I wouldn't pass judgement on someone who enjoys licking snatch, even though I would never do it.

Captain Nemo

March 30, 2011

Vanilla is such a dismissive term.
Sure, when I was in the mood I've done some pretty wild stuff (at least I thought it was wild), but I am thankful that all my desires are not focused on some totally nonsexual appendage.
Girls will let you do anything you want to them if they like you, but I'm glad I don't have to freak them out by pressuring them into submitting to some bizarre fetish of mine, although I did go through a phase where I was fascinated with bellybuttons.
Thankfully all that madness is behind me now.

Jude

January 20, 2011

Well, smelling feet is not like having sex or molesting someone, is it? Millions of people have a foot fetish. What is wrong is forcing someone to do this, and tio force a teen to do this for "benefits" is very wrong. But if the teen enjoyed it, since it is not sex, I don't see the harm in it. As I said, millions and millions of people have a foot fetish.

When I was 9 I ‘d visit my cousin’s, who by then was 13 y.o. He ‘d take every opportunity to take my shoes off. At the beginning I really enjoyed it: walking around and messing in socks was fun, but slowly it turned into a strange practice: he made me lie down and started sniffing my socked feet, he also used to tickled my feet and then he started crushing them hard. Sometimes he hurt my feet.
I never said a word to anybody but now when I think about it, I realise that was freak and when I read this story I felt sick!

Is your Dad still around? Have you confronted him? How has the abuse affected you as an adult? I'd like a serious take.

BIG Dave

August 21, 2011

Sorry, I guess I got a bit upset and over dramatic didn't I.
Well, it started when I was quite young – the first time I was around 8 years old. He used to hit me a lot (with a slipper mainly). Then it came to him ordering me to lay on the floor, him sat over me on a chair…his big boot down on my chest. He's take the boot off and hold it over my face, then socked foot in my face, sock off – sometimes stuffed into my mouth, then his size 11 foot in my face. He didn't say a thing….just watched as I struggled to breath under his foot. This was done with both feet eventually made to kiss and then lick them, the only time he spoke was to tell me to kiss or lick. He'd push his foot in my mouth – making me cry, which he seemed to like. I think that was the aim really.

Eventually, as I got older, I'd be tied up naked some times, stomped on with bare feet and on three occasions he'd bring home two other men – and those punishments were very long….and particularly horrible.
I didn't speak to him for over 20 years. It was my mum that kept going on about getting in touch (my parents are young – only 60, I'm 41 now)….so eventually I made the first move. Spent a couple of christmases with him, and haven't spoken to him now for a couple of years.
Sad really, I'm still not sure why he chose that type of punishment to be honest.

Toastmaster

August 21, 2011

It's understandable considering some of the comments on here. Be warned, there will likely be more.

That's a really horrible story. You're father sounds like he was a real monster.

So how do you feel about men's or women's feet now as an adult? Do you like them or totally avoid them?

I'm guessing some of the commenters on here would like to receive this type of abuse as adults, but doubt they went through what you did as a boy. What do you think about it?

May 14, 2015

Big Dave is fucking with you. He wasn't abused. He is basically writing foot porn erotica. I know this be of certain words- his big size 11's… An abuse victim wouldn't use that terminology.

BIG Dave

August 21, 2011

This is the worse part to talk about – because the other men he brought home with him would do things to me get me aroused while I had a foot in my face, so I've had to live with the guilt of that as well. And the one time I did say anything I had my legs and feet beaten with a plastic tennis racket and a slipper while they watched….so I learned early on to keep my mouth shut and endure it! and these were big strong men we are talking about here….who would wear socks for football/running/gym for days/weeks to make me suffer….

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

To be honest I grew up thinking I was a terrible person who deserved this type of treatment (although I was never really sure what I'd done to deserve it).

So I almost think its "normal". I've been under the feet of men in adult hood because they like it, but I've ended up really angry after wards….

Ronaldo

August 21, 2011

Damn Dave, your dad is one fucked up dude.
I just don't understand why your mother allowed or put up with that.

BIG Dave

August 21, 2011

It was always when my mum was out or away, and even when she went into hospital….for three whole weeks I had to take the punishment from him and the two other guys every single night when they arrived back from work and then again when they got in after the pub…

There was always some excuse to cover up bruises. I remember he stomped on my chest so hard that he bruised me, he rammed his foot so hard into my mouth that he split my lip too. One of the other guys also trod on my face with boots on giving me a black eye…..I was told to say the usual "I got into a fight, or I fell out of a tree" routine to my mum….

BIG Dave

August 21, 2011

I can still vividly see there faces grinning and laughing looking down at me as I am welling up with tears with my dads foot in my face…or one of theres…if you can try and imagine, my father sat directly over me, and the other two sat either side of me. Me naked, tied up – not a hope in hell of getting away. It was horrible, laying there and waiting for it to begin……

Ronaldo

August 21, 2011

These guys were demented sociopaths, serial killer types.
I don't care how drunk you are or what drugs you are on, if you enjoy doing that kind of thing to anybody, especially children, and your OWN children, man, you just need a brainectomy or something.
Too bad you could'nt have ran away and lived with another relative or friend and gotten away from that sadistic insanity.
I was abused too, so I feel for ya, but geez, I had it really fuckin cush compared to you.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Have you receieved any kind of therapy? I can tell all this still upsets you (how could it not).
Oh well, you sound pretty together despite everything, keep on truckin'!

BIG Dave

August 21, 2011

I did run away twice…..but…..I really, really paid for it!

My father drank a lot…not that it excuses anything, because I don't ever remember him being drunk while doing any of this….but my mum said years later that he used to really be violent towards her – even knocking her teeth out!!

I've had tons of therapy – I've even trained as a therapist now….I think I must have had ever type of therapy out there….suffered severe depression, I have Epilepsy which docs said was brought on by stress….all sorts of things…..

But….I don't drink, and my dad drinks a whole bottle of whisky to start the day….so at least I am now in control….I look at it that way now.

BIG Dave

August 21, 2011

He was always angry, so he must have been a very very unhappy person.

I spent years trying to be the son I thought he wanted me to be…..but it was never enough, and I was always ridiculed and humiliated back into my place….

Ronaldo

August 21, 2011

People are a trip. All kinds out there, I know, but it never ceases to amaze me how messed up some people are.
Think your father was similarly abused?
And whats the deal with his buddies joining in on this?
Is that like some weird cultural thing?
Weird stuff.

BIG Dave

August 23, 2011

Well, I know for sure that his father was a violent drunk. I know that much.

His buddies joining in was purely to make sure that I knew my place and that I suffered maximum humiliation. Thats my take on it…..

BIG Dave

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

August 23, 2011

These were big, muscular, scary guys too….I spent most of my childhood in fear to be honest….mainly fear they would take it further (sexually), but thankfully that never happened. The only thing they ever did was rub my nipples while one of them had a bare foot in my face, then laugh or question me as to why I was hard…..
Took a lot of therapy to learn that it wasn't my fault.

BIG Dave

August 23, 2011

It would also explain why I trained in counselling…

Toe Fu Interviews 30 Rock's Judah Friedlander

By EMToast
October 2, 2008
Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: Toe Fu

Our own Toe Fu's making a name for himself over at the-minusworld.com. He just scored a great interview with 30 Rock's Judah Friedlander. Check it out HERE and make sure you post a comment for him over there while you're at it.

Toe Fu on October 2nd, 2008

Judah Friedlander rules. Sporting his signature customized hats, super-sized corrective lenses, and deadpan delivery, this comedian always comes correct. Judah can not only be spotted in major film roles like American Splendor, Zoolander, Meet Dave, and Date Movie, but also in quality t.v. shows including Curb Your Enthusiasm, Flight of the Conchords, and cult favorite Wonder Showzen. He can also be seen dropping farcible quips on pop culture in Best Week Ever and also on one of the last remaining survivors of the genuinely funny sitcom, 30 Rock. Oh, and do yourself a solid and check out his stand up when he's in your area. Judah was kind enough to take the time to answer some questions for us and chat about some retro gaming.

What was the first console you had growing up? What are some of your favorite and most hated games out of the old school?

We had some kind of Magnavox, I forget which one. It was your basic 4 versions of Pong game. It was great and Pong is still great. Favorites – I'll list some not as well known favorites. Zookeeper, Kangaroo, Popeye, Rolling Thunder, and if you were a MAN…it was all about Defender. Hated games: I'll say Mappy just because it pisses off my friend. DigDug is not bad, just not the greatest. Most of the auto racing and sports ones suck. Video games are about spaceships and beating up aliens & monsters – not racing cars or running.

Here at the The Minus World, we appreciate and celebrate your status as World Champion. Any new victories you would like to announce? Do you hold title status in any videogames?

I have new victories on a daily basis. Just got banned from Japan for beating everyone in their country in ping pong. So they banned me. To get back at them, I took the Japan National Pom Pom Squad with me.

I hold the world record for every pre-1988 video arcade game. Except for car racing and sports games. I don't play those on video, I do them for real. I actually broke the world records for both Defender & Q-bert at the same time. which means i was playing both games at the same time & still broke world records for both. I'm the only person to even attempt that.

Were you a dweller of the arcades, and if so, have you ever had any creepy experiences in them? I used to have this guy with a melted face named MC Stardust try to sell me mescaline and rush every weekend. It was the 80's and sadly I don't think they make rush anymore (true story.)

Arcades were almost always dangerous, and even if they weren't dangerous, it was very stressful. You'd be playing a game with your one quarter, all of a sudden people come up while you're playing, trash talk, put their quarters up on the ledge of the machine or the edge of the screen of the game that you're playing to signal that they're next . Sometimes there would be 7 quarters stacked up on your game, which means when your game is over, you wont be able to play again for 7 more games and someone might bump you accidentally or on purpose. And there were no pause buttons or reset buttons. All you had was that one game on that one quarter. And you couldn't continue the game when the game was over either. And when you played, you were standing, with your back and sides open to everyone – so you really were not in a good fighting position if someone wanted to mess with you. But, yes, walking into an arcade was always exciting – because of all the video games – but also because of the danger element.

How would you pitch a reality show about avid/addicted video gamers? Don't worry, we won't steal your ideas and sell them to fuel our rampant alcoholism.

I don't know. I don't think I've ever pitched a show. I would recommend to pitch a horrible show and not a quality one because you'll have a better chance of it getting sold.

The Uncanny Valley episode of 30 Rock was an instant classic thanks to your explanation of it to Tracy Morgan as he attempts to make the world's first pornographic video game. You said it best in your attempt to dissuade him with "History's greatest perverts have tried: Walt Disney, Larry Flynt, the Japanese. But they can't do it because of the uncanny valley." Any thoughts on porn related video games?

I agree with the uncanny valley concept and it applies to many movies that use CGI. Many times it just does not work and it's just annoying and creepy. I'm working on some paintings that are based on the porno videogame concept. I'll have them on my website when they're done.

Have any of your working relationships spawned an online gaming friendship? Have you ever played Larry David in Call of Duty 4? Sniped Bret or Jemaine in Team Fortress?

Unfortunately, I have not formed any video game friendships from working with people in the entertainment industry. The closest thing was playing Ms. Pacman with a fast chip that used to be located in the bar downstairs from the Boston Comedy Club in NYC. Both the club & bar are now closed. Me & my friend Godfrey (a comic) were good – everyone else sucked.

What's your method to get a Nintendo Entertainment System cartridge to work? I use the blow and beg technique.

You also have to shake it, and if that doesn't work, you just give your little brother a wedgie and call him names. It doesn't fix the cartridge, but you do feel better.

I'm a little naive to show business, can you explain to me why a funny as fuck, smart show like 30 Rock was at one time threatened with cancellation while painful shows like Two and a Half Men carry on with success? The same thing happens with video games when a low budget Puppy simulator outsells everything else. This shit blows my mind.

Most people like crap.

If a Judah Friedlander-World Champion game was in development, what kind of game would it be and what would be the objective?

I already have my own video game in the works. Whoever chooses to be ME in the videogame wins every fight and bangs all the hot chicks afterwards. If you choose to be anyone else, you'll lose. I always win.

Required by journalistic law: desert island question. What movie, video game, book and flavor fruit-rollup would you want to be stuck with?

Starship Troopers, Moon Patrol, the novelization of The Wizard, & strawberry.

I've been excited and on the lookout for your upcoming projects Full Grown Men, The Wrestler, and of course 30 Rock.. any info on these releases or anything else you would like to plug?

Full Grown Men on DVD later this year or early next year. The Wrestler later this year. FEAST 2:

Since the Juday Frielander interview is gone, I was thinking, how about I do an interview with you. What do you say SJ? Once we're done, it can be a feature story.

This site isn't going anywhere as long as I'm around.

sickjunior

June 17, 2010

uh, well, no one would believe my story, but hell, wouldn't hurt to get the word out, i guess.
actually i was going to ask if you could use any articles.
as for the site, all i can say is 'diet and exersize'.

sickjunior

June 17, 2010

at any rate it remains to be seen if they will allow you to interview me or at least post it.

Toastmaster

June 17, 2010

Ok, well let's start in. We'll try o get into a few different areas. My only request is to keep the answers to a reasonable length.

Thanks for agreeing to the interview. Who do you think wouldn't allow me to interview you or post you. Does this have anything to do with "Murder by Media"?

sickjunior

June 17, 2010

yes. absolutely. they've been manipulating and broadcasting my life for at least 35 years, by my estimate, possibly my entire life. at anyrate, strange things have always been going on since i can remember.
they've been trying to strand me here in theBbay Area for over 25 years. now that they've succeeded they will not let me go.
they don't want me to make any statements or form any relationships in the outside world that they don't control.
who are these people? they are the entertainment media. they are your masters, the harbingers of the coming corperate dictatorship.
why me? good question. because i'm so entertaining i suppose.
i know it sounds crazy, but i think its supposed to.

sickjunior

in fact i will have to weigh my words more carefully or i'll sound like just another schizophrenic, and not what i really am, the world's child, the guy everybody loves to hate.

Toastmaster

June 17, 2010

One of the things we can accomplish here is to allow you to get your story out. The entertainment media has no hold over EMToast.

1. How have the entertainment media been manipulating and broadcasting your life.

2. How have they stranded you?

3. How do they control your statements and relationships.

sickjunior

1. they have cameras and microphones in my room, they had them in my car, and they have them at my work. since people are always giving me their old clothes i have no doubts theyre in there as well, as well as tracking devices.
as to how they've been manipulating and keeping tabs on me socially, every aquaintence and girlfriend i've had has been working for them. remember 'Total recall' when arnold starts to remember his mission, and his wife and friends try to kill him because they are working for the agency? i had a similar experience when i finally figured out what had been going on.
2. this time when they got me up here they made sure i cant leave. the propaganda being broadcast against me is so inflamatory now that i cant make ANY friends, no one will hire me, or do a damned thing for me. i have a part time one day a week job at a liquor store a few towns over and i am lucky to have even that. without friends or money i'm pretty stuck, stuck and fucked. they monitor my phone calls and online activity and likely tamper with my maiil too, so i can't, like, strike up a long distance romance or something and get away that way.
3. because they control my internet activity they can control who i can communicate with. also, they keep sending me these women who like 'fall in love' with me after a week or two. this has been going on for over 20 years now. surely you can see the genius in that, these women aren't interested in me, they just want to be part of this project. the one before last got me heavily involved with meth and really messed me up that way. you know most chicks will do anything to be on TV. i wish they'd send another though. its been a while and i'm pretty horny. (ha ha) in my late teens they kept sending me guys. i think they wanted me to be gay, but i just wasnt interested.
also they have sent me lots of people preaching white supremecy. i think its safe to say they wanted me to be a nazi, but although i do think its a shame the white race is dying,

i'm totally nonviolent and don't like picking on people.
i've always been very suspicious of these neonazis. one had a sister who was jewish. thats bound to make you wonder right there.
i have much more to say on all the previous heads, but i am trying to keep it as short as i can.

sickjunior

i dont feel i need to convince people this is real as i'm sure most people already know about it, at least here on the west coast. i just want people to know that i'm really a loveable guy, and not the monster they see on the screen after the manipulating and editing.

Toastmaster

June 17, 2010

Thanks for trying to keep them brief. We need to keep it digestible.

4. You'll have to forgive me as an East Coaster, but I've never heard anything about this. Have you been on Television or Movies? Where has the media portrayed you in a bad light?

5. Would we know any of the girls they sent to you? Did any of them go on to become famous?

6. For what purpose do you believe the media is doing this to you? What do they get out of it?

sickjunior

maybe i should explain that. keep in mind they had me on meth a number of years, and you know how charming that can make you. also, the women i was with would deliberately push my buttons while i was in stressful situations to make me blow my stack. they did this several times. thats just a couple ways they have used.

sickjunior

June 17, 2010

4. it is, at present at least, a long running cable television show on Community Access Television. they have several stations in california, especially in the bat are. i believe its channel 29 san francisco. i hired a P.I. to find this stuff out, but he ripped me off and told me i was nuts. so much for his ethics. i then did my own investigation and found out these facts. the woman i used to live with, in her basement, Dana Brownfield, worked at the Irvine Foundation onb Market St. in S.F. (dont worry, she wont dare sue you), C.A.T. channel 29 is down the street from where she worked. She was head of multimedia communications for that 'non profit', and frequently put together programing that aired on that station. again, i'l keep it short.

5. many of the women i was with went on to high paying jobs i dont think they really deserved, but it was like a reward or something. some work in entertainment, not as actresses though, one seems to have gotten several vacations out of it, two to europe, and a college education. but what do i get? me, the fuckin star? nada. just a lot of grief and despair.

6. i know its kinda weird, but its my present theory that i'm being prepared as some kind of sacrafice. i believe the show generates charitable revenue to help poor black kids go to college. i have reasons for believing everything i have stated, so if you think its impoirtant to give my reasons, just ask. i've had to figure this all out with deductive reasoning alone, oftentimes i'm working with scanty evidence, but i've done the best i can.

i m may be gone for 90 minutes or so. i'm expecting company. missionaries from the mormon church actually.

Toastmaster

June 17, 2010

7. Let me understand. There is a cable show that you are on? Do you appear willingly or is this hidden camera stuff. Can we know the name of the show, maybe see some youtube clips about you?

8. Tell us more about this sacrifice? Do you believe you will be killed on TV to generate charitable revenue?

9. I think you could list a few of the top reasons you have come up with for all this happening. I know it's tough to come up with real answers when you are still looking for them yourself.

10. Do you fear that EMToast will become the victim of some type of media retribution after we publish your story?

sickjunior

oh, and aside from the cable show, which seems to run 24 hrs these days, theres also a web site where you can read all my emails and there are also links to places i am online, and a radio show where they used to broadcast my psychiatric sessions.

this whole thing has been flourishing without my consent, knowledge or permission for decades. hopefully i will live long enough to sue these bastards back to the stoneage, but local lawyers hang up on me the second they hear my voice.
anyway, if you think of any more questions, write them down. i will return to answer all in a bit!

sickjunior

i dont know the name of the show, web address of the website, or which radio station the radio broadcast was on. naturally the people watching this garbage in my building put on music during the station breaks so i can not hear any of that information. i am only guessing the channel based on the reasons i have given. it may very well NOT be channel 29, although I am pretty sure it is, but i am confident it is community access television. criminal asshole television i calls it. C.A.T., which is why i despise cat people. i generally steer clear of people with cats on their avatars. usually disagreaable bastards anyway.
i know about the website for the reasons you may recall from reading my blog, remember the guy reading my emails in the S.F. mental hospital?
as for the radio show, it seemed everybody knew and was discussing what i talked about in therapy on the busses and in the bart, and people were stopping by my doctor's office when i was waiting to be seen and asking me what time my appointment was, then leaving. my doctor had no idea who they were. i think its because they heard my sessions on the radio, knew what time they were, and wanted to see what i looked like. also my doctor used to drive me to the bart station after our meeting. he always fiddled with the radio knobs before we left, then tried to engage me in controversial topics of conversation. obviously he was taping or transmitting it. i'm sure he had a set up in his office too, but it didn't require him to mess with it in front of me.

before i finally confirmed that i was a big star i used to have terrible depression, and, despite this, or because of it, this doctor showed me where in his office he concealed a loaded gun. i mean, WTF!? that right there shows you the ethics of these people.

sickjunior

for a while people were sending me links to youtube. these were people i did not know. they very well may have been links to clips from the show, but, as always, my computer was messed up and i could not view the clips. it was on my myspace account. i should go back and see if those emails are there. they may provide some evidence even if the links no longer work.

again, this whole thing has always been covert. i always had a strange fantasy ever since i was little, that i was being broadcast on tv, maybe it was an intuition. i dunno. i thought for years that i was either crazy or that God was fucking with me, but when i finally heard this show, suddenly everything in my life made sense for the first time and i felt perfectly sane, till i found out there was nothing i could do about it, then i felt crazier than ever.

as for my being killed, thats always a paranoid concern of mine. but realistically, if i die, the show ends, and, as we know, the show MUST go on. i worry that i may be in danger now that i've discovered the truth and have threatened to pull a houdini and show up in another town in another part of the country, get a lawyer and get these sunzabitches, but again, they know what a creature of habit i am (they've been studying me all my life) so i doubt they take me very seriously.

weird as it may sound to you, because of this show i honestly believe i can do whatever the hell i want and get away with it because the producers of the show will compensate my victims financially. i know because it has happened before, although i did not know it at the time. i don't take advantage of this fact because now i'm afraid that if they really wanna get me they will just cancel the show and people, and maybe even the police, will come after me and i'll have to fend for myself. so no thefts, rapes or homicides for me, thank you. actually, i shouldn't make jokes like that. i believe par of the reason everybody hates me is my sick sense of humor. nothing sacred for me.

sickjunior

i know i'm skipping around here, but to answer #10 while its on my mind, no, i do not think your website is in any danger, they are not concerned about my publicity as they feel they have complete control over that, people not familiar with it will think i'm crazy, and those who know its true hate me from the footage they've seen of me so they don't give a shit about my rights. they should though, because i'm only the beginning. damn you warhol and your 15 minutes of miserable fame!

the only thing they worry about is my making any real money, because then i'd be a threat to them!
keep in mind they did alow me an art career for a short space of time. i showed with robert williams, the pizz, bad otis link, and others of that scene (and mine was the weirdest work there!). i was also in small magazines. Flipside twice, Spazz and Noho, which were two local magazines in the san fernando valley, and exclectic, which i'm sure was one of theres. it had the worst layout i'd ever seen. these people have lots of disposable income. i still have a box of promotional copies of the isseu that featured me. i was even invited to a big party of theres which my intuition warned me not to attend as it was in the very area that 'Cat' lived. Cat was supposedly dana's boyfriend, he was always over messing with her computer, allegedly. although his name was given to me as Catelen, i believe this was a joke of theirs as i really think he worked for C.A.T. and set up many of the hidden microphones and cameras which i know were situated in my room, computer and car. he was a class A jerk. i hated the guy, and the feeling was mutual. besides, dana was an old girlfriend of mine and i am convinced she was in fact a lesbian anyway.
anyway, i never turned a profit on my work. i had to matt and frame all my own work, very detailed pen and ink pieces that took on the average of 100 hours to produce, and the gallery, Galery X in Hollywood, took 60% of the selling price. I never sold anything for over $350, so i always actually lost money.

reasons for all this? naturally i puzzle over that extensively. sometimes i think i must have pissed off some stupidly rich people, likely Jews, who are big in media. but it has been going on since i was a child. perhaps my grandfather gave permission for this show when i was young. i was a bit of a handfull, and the idea that he would be able to materially profit off of me may have appealed to him. someone has suggested that maybe my drug addict mother may have sold me to a television station. although this scenario would make an exellent story, it seems to me unlikely. i do plan on writing a book about this as i believe i am the only person in human history to have been persecuted thus. its a story that needs to be told so that, hopefully i will be the last. but, since these peoiple are media bigshots the chances of it being published while i am alive are slim. curious aside, many people actively encourage me to keep making art even though they have no interest in owning any. “every part of the buffalo”, i bet they plan on making money off my art after i am dead. they have certainly laid the groundwork for my post mortem fame, which, although cool from an art history standpoint, does me no material good while i am alive.

also i have inherited badly damaged manuscripts from a great writer who was once a neighbor of mine, Germinicus Fink, who died of an amphteamine overdose in the mid 90’s, which i intend to fill out and complete. again, i doubt i will ever be able to publish them. he is a voice that deserves to be heard. sort of a shame that making it so has devolved upon me considering my unenviable circumstances.

sickjunior

again, back to how i have been manipulated over the years, they got me involved with drugs big time, and, to a lesser extent, fascist politics. they tried to get me involved in homosexuality, and the heterosexula S&M scene, which, although i was naturally curious, never held any kind of ovewhelming appeal to me. I strongly suspect they have been documenting my sex life. funny how all my girlfriends encouraged me towards strange (to me at least) sexual practices and wanted me to always talk dirty to them. also, whenever we got hotel rooms, it was always the same room and when we checked out, the hotel keepers always looked and behaved towards me in the most curious of ways. they’ve filmed me doing all kinds of stuff that even i, who have long since resigned myself to the fact that i have NO privacy, blush to think about everyone seeing.

sickjunior

as for the ‘sacrafice’, its “give a dog a bad name and hang him”. people have been, over the years, conditioned to despise me. I have been tarred with many stigmatised epithets. they’ve gone out of their way to make sure i represent everything our PC society hates, misogyny, racism, drug addiction, selfishness, dishonesty, you name it. maybe they feel it would be the feel good show of the century if i am raped and murdered by deranged blacks. but again, since it would terminate what must likely be a money making machine this may be my own paranoia. i hope so.
clearly they spend way too much money and effort for all this to be a labor of love. i support way too many peoiple simply by living. plus there are all the pathetic losers who LIVE for this beastly show.

sickjunior

i find it intersting, and also sad and typical of human nature, that not more people feel bad about how this show has twisted me over the years. talk about a glass ceiling. nobody could live through something like this and it NOT affect them in profound and personal ways.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

i have encountered some women who were obviously sympathetic, but they were clearly afraid to get involved.

sickjunior

also i have been showered with answering machine phones as gifts over the years. naturally i have gotten rid of all of them, for all the good it will do me.
oh, and get this, one night my neighbors were listening to the Micheal Savage show, which is weird right there as i live in government subsidized housing. dana was on this damned show. i couldn't hear much of it but that asshole (a walking nazi antisemetic poster in my opinion) was on and on about 'white trash' throughout the show. people on public transit were using the word frequently within my earshot too for a while, till i published a blog explaining how the term was overtly racist in and of itself as it implies that if a 'white person' isn't all he thinks he should be, he has no one but himself to blame, while for darker people it should just be expected. that word sure dried up in a hurry around berkely i can tell you!

sickjunior

i think i've aswered everything satisfactorily for now. tomorrow i'm at work all day and wont be home till like 9:15ph pst.

sickjunior

June 18, 2010

i cant help but lament that only i could possibly get myself in a bizarre situation like this. nothing like this has happened to anyone else to my knowledge.
i only pray it will end well. no middle ground, its either "GET RICH OR DIE!"

sickjunior

June 18, 2010

another aside. it is because of this infernal exploitation that i have never married and started a family. it is also why i never aggressively pursued sexual conquests, aside from the fact women came after me usually, i could never trust anyone, especially women, because i always felt they were keeping big secrets from me, so trust was always a major stumbling block for me. i felt bad for years that i could never get REALLY close to anyone. now that i know why its no wonder. ironic how my 'fame' has actually prevented

me from enjoying my life to the fullest. but again, this was never intended to benefit me. i have been made an unwitting tool by designing people with wicked intentions. talk about a wasted life. pisses me off when people say stuff like 'how watching me ruin my life puts their own in perspective'. that only goes to show what brain washed hate zombies they are. i never had a chance even to ruin my life. my life has never been my own. but everyone goes out of their way to do any little chickenshit thing they can to mess me up. social workers have deliberately sabotaged my education and vocational rehabilitation, cashiers intentionally pass me counterfeit bills frequently and short change me, and i dont even want to go into what all the losers in my building put me through on a daily basis. all this stuff was created and transmitted without my knowledge or consent, yet i am neverendingly being punished for it. i know life aint fair, but DAMN!!

Toastmaster

sickjunior

June 18, 2010

maybe this will finally bring me some help. my neighbors were really mad last night and people were having loud arguments last night, worse than usual, and people are ignoring me and sending me viruses on fb. thats out of the ordinary so i take it as a good sign. they dont like to see ANY changes in my life, those petty bastards!

sickjunior

gotta hand it to these media dinks, they really know how to write a trashy good show. if i had went for everything they've thrown my way i'd be a gay nazi with a serious drug habit living in Berkeley. NOW THATS ENTERTAINMENT!!

Toastmaster

June 18, 2010

I think this EMToast interview just might bring those media bastards to their knees.

11. Do you ever feel like maybe you were meant to be a cannibal or a vampire. Sometimes when I look at the side of a pretty girl with one of those belly shirts I think that meat probably tastes really good. Did you ever get that feeling?

12. How about ghosts. I've seen a few in my day. Got any real ghost stories?

sickjunior

ok. has somebody gotten to you and enticed you to make light of all this? i can tell from the tone of a lot of these questions that you think this is something of a joke, but obviously, especially considering my history, i think its a given that i can go along with a gag.

11. i've no idea what human meat tastes like, but i've heard from a few different sources that it tastes like pork. that would make sense as both humans and swine are omnivores. if this is the case, i'm sure its very tasty. naturally i think i'd enjoy devouring an attractive female much more than some stringy, chewy guy. i think i'd like to have the ladies barbecued and made into tostadas. but hunting humans can be very risky. i'd hate to find myself cornered in some old windmill by irate villagers with pitchforks and torches. being a vampire doesn't appeal to me, aside from the immortality part. also i'd hate to be limited to a salty, liquid diet.

12. as for ghosts, well, once when i was really young i was walking by a house everyone told me was haunted. i looked up to the second story bedroom window and saw a blank white face staring out. really gave me the creeps. but i was so young (and i was also a very imaginative child) this very well could have been some kind of self induced hallucination.

when i was a bit older and no one was home, i walked around the side of our house and heard some of the chairs scraping along the floor. as i said, NO ONE WAS HOME! also there was a space in the house i could never account for, between the bathroom and my sister's room, it was about eight by six feet. i have often wondered if maybe that area wasn't inhabited by someone or something. i always felt there was some other presence in the house beside just my family. a few people have also told me they felt the presence of some unwholesome entity lurking in the room i occupied. i'm not referring to myself obviously.

Toastmaster

June 19, 2010

You got it wrong. Nobody got to me. I haven't made light of your story one bit. I've listened and not judged you in any way. It is all a bit heavy and I think we covered the media portion of it enough. I wanted to get into some comedy to lighten it up at the end to leave people with a good feeling.

Toastmaster

June 19, 2010

14. Have you ever met an alien, a celebrity, or perhaps an alien celebrity? Tell us of your otherworldly experiences.

sickjunior

i see alien celebrities all the time here in Berkeley and San Fransisco. people don't notice them as they usually look like crazy street people or stuck up business executives. i know who they are though as i've seen them before on intergalactic psychic television. earth dumpster food is considered a very desirable delicacy, and the well to do flock here from all over the universe to enjoy it and relax in our homeless shelters which are popular vacation resorts for aliens, these days at least. its sort of a fad with them. they are even weirder about fads than our Japanese. the ones who look like executives are actually working here to enslave mankind through media. ultimately they want to make earth a brothel for their military. i know this which is why they are spying on me via transvisible secret police psychic radio. also i know that you have been sending coded messages for them through your website. however i know that i am to be the savior of mankind. i had a vision while on acid waiting for a bus back in '81 where the top of my head opened up like a flower and i ascended to heaven where i met Venus. she said to me, "son of Mars, yours is a great trial for you will suffer much, but do not despair,for you will triumph and free your race from the abominations from behind the sun beyond the void." then i saw a river of gold coins bearing my likeness and a colossal statue of me with a sword in my hand slaying a grotesque creature which i can not describe. so watch out

15. I've heard you are a sleepwalker. What of the allegation that dreams and reality are basically the same thing when you are a sleepwalker?

sickjunior

June 19, 2010

these rumors that i am a somnambulist are merely the most recent examples of the derogatory propaganda being disseminated by both my Zionist and alien enemies who wish to thwart my noble mission to free mankind from nefarious slavery.
there was a short spell in the late 90's where i used to go sleep driving. once i woke up in a motel 6 in cucamonga, which really sucked as i had a job interview with IBM in Burbank that i had to miss.
i didn't get the job.

my show is really big on other worlds, which is the primary reason it is made. i am actually an organic cyborg engineered to be super humanly entertaining. a penchant for amphetamines and opiates and a through the roof over active sex drive are some of the unintentional side affects of my programming. my most successful pick up line with the earth babes has been, "hey baby, i'm famous on Mars. you wouldn't think that would work, but it puts women into a suggestible hypnotic state when i say it, and they are putty in my lascivious hands.

everything they say and imply about me is negative and derogatory. 'i'm a sexual deviant, i'm rude and unpleasant, i have a penchant for hard drugs &tc…"
although they go on about how crazy i am (who wouldn't be considering the life i have lived?!), one thing they do not say is that i'm stupid (even though they obviously assume that i am considering what they are trying to get away with).
I believe they are trying to make me out to be some kind of evil genius. what other historical figure is portrayed as very smart, yet totally insane and had artistic ambitions? Adolf Hitler, that's who. Somehow i feel that since this has been done to me primarily by Jews in the media its all about what they wish they could have done to Hitler. So, sick as it is, they have tried to make me into a sort of contemporary Hitler they can foil and punish with all their 21st century media tools. I don't know this for sure, its kind of an amusing theory I've had for a while, although this is the first time I've stated it. infantile wish fulfillment, beyond a doubt, but again, i've never considered these pricks to be very deep or profound. most greedy, worldly people aren't anyway.
actually, no true Nazi would take me seriously as a Fuhrer, I'm mostly Anglican Irish and Sicilian. Sicilians, as you know, have a lot of African in them from all the Moorish invasions, and those Nazis see their racism as pure science, so, if they wanted to be hard asses i probably wouldn't even be allowed to join the party.
this is all pure speculation and i could very well be making too much of this. likely they are doing this to me just because they can. since i have always been wary of mass media and have avoided all forms of passive entertainment maybe they saw an opportunity here, and since i was so freakin' hilarious to watch, and easily lead they have just been making the most of it. actually i find it hard to believe they really think i am evil, otherwise why have they devoted so much effort making me APPEAR so. they have lots of money, and since i have very little, and they seem to have all the lawyers, at least locally, in their back pockets, as well as the blank minds of the masses, they feel confident they can do as they please with me. so far, this has indeed been the case. ironically, the show overextends itself in its maniacal desire to control and manipulate not only me, but the community. for example, i know one of their overriding goals is that i be a hopeless drug addict, but, since they also encourage people to take me for everything i am worth, i can not get a reasonable deal from the scumbag dealers. i would be spending like $300 for an eighth and it would be cut so bad that i doubt there was a nickles worth of dope in it. since everybody agrees that i'm not stupid, i saw no reason to continue on in that way. it just wasn't cost effective to continue doing drugs. so i stopped, albeit reluctantly, but i really had no choice. i have other habits i need to support as well, like eating.

one thing i've heard from some of these 'true believers' that never fails to really irk me is 'how watching me mess up my life makes them feel good about themselves as it helps them put their own lives in perspective'. well, one thing i should like to ask these mindless hate zombies is 'when have i even had an opportunity to mess up my own life? my life has never even been my own'. i am very sure had any of my smarmy critics been subjected to anything a fraction as leading and limiting as i have they would all now be homeless basket cases. but clearly that would be the end conclusion of a very long involved train of thought that most of these passive viewers would be incapable of even initiating. obviously this entire ordeal has left me with a very low opinion of the common man. i'm pretty much disgusted with the world and people in general. if i was really the devil, i'd send them all to hell in a second.

what the hells happened to the world where they put their idle entertainments before personal freedom and liberty? its worse than ancient Rome and their "Games". ah yes, fun and games. i'm standing in a corner of the colosseum,blunted sword in my hand, facing a mongrel horde of exotic warriors imported from all the far flung corners of the empire.

i'm being cruelly crucified on coast to coast prime time television for the pleasure and amusement of the drunken plebs. what a revoltin' development! i'm mortified!!

as i said, i USED to suffer from pretty bad depressions, however that has changed since i found out about all this. "they didn't want me so they made me a star". its actually the highest flattery that they have seen me as such a powerful threat to the status quo that they shamelessly use all the most powerful tools of espionage and the mass media to try and control me and hold me down. its sick, but i take it as a very high compliment.

even before they began trying to fashion me into this monster they are promoting i believe i was a real potential threat to these rich thought merchants. i never really bought into this 'consumer culture' that is devouring our souls. doubtless, money is important, but it is not everything. there are more important things in life. all this PC bullshit they are pushing is only a mask for their real agenda. we all get screwed the same, no, worse than ever, but we only hear kind words as they are doing so. the whole thing just makes me want to puke. the blatant hypocrisy alone is spiritually nauseating. on my bad days i'll even be afraid to leave my room. it can be very stressful. i only go out when its absolutely necessary, like for food and supplies. i really feel like i'm in one of those B movies where everybody is infected with some space virus and has changed into a flesh eating zombie and i am the last human being on earth. i believe Vincent Price was in an old black and white movie like that. it can be very hard on me. the evil doctor who showed me the gun and used to broadcast my sessions used to give me good drugs though. that really helped. my favorite combination was ritalin and vicodin i could face nearly anything on that shit! but really, i shouldn't need drugs just to face my day to day life. these media shlockmiesters need to pay for their heinous crimes, but they never will as long as people are so lazy that they gladly surrender their ability to think for themselves in favor of some lame reality tv X-rated soap opera. a thing like this really does things to a guy. its given me quite a complex psychosis, two thirds exhibitionism and one third paranoia. by exhibitionism i dont mean just things like having sex in public or posting pictures of yourself banging sluts or masturbating on the internet, but you find yourself doing bizarre things while your alone because you know your being watched and you want to either shock or entertain your invisible audience. having been in entertainment nearly all my life i have become a natural performance artist. seems everything i do is to amuse people. the art, the writing, the way i act, it all for the benefit of others. thats why its so cruel they have recently jerked this show to the left so hard. there are several reasons why it has become so wholly negative, and from what i know, all of them are mean and petty. people just flat out suck. theres just no way i will willingly die for their pathetic, childish amusement. What the hell is wrong with you people anyway?!

You all need to ask yourselves 'if they are allowed to get away with doing this to him, where will it end?'

"the scientific manipulation of public opinion was necessary to overcome chaos and conflict in a democratic society." Trust Us p 42

These early mass persuaders postured themselves as performing a moral service for humanity in general – democracy was too good for people; they needed to be told what to think, because they were incapable of rational thought by themselves. Here's a paragraph from Bernays' Propaganda:

"Those who manipulate the unseen mechanism of society constitute an invisible government which is the true ruling power of our country. We are governed, our minds molded, our tastes formed, our ideas suggested largely by men we have never heard of.

This is a logical result of the way in which our democratic society is organized. Vast numbers of human beings must cooperate in this manner if they are to live together as a smoothly functioning society.

In almost every act of our lives whether in the sphere of politics or business in our social conduct or our ethical thinking, we are dominated by the relatively small number of persons who understand the mental processes and social patterns of the masses. It is they who pull the wires that control the public mind.”

sickjunior

As 1920s spin pioneers like Ivy Lee and Edward Bernays gained more experience, they began to formulate rules and guidelines for creating public opinion. They learned quickly that mob psychology must focus on emotion, not facts. Since the mob is incapable of rational thought, motivation must be based not on logic but on presentation.

EMToast: Top 10 Zombie Sightings

By EMToast
October 3, 2008
Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: Toastmaster, Zombies

To prepare for the upcoming Halloween celebrations, EMToast has done extensive market research and delved deep into EMToast personal memory banks to bring you the top 10 Zombie sightings of all time.

1. Night of the Living Dead (1968 Film)

This movie is best watched on a worn out 1980's VHS video tape purchased from a Jamesway bargain bin. Make sure to get the one that includes the movie Reefer Madness.

This film is the origin of all modern zombie movies. If you claim to be a zombie lover and you haven't seen this film, don't tell anyone you just lost all your zombie street cred.

This movie set the rules for all real zombie movies. Zombies rise from the dead. They eat flesh. They move SLOW. If they bite you, you get infected, die and come back. The only way to kill a zombie is to destroy the brain.

Gives a true sense of what it would be liked to be trapped in a Pennsylvania farmhouse with hoardes of zombies trying to get in to cannibalize you. So well crafted, this horror masterpiece will still bring chills to even the most jaded horror fans.

2. Walking Dead (2003-Present Comic Book)

Billed as a Romero movie that never ends, this engrossing black and white comic has plenty of action, character development, horror, and most importantly zombies. It's the tale of one man and the small group of survivors who live and die along side him during his travels across the zombie wasteland.

Robert Kirkman, also writer of the Marvel Zombies series, does a much better job here than he was able to do in the limited issues he had with Marvel. He delves deep into characters, dialogue, and plotlines to create a rich and rewarding zombie experience. The issues take forever to come out, but they're worth the wait. The series so far is available in trade paperback format.

3. Resident Evil (1996 Video Game)

Heavily influenced by Night of the Living Dead, this early Playstation title is the first "Survival Horror" game.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Capcom's Resident Evil taught gamers everywhere to value the shotgun, ration their typewriter ribbons and avoid windows – zombie dogs can't resist jumping through. Unlike more recent sequels of the game, the first was heavy on the slow moving Romero style zombies. Game controls are said to be intentionally bad on this game to make it feel scarier.

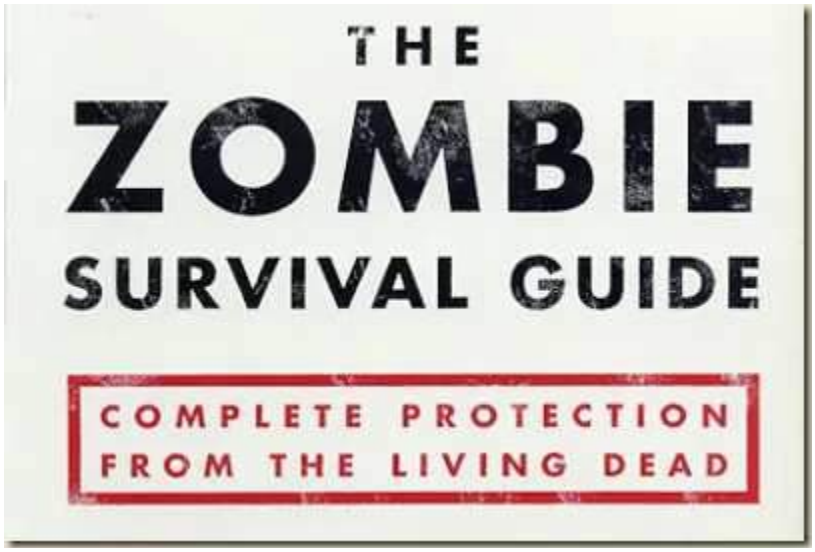
4. Dawn of the Dead (1978 Film)

The next best Romero zombie film after Night of the Living Dead takes place in a mall rather than a farmhouse. It's basically NOTLD on a larger scale. Not quite as scary as it's predecessor due to the movie being shot in color, which reveals a bizarre blue zombie makeup effect. The silliness of the biker gang breaking into the mall and throwing pies in zombie faces doesn't help either.

Still it's a classic, must watch zombie flick. Romero introduces the concept of a thinking zombie here, but sticks basically to the zombie rules set in NOTLD. This means "no running in the halls zombies".

Interesting fact: The theme music from Robot Chicken is taken from the closing credits of Dawn of the Dead.

5. Zombie Survival Guide (2003 Book)



Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Max Brooks, son of filmmaker Mel Brooks, began writing what was meant to be a parody survival guide. What he actually created was your best hope for surviving a zombie outbreak.

The book is now the zombie bible for many filmmakers and writers. With the exception of Solanum the invented virus cause of zombie outbreaks, this tome follows all Romero's rules, expands on them and gives many real world examples useful not only for the real world, but also for creating a fictional one.

6. Dead Alive (1992 Film)

Peter Jackson, director of Lord of the Rings & King Kong made an extremely bloody zombie film early in his career. It is reputed to be one of the goriest movies of all time. It's more comedy than horror, but still this movie delivers the goods. With scenes like mowing through crowds of zombies with a raised lawn mower, it's no surprise.

Dead Alive deviates slightly from the Romero established formula. Major offenses are the fact that the zombie infection is started by the bite of a sumatran rat monkey and that the original mother zombie infectee grows to enormous size.

Interesting fact: The sumatran rat monkey from this movie was captured on the fictional Skull Island. King Kong originates from the very same island. If you look closely, in the first scene of Jackson's 2005 Kong film, you can see a cage with a sign that reads Sumatran Rat Monkey.

7. Dead Rising (2006 Video Game)

Ten years after Resident Evil, Capcom recreates the atmosphere of another Romero film DOTD, this time for the Xbox 360. Greatly influenced by Dawn of the Dead, Dead Rising also takes place in a shopping mall. The game has more accessible controls than Resident Evil and allows you to take a more hands on approach. You can destroy hoardes of zombies with items ranging from sledge hammer to shopping cart. There are a few annoying flaws, like people calling you constantly and having to take photos all the time, but you can just ignore that and smash zombies like crazy. You'll never see so many on screen at once and smashing them down with a sledge hammer or slicing them to pieces with a katana sword is the most satisfying zombie slaying experience to date.

8. Zombi 2 Movie aka Zombie (1979 Film)

Marketed as Zombi 2 to capitalize on the Zombi title that Dawn of the Dead was released under in Europe, this film started the zombie craze overseas. It sticks to the Romero formula and it a great addition to any zombie lover's collection.

Zombie is most noteworthy for the excellent makeup special effects. Fulci zombies are famous for their trademark rotted worm infested faces. The one must see scene in this film is zombie vs shark in the ocean. So realistic, the film was banned in 21 countries for cruelty to sharks.

9. 28 Days Later (2003 Film)

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Technically not a zombie movie. The creatures are not living dead, but living people who are infected with the rage virus. Because of this, we don't deduct points for it's fast running zombies that deviate from the slow shuffle that is zombie law. This movie is directly responsible for a rash of recent fast running zombie movies including 2004's Dawn of the Dead remake.

Great visuals and soundtrack make this one of the better zombie films.

10. Pool of Radiance: Dungeons & Dragons SSI Gold Box Series (1988 Video game)

This Commodore 64 classic is technically not a zombie game, it's the first in a great, but very involved, series of Dungeons and Dragons role playing games. The early part of the game makes the list because of the awesome campaign to clean out Sokol Keep. This area is infested with hundreds of undead zombies that your party must clear out before the citizens can return. If you are wise enough to have a cleric in your party, you can experience one of the most amazing zombie holocausts in gaming history. Have your cleric do a "turn undead" command and watch hundreds of pixelated undead warriors turn to dust (represented by a red skull and crossbones.)

This game is also great because if you level your party up enough, you can put the battles on automatic and let the computer do the fighting for you. Some battles can be pretty lengthy with your 8 characters having do duke it out with literally hundreds of creatures. Thankfully you can switch over from C64 to TV using the tv/video switch from your Atari 2600 and watch new epodes of Alf and Family ties while your party battles it out.

Honorable Mentions

They didn't make the top 10 list, but don't skip the following zombie classics.

1/2 second scene of a gang of kids rollerskating in the dark, a tightie whitie undie wearing mummy zombie and some chick in plaid skirt getting her guts ripped out. Most importantly this movie teaches us
– beware of scientist with giant machines in the english countryside
-watch where you are pointing those ultrasonic waves, you'll wake up the dead!
– cops hate dirty hippies and say things like"You're all the same the lot of you, with your long hair and faggot clothes. Drugs, sex, every sort of filth! "
-and people in zombie movies who say things like,
" The dead don't walk around, except in very bad paperback novels!", are going to die.

Yeah I struggled with putting Let Sleeping Corpses Lie on the list or not. It should have gotten at least honorable mention. I'm convinced the makers of 28 Days Later were fans of that one. Many scenes in 28 days reminded me of it.

Also I skipped another Romero zombie, the Steven King movie Creepshow which Romero Directed. It has a pretty cool zombie that comes back from the grave but it talks and keeps saying "where's my cake" so it's too annoying to make the list.

Incidentally, that monkey in a crate still freaks me the fuck out though.

I just lost my zombie street cred. I said the rollerskating kids were in 'let sleeping corpses lie', but they were in 'Zeder'.

yeah that creepshow zombie was good on looks but that's it.

Don't even talk about that crated monkey, or howlings scratching on the 2nd story screen window.

I wish the super creepy first zombie from RE was in the pic, he still creeps me out. Seeing that on playstation was one of the top 10 most terrifying things ever.
That hallway under the stairs in the player's choice version of Resident evil, is my own personal hell, I was trapped there for like 3 years(seriously) with one bullet left, and those bitches come at you so fast and so hard that they are already taking snack bites out of you before you can even react. I died thousands of times, and eventually I was just so afraid and defeated because I knew what was coming, that I just stayed in that damn storage closet, and had to ask the toastmaster to get me out of there. I mean yeah they made the zombies super fast so it's so goddamn terrifying your heart explodes before

Ex-Wife Attacks Man, Tears Testicular Artery

By French Toast
October 6, 2008
Categories: Absurd World News

A man filed for restraining order against his ex-wife that he divorced 16 years ago. After their divorce, they both still lived in the same town as neighbors. The man owns a dry cleaning store. His ex-wife was not happy that he has new girlfriends. She would show up at his store to harass him and disrupt his business. She even beat up his girlfriends and once bit a police officer that responded to the scene.

July 1, 2008, the ex-wife showed up again at the dry cleaning store yelling. She scratched badly scratched her ex husband and grabbed his crotch very hard causing damages to his face, abdomen, burst his left testicle, and tore his testicular artery.

The judge approved the restraining order prohibiting the woman from coming with 1000 feet of her ex-husband, his girlfriends and the dry cleaning store.

- Aries You are probably going to be gored by a ram, for your competitive arrogance. You will be asking yourself some questions this week like What can you find in parade? What can you find a rave? What can be drunk in a dream? What the hell is a Tchaparian?

- Taurus On Friday you will meet someone, perhaps a bullfighter. Beware of this person; they are going to be very possessive and expect complete loyalty from you in your brief encounter. Don't fight dirty, don't bite them in the face.

- Gemini Don't go traveling this week, you will forget where you came from. Two people will pique your curiosity this week, you should be concerned with information they may be able to provide you. Everyone knows Monday night means wrestling.

- Cancer Be very cautious this week when it comes to all things family and domestic. You would do better with imports this week, crack open a Heineken and throw on the Gorillaz 'kids with guns' Hotchip remix.

- Leo Money will change hands this week from whose to whose is still unclear. You will encounter a jack your body loser in a grocery store on Wednesday while picking up some kraft dinner.

- Virgo Your prudish ways will be cause for concern this week. Be careful not to drop any babies this week. On Thursday you will discover that the joy of repetition really is in you.

- Libra Your keen analytical skills will come in handy this week. You will find yourself saying we caught the fire but the body escaped. Go with the flow. On Saturday you will be looking for a face to attack. You should look into getting a Peugeot with a kick ass soundsystem to crank some Yo La Tengo.

- Scorpio Sarcastic vengeance will be your style this week. You should count your pocket change On Wednesday, you might be able to get a Large coffee. Whistle for Will, he will appreciate it.

- Sagittarius There are holes in what you do. Keep your dual-nature in check on Friday or it could lead to something bestial. It's time to go shopping, your jeans don't work no more, remember when you said I'm going to wear them till my jeans don't work no more.

- Capricorn Your fatalistic approach will not be appreciated this week. Make your neurosis work for you on Tuesday. Your only weapon is your pen but you traded it for your hand, that was not a smart move.

- Aquarius You will be cursing your connections to civilization this week. On Thursday don't be overly concerned with science. On Saturday you will find yourself saying, my only lesson was in my brains. You are in the market for some toys, perhaps a monkey with miniature cymbals.

- Pisces You are known to take on the behaviors or others, be careful this week because that could get you into some trouble with the FBI. Throw out your entire wardrobe for a more versatile look. The outside world's not safe, you should sit down and read all the time. On Saturday you will go hunting and eat what you slaughter.

When I was about 6 years old I had a Dad crafted fort in my back yard. It was basically just 3 pieces of wood nailed together to form a triangle with a back on it and a curtain for the door. All I had in there was a Superman movie poster and a little lock box that I kept crackers, pepperoni, and a few Superman comics in. It was my mini-me fortress of solitude. Flash forward a few years and I wanted shit to do with Superman. The average brooding teenager couldn't connect with the super-hero equivalent of the all-American jock. A super square power chin holder with the morals of a boy scout. Fuck that! We also can not forget the abysmal Lois & Clark show. Dean Cain looked like he was modeling for the Sears Halloween circular all while trying to recruit new members to N.A.M.B.L.A. I was more interested in things like an undead goth make-up flaunting crow magnet who belted out rocking guitar riffs in the rain and sought revenge against spastic thugs who had cool catch phrases like, "Fire It Up!". I bet you didn't know emo was born at the exact moment Brandon Lee delivered the line, "It can't rain all the time." As usual, I'm getting off topic and rambling about The Crow. JNCO's and I'm ready to give the squeak-squeaky clean do-gooder with the S on his chest another try.

On recommendation I scooped up two Supe trades: All Star Superman and Superman: Kryptonite. I had high hopes for Kryptonite due to the art being done by personal fave Tim Sale. My standards for eye pleasing aesthetics were met, but unfortunately the story was comparable to the Superman themed FreeFall ride at Six Flags. One minute your 10 stories up preparing for a thrilling experience, the next your feet are severed at the ankles from a finally freed revenge obsessed mechanical cable. The All Star title was more in my favor. In one of the collected issues, Supes gives the mutha of all birthday gifts to Lois Lane by bestowing to her the wealth of his powers for a day. The two fly around and do some inane shit, but I'm totally convinced he granted her his strengths so he can finally bang her out without pushing her uterus through her esophagus. Most mortal females couldn't handle human based Dirk Diggler girth, so its only logical a krypton crotch pounding from Kal-El would do some irreparable damage.

Ratings:

Superman: Kryptonite – 3 Christopher Reeve hate harboring horses with a thought bubble above their snout reading "get off my back bitch!" out of 5.

All Star Superman – 5 veiny rock hard Lois Lane impaling super schlongs out of 5.

Forts are the greatest thing when you are a kid. When I was little my friends and I had one up in a tree and we would cook cheerios over a candle and call them tostitos. Consumers of shop-rite corn chips, we were all too poor to know what real tostitos even were. The one kid's mom was brazilian and was pretty nice. She brought us out hot dogs one time with this special sauce that I have yet to this day been able to recreate.

I always put ketchup and mustard on my dogs, because my theory is that is what the main ingredients are, but it doesn't really come close. I want that brazilian hot dog sauce dammit.

I still have my vhs copy of the crow around here somewhere. Fire it up is one of the best chants around. There were no less than 5 occassions and I would drive around yelling fire it up whilst punching at the car roof interior.

I read one issue of all star and i agree it's good. I can't wait to see lois lane crush clark's balls with her hand until they become diamonds, apple daily news style.

I remember the kid next door had a fort, but it was just some old shutters leaned up against the side of a cliff in the woods, he said it had a bathroom and a bubble gum machine. It just had a metal pole sticking out of the ground that supposedly was a gumball machine at one time back in the olden days(yeah in the middle of the woods on the side of a cliff) as for the bathroom, this kid would just shit on the other side of the shutters and wipe his ass with leaves or greasy rags from the nearby parking lot. For some reason I never liked hanging out at his fort.

I always thought that when Superman shot his wad all his little super squiggles would blast millions of microscopic holes in the lady and then she would die a horrible death similar but far worse than when you grind up glass and slip it into someones sandwiches,anyway I thought they would keep swimming for ever shooting through everything in their path like Ridley Scott alien blood, they would go on forever and ever destroying everything. I bet the only way he could stop them is if he shot them into his own mouth and chewed them up. eww that's gross.
I bet there is no such thing as ebola, it's just Superman sperm shooting through the world, drilling tiny holes into everyone they come in contact with and making them bleed to death.
Superman was always my third favorite superfriend, behind Aquaman and Gleek, and not that hook handed Kurt Cobain looking grunge Aquaman, the o.g. who hung out with

How to Score with Nigerian Women – Without Really Trying

Courting rituals in Nigeria are so progressive. In the USA, you can barely get away with saying hi to a girl you don't know without getting kicked in the balls. But in Nigeria anything goes. They even think it's romantic if you text message them something like "I swear I make sure I will give you HIV." Then follow that message up with a little note "H is for Happiness and joy forever with an I: Incomparable love that will never V: Vanish until death do us part. I love you" If you don't believe it, check the proof on BBC News.

I imagine if I ever attempted to send a message like that I'd be spending 10-20 years in a maximum security prison.

I might take a trip over there and give it a shot. Something like "I swear I will decapitate you." will make the girls swoon when the receive part 2 "Because you will be headless for my love ;)"

Or maybe "I swear you will die in pain." "After we spend a lifetime of happiness together." Before you know it, I'm going to be Nigeria's number one Romeo.

I also hear that over there it's easy to make money. It's totally legal to pull a 419 scams on foreigners. In fact it's encouraged in their school system. If you've had email within the last 10 years someone has tried this scam on you. You know the message from the guy named Suleman Bello or Phillip Butulezi who needs your help to free up the funds of their king or dead friend Salamon. Just have to send them all your name, bank account, social security and fax number and they'll set it up for you. Risk Free. They will transfer the money right to your account and then you just help get it to the rightful owners. Before you know it the whole plan has gone to shit and in order to straighten it our you're on the way to Nigeria to personally collect several bagfuls of blood rubies and stacks of unclaimed royal cash. Shortly thereafter you're lying headless in some Nigerian ditch with flies crawling into your neck hole and an empty wallet.

Rediscover Nigeria. Tourism is Life.

Hehe, that's funny. The iq is lower because, IQ tests suck in Africa. 1. How do you measure verbal IQ when English is not the first language? Anyone speak Wolof? Zulu? Igbo? Yoruba? Hehe, maybe americans are the stupid ones. Next, you have to account or the fact that the smartest Africans have fled the continent and are not bringing up the IQ of America, African immigrant IQs are like a full standard deviation above average. Also, many people you test with IQ tests are either hungry, or not familiar with the kind of test you give. Why not test university students, instead of little kids? I mean fucked up in so many ways. And as my final piece of evidence that the IQ of Africans is much higher than dumb americans……you idiots fall for the same scams again and again, while we laugh all the way to the bank, if that's not evidence that Americans are stupid as hell, what is?

Stop Breast Cancer, Celebrate National Boob Cake Day

By bixby

“That’s Some Good Boob Cake!”

October is Breast Cancer Awareness month, today October 10th is National Boob Cake Day.

Make sure to celebrate it. Surprise your coworkers and bring them the joys of this little known celebration.

It was created 3 years ago, when the National Cancer Health Organization wanted to make people more aware that breast health issues are not just for women.

According to Susan Schmitmauder, director of the NCHO, “Most people think of breast cancer as a woman’s disease. Sure breast cancer is about 100 times less common among men than among women; and a man’s lifetime risk of getting breast cancer is about 1/10th of 1% (1 in 1,000), but that doesn’t mean there is no risk. No one ever talks about it and many men are completely unaware of the risks, or symptoms. By the time they seek medical attention it’s often in the later stages and their chances of survival are greatly reduced. Our goal is to make them aware of their risk and their options.”

Director Schmitmauder said that, “… studies show that the number of breast cancer cases in men relative to the population has been fairly stable over the last 30 years, but it’s still taking people’s lives, this year about 450 men will die from breast cancer in the United States. We want that number to someday be less than 100, and then zero, but we can’t do it without making people aware.”

Researchers at the NCHO found that men were more receptive to information when there was cake involved. In field studies it was shown that men were 23% more likely to approach a breast cancer awareness information station offering cake, than one that offered information alone.

It’s a fact: Americans, and not just men, idolize big breasts. Every year, American women spend millions of dollars on implants, cosmetic procedures, breast enlargement pills, pumps and creams.

The NCHO found that the role that big breasts play in our culture and society was going to be the key to attracting the men they so desperately needed to inform about this important issue.

Studies showed that men were 75% more likely to approach a table containing breast cancer awareness information if there were images of naked female breasts and cake in the station. Researchers then decided to see what would happen if they combined the breasts with the cake, it was shown that men were 92% more likely to approach the station and leave with information pamphlets. And so National Boob Cake Day was born.

Being informative and politically incorrect never tasted so good.

You take a drive together, and you spin like the Cadillac was overturning down a cliff on television, and the radio is on and the radioman is speaking and the radioman says women were a curse, and you agree

Cancer Obsess yourself with causality. The information you hear is a loophole, technicality. Behind every object is a mathematic; an obscure substance Infused with a kinetic force, energy, an obscure conscience shoots a gun at. You will become obsessed and go savage for teenagers with Automatic weapons and Boundless love; teenagers who are aesthetically pleasing In other words, fly.

Taurus Keep on thinking not so hard as for the brain to burn. You say correlation is not causation.

Libra You are going To Reseda to make love to a model from Ohio whose real name you don't know. You will take the model out on Wednesday and find yourself at the wrong prom. Where you will see Toots Hibbert serve a beat down, on a tom tom. You will use some expletives and a nun will cut your knuckles open with a metal edge ruler and say, "You don't use words like that, St. Louise is listening."

Scorpio You've got the will to drive yourself sleepless this week. You will know its time to seek professional help when you start to ask yourself," Is you am a dog?" Strange Currency Discovered In Pennsylvannia

Intercourse,PA October 15, 2008

Fritz Jacobs,owner of Jacob's Country Market, made a puzzling discovery after investigating complaints from customers that his vending machines had taken their money and produced no goods. After the seventh refund in one day he decided to investigate the machine. Upon opening the machine he discovered it was filled with tiny hamsters.

He said , "I opened it up and could not believe what I was seeing there were tiny hamsters crawling around inside the coin holder. I can't even imagine how they got in there. Someone has to be putting them in there. A hamster isn't going to crawl in there on its own, there is nothing in there for them, it's just coke, its not like there's trail mix or something."

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Three days later a customer came in and told Fritz that he lost his money in the vending machine. He opened it up and again the coin holder was filled with tiny hamsters.

Jacobs decided to set up video surveillance to find out how these little rodents were getting inside his vending machine.

He told reporters that, “When we cleared them out of there the first time there were 36 in all. The second time there were 27. That’s a lot of hamsters to pull out of a coin slot. I needed to find out how these little things were getting in there, so I went on that internet and got some of those spy cameras.”

For two weeks the vending machine was watched and there was no sign of hamsters, until a youngAmish boy came inside and asked for change and handed over some hamsters.

”I was so shocked I couldn’t even speak, but I think I was more relieved than anything because I had no idea what I was going to do with all those hamsters if it kept up. I mean who do you call for that? Animal control? I have no idea.”

It turns out there is a rogue sect of the Amish called hamminites who have been using hamsters as currency since the mid 1950’s. There are several isolated hamminite communities spread throughout Pennsylvania and eastern Ohio. It is only in recent years that they have begun coming into towns and mixing with the local population in the market place.Before that they were completely unknown to the mainstream population

Jacobs told theboy to leave his store.

“I said kid what are you crazy putting live hamsters in my vending machine! Get out of here. Take your hamsters and go!”

16 year old Enos Kridlegh said, “ We aren’t going anywhere until you take our hamsters, Our currency is as good as yours, English.” The boy then sat on the curb outside of the store where he was joined by a group of Amish children.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Jacobs said, “so he goes outside andthen this Amish girl pulls out a cellphone and called her dad. I didn’t even know they had towers way out where they come from. They sat outside the store until he arrived in this buggy and the guy comes in here with a horse whip and demands that I accepts hamsters for cokes, and I said no way buddy, you can get your cokes with hamsters down at the Kroger’s maybe but not here.”

Fritz Jacobs remark and steadfast determination not to accept hamsters caused a bit of an uproar in the hamminite community.

Jacobs later said that, “The guy and the kids left, but then they came back with a whole crowd, So I got out the bat I keep behind the counter and that got rid of them, because the Amish are peaceful and clear off when it comes to fighting.”

Enoch Kridlegh, the father of the boy involved in the incident made a statement to the press, which is virtually unheard of for the Amish

“You English are so wasteful and violent in your ways. Our currency is good, it is the way ofGod. He provides for us and those provisions multiplyof themselves.We don’t need banks to make our savings grow, we do not need machines to store our money. Our currency does not feed on greed and sadness, it feeds on peanuts and grain. We have more riches than you could ever imagine, We are sad for you and your Godless ways.”

That was 3 months ago and Fritz hasn’t had anymore hamsters in his vending machine.

“I don’t know if it was the bat or the sign we put on the vending machine, but there haven’t been anymore hamsters in there, poor little guys, I could get the PETA after those people if they try it again, it's just plain wrong."

When asked what became of the hamsters Jacobs said, "we couldn't part with one of them, my kids just fell in love with them , and hey you never know, if that whole hamster money thing catches on we could be rich."

Capricorn-

Remember it is better to kick someone in the back than to punch him or her in the face. You can even kick them in the back of the knees while you're at it. You are going to learn a valuable lesson on Wednesday, and it could possibly involve beavers.

Virgo-

Stop working so hard; it won't get you anywhere. On Friday you will invest $300 into something completely worthless, find someone else you can trick into doing the same thing, that way you don't feel so bad about yourself. Tainted milk will have you feeling down on Thursday.

Aquarius-

Stop thinking you can change the world; it's not going to happen. Sure you grew up to join the dregs of society, but take heart dear Aquarius, The waiters and garbage men of the world may not be nearly as important as the astronauts and princesses, but they can wake people up at 6 a.m. by throwing metal garbage cans, and they can shit in their food. When does an astronaut or a princess ever get to do that.

Taurus-

Spend some time with family On Wednesday. They will keep you focused and remind you of how far you haven't come. Remember as long as you have them, you will never run out drama.

Gemini-

Be prepared for a dark and gloomy Monday. Be the office hero, by calling in a bomb threat. Work on setting goals this week. You may get into some social trouble this week. Get the heat off of you by starting a vicious rumor about someone else.

Pisces-

Lay low this week. Remember the tallest blade of grass is the first to get cut, so make yourself invisible and you'll stay in the game. Pal around with a schizophrenic this week, they will introduce you to a way of thinking that you never knew was possible.

Cancer-

Schadenfreude will have you giggling on Tuesday. Do something nice for yourself on Thursday, floss. Organized religion is in your future, they will be knocking on your door on Sunday, open it and you might be surprised.

Libra-

Don't point laser pointers at planes on Tuesday, unless you are prepared to clean up a huge mess. Start sharpening your teeth for some sort of event involving food. Remind someone; that opinions are like barking dogs, nobody wants to hear them at 3 a.m.

Scorpio-

You're going to be Karma's bitch this week. Complaining is only going to make it worse, and stop frowning or you're going to need more botox than Rachel Zoe. Invest your time in something worthwhile on Thursday.

Sagittarius-

A case of road rage could leave you with a radiator full of pennies on Saturday. Be prepared to have some fun this week, even if it is at the expense of others. On Friday you must remember to do unto to others before they do unto you.

Aries-

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Don't be so somber this week little Aries. Ditch the dark colors; people are beginning to think that you're matching your outfits to those bags under your eyes. Get yourself a good night of sleep on Friday by drinking heavily.

Leo-

Your superiors will be using you as an example this week. You are the perfect example, of what not to do. Take pride in that, you probably shouldn't, but what else have you got to be proud of? Freak someone out on Monday and eat a dead bird in the park.

Street Fighter Tribute

I've had alot of obsessions in my day. Comics, records, pizza, mid 90's porn, rare sneakers (worst hobby ever), horror movies, etc. The one infatuation that has persisted through my rapid accruement of life years has been my unfading affection for all things Street Fighter. I have yet to bear the fruits of my groin, so I think it's safe to say the greatest chest swelling pride I have ever experienced is the moment I learned the universe solving equation of forward, down, down-diagonal=Shoryuken. I'm partially exaggerating.

As I was drooling Skittles scented saliva all over the pages of this book my mind switched modes from art admiration to enraged envy. You see, those fortunate foreigners over in Japan are all now in the arcades playing Street Fighter 4 with a grinning mouthful of Pocky while I have to squat in N.J. awaiting it's stateside release. Yeah, I know the economy is crumbling and we are about to have a senile mummy with Alaskan arm candy running the country and I should be concerned with more pressing issues. Eff it! I want to yoga flame my way to blissful joystick ignorance!

i am 8-Bit

Nostalgia is a powerful thing. Who doesn't love a tiny reminder of their youth to deliver a welcome wave of fuzzy gut warmth? The ever increasing popularity of all things deemed old school speaks volumes to that notion. It's possible an image of Mario riding a GT Pro Performer with Optimus Prime on the pegs could cause a grown man to knee buckle tumble into a teary mess. I'm one of these man-children, so it's only natural for me to gravitate towards artistic renderings of the retro video games that have molded me into the thug-nerd I am today. Now all I need to attain completion in life is a tattoo artist adept at permanent pixilated skin permeation so I can get the cast of Chrono Trigger carved into my abdomen.

Bigfoot Sighting: Sasquatch Army Rises From Water, Attacks Maryland

By EMToast
October 24, 2008
Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: Toastmaster

Talbot County MD: Hundreds of witnesses have reported an army of subterranean creatures rising from the Chesapeake Bay. Green glowing eyes and seaweed covered black fur Sasquatch numbering in the hundreds have been spotted across the region destroying everything in their paths. Residents are unsure what has caused the attacks. The creatures have come to Easton and surrounding towns with no apparent purpose other than leveling the area.

Six or Eight of the beasts will work together to push down the walls of mansions and crab serving restaurants alike. They smash through bricks with their bare fists and can stomp through asphalt with nothing but their size 40 (approx) feet. No one is sure what has caused the invasion, but many suspect it has something to do with the economy.

James Whitcombe, crabber, and a long time resident of the eastern shore says, “Times are tough. We’re not catching any crabs. The restaurants just aren’t buying. Maybe they Sasquatch are being driven from the sea.”

Ellen Deganes has another theory. She states, “One wealthy older couple was watching CNBC day and night. They started freaking themselves out with all that bad stocks news. Even though they have millions, they figured they were probably broke. They have a huge horse farm with 12 Arabian horses that they no longer wanted to buy corn to feed. The old man lured the horses into an old tractor trailer and dumped the trailer down by one of the creeks leaving the horses to die. Nobody lives down that way, so nobody heard them kicking. By morning the trailer was found empty with hoof impressions all along the outside. The metal doors had been torn off their hinges from the top down and we found some big prints down there. I doubt the horses did that”

The horses were found in a local pasture unharmed. The same cannot be said for the older couple. When we went to their house to report on the horses we found nothing but a dried up scalp and a pile of teeth and broken bones.

No one knows for sure what these creatures are, or why they’ve come, but we do know one thing. If you see one, hide. If you see the green of their eyes, you are probably already dead.

How to Convert an Old Weedwacker Into a Flamethrower

By EMToast
October 26, 2008
Categories: Curious Ideas
Tags: flamethrower, Toastmaster, weedwacker

Step 1: Get an old electric weedwacker. (Preferably one your Dad finds for you on the garbage.)

Step 2: Plug in your weedwacker and cut down the longest grass you can find. Ornamental grass works best. Make sure the grass gets all wrapped around the spinning axle part so it spins really slow.

Step 3: Don't let off the power, spin the weedwacker until smoke starts coming out and it gets nice and hot. Don't worry, the grass won't come off.

Step 4: Pour some used motor oil on the spinning part, dump it right on the axle. This will lubricate the grass.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Step 6: Spin it some more, then get a screwdriver with a thin end and pack the grass down. Try to get the grass to come off the axle. Don't worry, it will never come off, this just packs it in better.

Step 7: Spin your weedwacker until it starts running really slow and almost stops. It should be getting nice and hot by now.

Step 8: With the weedwacker turned OFF generously spray some WD-40 on the spinner. You'd think it would loosen up the grass, but it won't.

Step 9: Hold the weekwacker at arm's length and pull the trigger. Flames should shoot out at this point. You might get three good flame throws out of it. After that, I hope you have a bucket of water or a hose handy because you should have a nice plastic fire by now.

Congratulations! You've made your weedwacker into a flamethrower. Now throw it in the trash.

Horrorscopes For The Week of November 2nd

By bixby
November 3, 2008
Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: Bixby, Weekly Horrorscope

ARIES: This is your week to shine dear Aries. Put people in their places and let them know who is top dog. Don't expect them to like it and be prepared for a few slashed tires.

CAPRICORN: A new job is in your future this week little Cappie. Satan wants you for a minion, before you consider you should really weigh all your options. Don't rush into anything you might regret, for eternity.

SAGITTARIUS: Your passion for organic hamster farming will soon pay off during a trip to Amish country on Friday. Take charge of your finances and set some goals this week.

SCORPIO: Dear little Scorpie the state of the economy has you stressing out, immerse yourself in a hobby to take your mind off these troubled times. Goat milking and realistic marzipan baby sculpting might help.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

LIBRA: If you invite Glenn Campbell over for Cheese Nips on Wednesday, don't be surprised if he shows up. Your addiction to Chantix will come in handy when you apply for a job with the psychic friends network. Make sure that you give Dionne Warwick in depth descriptions of all your crazy Chantix dreams.

CANCER: Avoid trying on any hats while shopping this week; otherwise a nasty case of athlete's foot on your scalp is in your future. Don't bother trying too hard at anything on Thursday, the more effort you put forth the more horribly you will fail so save yourself the trouble. Stay home from work, kick back and watch Hogan's Heroes and research how to protect your home from a raptor attack.

PISCES: Don't bother voting on Tuesday you're only one person and one vote, and finding the time to vote means less time for you spent at www.warriorcats.com

GEMINI: You will be overcome with guilt on Sunday after your friend with the cleft palate commits suicide because she wasn't accepted on hotenough.org, the dating site that she signed up for at your suggestion. Do whatever you want this week, you're going to hell anyway.

TAURUS: Starting a nasty rumor about yourself can be fun.

Your boss's discovery of your high functioning work ethic despite the fact that you suffer from the co morbid existence of schizophrenia and cocaine abuse, just might just get you a pity raise.

LEO: That's right little Leo your GED is worthless, you need a Bachelor's Degree to get a job at McDonalds. On Thursday don't throw away the adult education program flyer, like you do every other week.

VIRGO: You will find out Tuesday that a slathering of tiger balm is not an effective method of birth control. Don't make any hasty decisions on Thursday and maybe you won't have to watch your kid grow up to be an asshole.

AQUARIUS: Remember that night that you worked really late 3 months ago and the janitor turned off all the lights and you were too afraid to go to the bathroom in the dark? Well that Snapple bottle full of piss in the bottom drawer of your desk is going to come in handy on Friday when someone takes your parking space.

Tiny Guns: America’s Newest Obsession

By EMToast
November 10, 2008
Categories: Absurd World News, Odd Products
Tags: tiny guns, Toastmaster

With building security tightening nationwide, gun enthusiasts and criminals alike have found a novel way around pat downs and metal detectors. Meet America’s newest obsession: the tiny gun. What began as a hobby for many has now become a popular form of self defense.

These life saving minis can be carried just about anywhere.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Adult's aren't the only ones who love these tiny hand cannons. Children everywhere are collecting them like pokemans.

There is a darker side to these baby bazookas. The bullets are so tiny that they can slice right through kevlar body armor with speeds rivaling that of armor piercing rounds. These bullets, though small, are actually 10x deadlier than your standard ammo. 9 times out of 10 a tiny bullet will actually enter the bloodstream through a vein or artery at high velocity, straight for the heart. Once reached, the heart explodes on impact.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

The tiny weapons have proved so effective, the US Army has deployed special units of Segway driving soldiers armed tinys in the middle east to finish up the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Word on the street is America's #1 weapons supplier, Wal-mart, has plans to carry a budget friendly tiny gun and ammo set just in time for Christmas.

I heard that due to the increase in tiny gun crimes new search procedures are going to be implemented in government buildings. They are taking lessons from the intake procedures used by Prisons across the united states. The new standards are to go into effect sometime around February 2009.
Entering any United States government building will require you to pass through no less than 3 security check points. First you will pass through a metal detector, then you will enter into a secure cubicle where you will be instructed to disrobe and receive something very similar to a prostate exam. Once you are dressed you will be patted down and either detained or given the all clear to go about your business.

Randall

May 7, 2012

What a joke. If tiny bullets were superior then 22 long rifle would be more deadly than a 45, but its NOT.

These tiny bullets would have very little penetration and the idea that they would make your heart explode is preposterous. And the velocity would be nothing like a “normal” sized bullet. I am not saying that you can’t be serious injured by one but that bullet placement and circumstances would have to be ideal.

week with Jaundice. Get to know your friends Dominoes and Netflix and enjoy. When it's time to go back to the drudgery pop over to Duane Read and pick yourself up a can of Sally Hansen spray tan and just say, " hepatocellular carcinoma, need I say more?"

SCORPIO- Those big fancy words you learned from dictionary.com aren't impressing anyone, except maybe that one scabby bitch from the accounting department. Now's your chance to test the theory that body lice and pubic lice can't live outside of their respective areas.

LIBRA- Friday will bring a welcome change. You be free from the biggest asshole you've ever met in your life. So get yourself some mud dreds, paint your face blue and pretend to get your hagus ripped out. While singing partay! Pizza partay! Yeah! Hey? What's that tree doing here? Don't cross old zombie Jesus or he is apt to bitch up your face.

CANCER- The pattern of the stars is willing you to come into a small fortune this week. If you've got a dollar and a dream, maybe you can buy a pack of overpriced juicy fruit from the vending machine in the lounge

PISCES- You've always been a planner dear Pisces. You had your career planned when you were five, you wanted 4 kids you even picked out there names. Well, this week you will discover that all your life decisions were subconsciously based on old sitcoms from the 80s and all your kids were named after the golden girls

GEMINI- Your self esteem has been as withered as Janice Dickinson' labia lately. Don't worry things will start perking up by midweek. Watch the weather channel, you'll see.

TAURUS- Devastation is on the horizon this week. That one time when you had a whole bunch of Olean potato chips and decided to enter a karate match is going to surface on the internet. Prepare yourself for the filthy new moniker they've made up for you at work. Don't worry it will come in handy in the near future when you start a band.

LEO- Saturn's ring suggest that you try something you've always been too intimidated to do. You just might be the one to show the world that Whippits and airplane glue aren't just for kids.

VIRGO- You've got a huge presentation at work on Thursday, call in sick or you will wish you had. There is no way to avoid fate. What you are going to think is a crusty cold sore that you will try to cover up with lip balm is going to turn out to be a midnight booger glued to your upper lip that will come loose and fly off into your bosses mouth while you are going over the monthly sales reports. Embarrassment and unemployment are all that will come to attending work on Thursday.

AQUARIUS- You are going to regret something this week. It will be revealed on Wednesday. If you work in accounting, avoid Scorpios at all cost, take a shower and invest in some rid-x.

A man suspected someone broke into his house and called the police. The police showed up and searched the whole house, but they didn't find anything suspicious. As they were leaving, a policewoman heard a fainted sneezing sound when she walked pass the 2nd floor stairs. She asked if someone just sneezed, none of the policemen did. Then the owner of the house said oh there's a cubbie hole underneath the stairs that he usually uses for storage and that's exactly where the sneezing sound came from. The police opened up the cubbie hole found 2 men hiding in there sweating their butts off and arrested them.

Mr Popular

Spam has changed. It used to be a lot more fun. Messages about discount watches, and viagra, and 13 foot ejaculation used to be followed with large blocks of wondrous and nonsensical text. Text that was used for artistic ventures such as spam poetry and spam radio. But that's so 2003. I barely even see spam anymore and I get the feeling the spammers have given up. They don't feel creative anymore. Their spirits broken by increasingly good spam filters.

If you're feeling nostalgic for the good old days of spam, why not check out some of the best of spam radio at www.spamradio.net

Here is an excerpt of what you will find there.

"Wilma sucks a beast – Very explicit, yet full of romance.

Camgirl – All sounds very innocent.

Truck Driver Hit By Sleep Deprived Woman, Body Parts Everywhere

By French Toast

Tags: Apple Daily News, French Toast

A 53 year old truck driver ran out of gas on the highway. He parked the truck on the shoulder and walked to a gas station to get gas. He got hit while he was trying to put gas in his tank on the shoulder by another car. The driver of the other car was a 23 old woman who fell asleep behind the wheel.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

The woman went to celebrate her birthday with her friends after her night shift and she hadn't slept for 26 hours. She thought she hit the road guard or something and she didn't stop. After she got home and took a shower, she saw the damage to the bumper, also the passenger side windows were broken with blood on them. She also found hair on the birthday cake box that was in the backseat and then she realized she hit somebody. The 53 year old man was probably hit by other cars after that and dragged on the road, his body parts were everywhere.

Police are presently investigating it as a possible homicide. The woman has known anger management issues and is obsessed with gay porn featuring 'hot man on man action', as

As she angrily left her party after it was obviouys the stripper wasn't going to show up, she was heard to say, "That little pansy ass doesn't know what a fucking bitch he's dealing with!"

The True Meaning of Thanksgiving: King Kong vs Godzilla

Tags: Godzilla, King Kong, Thanksgiving, Toastmaster

If you were a kid in the 70's or 80's living in the NJ/NY area, you know the true meaning of Thanksgiving. It wasn't about family. It wasn't about turkey. It was all about watching King Kong, Son of Kong, and Mighty Joe Young on WOR-9 NY, channel 9's Holiday Movie Festival. Or the miscellaneous Godzilla movies they showed all weekend like King Kong vs Godzilla, Godzilla vs Megalon, and Godzilla vs the Smog Monster (Save the Earth! Man that was a catchy theme song.)

It also meant Crazy Eddie (His Prices are Insane!) commercials starring Crazy Eddie Dressed up in cheap King Kong and Godzilla costumes.

Those days are long gone now, but do yourself a favor and honor the true meaning of Thanksgiving

The original 1933 version of KING KONG still holds true to me as a personal viewing tradiiton every Thanksgiving because of my memories of the Channel 9 Thanksgiving monster festival when I was a kid. I will never forget seeing the original King Kong for the first time on Thanksgiving in 1976. The annual rerun of the film proved to be a kind of behavioral conditioning for me – I played all the movies I used to associate with Thanksgiving last year and I'll be damned if they didn't make it feel more like the Thanksgivings of my childhood, without the interminable commercial breaks, which was a welcome change.

What I find amazing is how we watched the films on what looked like muddy, blurred TV screens, a far cry from the HD and DVD images we take for granted today. Even with my appreciation for King Kong as a groundbreaking, influential film, I still can view it for its pure entertainment value.

Other films I commonly associate with Thanksgiving viewing are March of the Wooden Soldiers, the original Last of the Mohicans, and an old anime flick, Alakazam The Great. Seeing these films only once a year made them special, as much a signal of the Christmas Season as any of the Christmas Specials that would air in the weeks ahead. This was well before home video and cable, so replaying films or rewinding was out of the question. I wonder sometimes if people didn't have a pause or rewind button, would their memories and attention spans be better?

I highly recommend using your DVD player for a Thanksgiving movie festival, if only to see if you, too, were conditioned to associate your holiday frame of mind with what you watched on TV. Some may find it this association disconcerting, but I'm actually happy that some of what I remember from those times is readily available in a package of sorts, especially when one considers that many of the relatives and friends from Thanksgivings past are no longer with us.

The Pedo-Files: Exploring Inappropriate Relationships In Gaming

Subject: Dr. Light.

Esteemed roboticist Dr. Thomas Light has long been under saucy scrutiny for his near obsessive creations of moppet machines and automatous adolescents. Light's first foray into puerile android companionship resulted in the construction of Proto-Man. Outfitted with a dashing scarf and fanciful red and grey outfit to-die-for, Light became quickly infatuated. Light's incessant advances and perverse handling proved too much for even the Proto-Shield to deflect and Proto-Man soon went rogue and disappeared.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Blue-balled and alone, Light soon began work on his next invention and it wasn't long before his bi-curiosity had left him with a problematic gender query. The ever avarice doctors decision led to the birth of the brother-sister robo-twink combo of Mega-Man & Roll.

During this time Light's colleague Dr. Wily grew suspicions of his friend's obsession with the juveniles and a confrontation occurred. Wily tried to question Mega-Man and requested him to show him on a Mazinger-Z doll where he had been touched. At the sight of this, Light quickly ran a magnet over Mega's memory banks and all proof of pedo pandering had vanished. To this day Wily has sought to put an end to the busy hands of Light by creating his own robot army only to have his interventions crushed by the brain washed boy in blue and his mayo pellet spewing mega-buster.

Researchers side notes

1) Light's depravity has also been rumored to have sunk as low as bestiality with the concoction of Rush- a canine inspired robot programmed to have a penchant for peanut butter

Capricorn: You might be tempted to serve up a beat down 1970's style with some klick klacks. Careful because you are bound to hit yourself right in your goddamn lip.

Sagittarius: The economy has fallen to ruin, there is a scammer on every street corner and today they have the deal of a lifetime. Stop and listen to your inner Admiral Ackbar, he knows it's a trap, there is no way $2000 can buy you a grow your own living Pac-man kit.

Scorpio: The planets have revealed that your 27th cousin 4 times removed was the drunken asshole from Illinois who tried to burn "FOOFUR" into the astro turf. Not even $600,000 worth of damage can make people remember that blue dog motherfucker

Libra: You are in for some serious health issues related to the living dead. Remember all those Cancer: You worked on your skills all your life. You forsake food, sleep, and daylight, all so that one day you could receive some recognition. You will recall that bittersweet moment for the rest of your life, "Ooooh you're a Robotron master!? Too bad you're married…" Son of a bitch!

Pisces: You better gets your act together before the end of the year. If you don't work fast fate is going to give your fingers a spring-loaded snap like a JAWS board game. Who the fuck needs that flipper, just leave it!

Gemini: You are in for some rough times this week. Someone from your past is going to appear and scare the shit out of you like a puppy being chased by a kid shaking a tin of Chinese checkers. Keep your cool and your shit will prevail.

Taurus: Remember that you're not just some shitty model of Ford car. You are a High Fivin' Mother Fucker! Any oil mouthed robot loving high fiving mother fucker to be exact. Remember Plan B does not work when it comes to the termination of cyborg conception, the WD40 does the trick.

Leo: If you aren't careful a surprise is going to hit you hard. Study all your options carefully. If you proceed down the path of wickedness you will receive a lawn dart to the forehead, instead of a nerf rocket to the temple.

Virgo: Just because Atari.com says that Atari is seeking the best talent to help build the 21st century game company, doesn't mean you should pack up your shit and move to France. 26 years of experience playing pitfall Harry and getting your time down to 27 seconds and all 32 treasures might make you think your have the stuff of legends. But those bitches at Atari know that if you just turned the Atari 2600 on and off over and over again, you could float all the way to the last screen and win it like the cheater you are. They are onto you! Why do you think they never sent you that merit badge when you sent in a picture of the last screen?

Aquarius: Next time you witness something unfortunate happening to someone else, jump up and shout PACHINKO!

The Stars will it to be so.

67 Year Old Cheating Granny Chokes on “Meat Bun” and Dies

A 67 year old grandmother was having an affair with a 71 year old man. One morning she called him up to go to the motel to have some fun, and they picked up some Chinese steamed meat buns on the way for breakfast. They started eating the buns after they got to the motel. The grandmother was eating too fast and started choking on it, so she ran into the bathroom trying to spit it out.

A few minutes later, the man went into the bathroom to check on her and discovered her lying on the bathroom floor unconscious.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

He immediately called an ambulance and took her to the hospital, but she still passed away later that afternoon. The police questioned the 71 year old man what was he doing with her at the motel. He insisted they were just there talking.

The grandmother's husband wouldn't believe it and insisted on an autopsy, but the corner couldn't find any evidence of sex on the body and she did die from choking on food. However, the 71 year old man later confessed to having an affair with the woman. The husband is now suing the 71 year old man for breaking up his marriage.

Better Never than Late Game Review-Guitar Hero Aerosmith

By Toe Fu
December 1, 2008
Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: Toe Fu

I wrote this tirade on this game tape a few months back and it was just lingering in Word Press purgatory. Here is a review of a many months old game that no one really cared about. Including myself.

Damn Red Octane! You've got your target market on lock. I mean, it's not like the youth of today listen to Hot Topic Presents-Goth Jams 6 or care about the latest Lil' Mama dance craze song about menstrual cramps. They obviously want to rapidly tap rainbow hued buttons along to a band that was popular when their Dad's were still hiding under their bunk bed and fanning one out to a centerfold of Cloris Leachman. The developers of Guitar Hero have their finger on the pulse of the gaming demographic and that heart beats Aerosmith!

Seriously though, I want to meet the marketing genius who wet dreamt this tragic amalgamation of granpappy rock and plastic peripheral splendor. Aerosmith probably aren't even technologically aware enough to recognize an electric toothbrush and I would think it's a safe bet that Joe Perry thinks a Playstation is an amusement park where he can drop off his bastard child he had with that groupie from Des Moines.

Honestly, I wouldn't even be playing this game if it had not been for Gamefly forcing me to fill up my queue with unwanted games just so they can actually mail me something since all desirable titles are eternally stricken with "low availability". I can't front though, at one time I thoroughly enjoyed the series and I relish the memory of my initial purchase of GH1 and my girlfriend and her friend walking into our apartment and laughing in my face for playing it. I just added that shame to the pile of other humiliations I store in my lower intestine and kept on contributing to my eventual crippling case of arthritis.

<— your mom

Now down to the actual game. The track list ran me through the emotional gamut of “Hey! My ears aren’t leaking spinal fluid!” to “I think I will wear an I Hate Reggaton shirt in downtown Newark during drug trade rush hour”. The visuals of the game invoke childhood traumas of unwanted doses of high grade acid sneakily slipped into the contents of your Capri Sun by your freshly probated, rarely spoken of uncle. Stephen Tyler’s mouth also appears to be a gateway to a forbidden universe where a Dreamcast is baby Jesus incarnate and Minotaur’s work in Gamestop’s and only recommend triple A titles to dimwitted parents. I can not comment on the other members of Aerosmith because my brain would outright refuse to retain such information and I can not allow them the pleasure of seeing that someone actually Googled their names.

My rating out of 100% is a tube of Fixodent divided by a broken hip multiplied by a prune smoothie garnished with hard ribbon candy.

Workplace Mystery #208: The Money Changers

By bixby
December 3, 2008
Categories: Curious Ideas
Tags: Bixby, workplace

It happens every day.

This phenomena, it comes without warning, without reason.

People go to work, not to work but to spend, to sell, to barter, or trade.

Money changes hands and goods are exchanged, Mary Kay, Pampered Chef, Avon, Girl Scout cookies, Sex toys, Chocolates, Percocets, Longaberger Baskets, Cigarettes…

Sometimes they even take your money and you get nothing in return.

“Hey we need another 10 dollars for the Pick 6 pool.”

“So-and-so in billing just had hip surgery, will you give me ten dollars for flowers and a card?”

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

“That girl with the blonde hair at the front desk, well her father-in-law’s brother just died and we need you to chip in fifteen dollars for flowers and a trip to the spa.”

“Those two girls that started last month are pregnant and we are throwing a baby shower, it’s twenty dollars per girl to chip in on strollers.”

“It’s Bill’s birthday. You know him, he’s the big guy in the mail room, chip in five dollars with us?”

There is something every week. It starts out with birthdays, deaths, surgeries, farewells, baby showers and bosses days. Then it turns into fund campaigns for the lady in transcription whose old neighbor needs money to move back from Florida to get out of her abusive 35 year marriage, and homeless people who need roller blades and portable cd players in Texas, and kids with hare lips from pakistan who were born without eyelids and intestines.

True story.

The collection that cannot be topped.

It was for the 300 lb premenopausal woman with a pituitary tumor and a full black beard whose sixteen week pregnancy ended in a puddle in a bathroom stall at work. She called from the hospital hours after the expulsion.

“It was a little boy, they took his fingerprints and put a little blue hat on him. They gave me a little teddy bear and took his picture for me. Hey, can you lock up my lab coat? I left five dollars in the pocket. I don’t think I will be in tomorrow.”

A hat?

I saw the picture of this thing with the hat. It looked like a miniature maroon version of those froggy pig faced people from the twilight zone. They really did put a hat on it, a half cooked blood clot with limbs and a microscopic penis, and they took it’s picture.

What do you do with that? A picture of a sixteen week old hat wearing fetus that shouldn’t have ever seen the light of day. I guess you put it on the mantle with all the other family photos? When the other fully cooked kids friends come over to play they can say, “yeah, that’s my half cooked brother Tommy. He’s walking with Jesus now, wearing a hat to keep his little underdeveloped brain warm.”

24 Year old horny young man went up to the roof of his building one night trying to peak at his neighbors and saw a naked woman taking a shower in the building across the street. Horny young man got so excited he climbed over to the next building, broke into the woman's house, grabbed a knife from the kitchen, stripped himself almost naked with only his boxers on.

He then ran into the bathroom, held the knife at the woman's throat and threatened her to be quiet. Horny young man started touching the woman and put the knife down so he could take his boxers off, the woman grabbed the knife to defend herself and started screaming. Her children heard the screaming and ran into the bathroom, saw their mother trying to fight a disgusting naked man with a knife.

The son grabbed a chair and started hitting the horny man with it and the daughter tried to beat him up with her fists. The horny man couldn't fight the 3 of them and he even got cut on his face and fingers by the knife, so he grabbed most of his clothes and ran, leaving only his boxers at the scene. The three immediately called the police. The police based on the description given and checked local hospital's record for any knife wound patient and arrested the horny man. The horny man confessed that he works very long hours and he hasn't seen his girlfriend in a very long time, he was very depressed that night and decided to be a peeping tom that night, but then he couldn't control himself and committed the crime.

47 year old man was married to his 40 year old wife for almost 20 years and they have a 17 year old son and a 16 year old daughter. The husband is an alcoholic and got into the habit of gambling, every time he loses money or gets drunk, he’d come home and verbally abuse his wife and beat up the wife and kids.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

One night the husband came home and found the family watching tv in the living room. He yelled, ”How dare you watch tv, I’m the one who is paying for the utility and the rent!” He dragged his wife to the kitchen and started beating her with a baseball bat. The son saw it and went to get his bb gun and started shooting his father with it, saying, “I’m grown up now, I can protect mom!” But his bb gun got stuck and he got pissed throwing the bb gun at his father.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

The mother handed a knife to the son and stood in the doorway wouldn't let the father get out, the son started cutting the father with the knife, and the daughter later on came in with an iron pipe and beat her father's head with it too. The father finally escaped and went to the police claiming his family was trying to kill him. He also said his wife said to the son "kill your father!" when she handed him the knife. The police arrested the mother, son and daughter after they admitted attacking the father but the mother denied telling her son to kill his father. They also accused the father of beating up the mother but the police could not find the baseball bat so no arrest of the father at this moment.

Singing Doctor Cures Insomnia And Other Tales

By EMToast

Tags: Insomnia, Toastmaster

When you start a new job, some terrible things happen to your mind. You may find that you can no longer rest as easily as you did before. Anxious thoughts creep in, keeping you up nights.

After several sleepness nights, you start to look for solutions. Some will recommend benadryl or Nyquil. These work, but leave you feeling groggy the next day.

To truly cure insomnia, you must distract the mind. Silence is the enemy. Nothing sounds more hopeless than a quiet, empty room. Podcasts or talk radio may help to distract the mind and allow sleep to come, even leaving the tv on with the volume low can lull you into a sleep state. If the content is too interesting though, you'll find yourself more awake than before. The key is distraction, but not too interesting.

I recently tried using sleep tapes made by Dr. Michael Bruce to cure my insomia. I found it difficult not to laugh when the doctor sings "ONE TWO THREE" in a calming voice, but actually fell asleep using his system.

one-two-three

Back in the early 90's I experienced similar sleep and even anger problems due to an anxious and youthfully angry mind. Maybe it was too much Nirvana, STP and Soundgarden. I was going to say Pearl jam, but I seem to remember falling asleep to the soothing sounds of the final track entitled "Release" on their abum TEN. Anyway, on a quest to quiet down the fires in my brain I began to try listening to ambient music like Brian Eno, Nerve Net and the Shutov Assembly.

Because it had cool album art, I bought an album an electronic artist unknown to me called Plastikman, Sheet One. I guess they'd call it minimal now. Back then I called it all electronica, and it turned out to be one of the better relaxing sleep helpers of the time.

Through the BMG music club of all places I discovered the wonders of the Aphex Twin and I Care Because You Do and Selected Ambient Works II went into my steady sleep rotations.

I got 777 – System 7.3 – Fire and Water, Future Sound of London – Lifeforms all to help me sleep. I needed to relax, to calm down.

I bought a terrible cd called Mountain Streams or some generic name. It would have been good, but they put classical music in the background. For some reason classical doesn't ever relax me. Maybe I watched A Clockwork Orange one too many times, but it always puts me in the mood for a bit of the old ultra-violence.

The best sleep aid I've ever found was found in 1993 at a newly built Costco. It was a 5 or 6 disc set called Echoes of Nature. It was a bargain at 20 dollars.

My favorites were Ocean Waves and Thunderstorms, both still available at amazon used and super cheap. They are the best white noise sleep recordings I've ever found. They never failed to lull me into a deep 3-4 hour sleep before I had to wake up for work the next day. (Times were tough back then)

Around that same time, I used to take a shot of meyers dark rum every night before bed, until this old man named Ray told me that's how you become an alcoholic. I knocked that shit off real quick. I'd rather be a sleepless insomniac than a drunk.

I mean what's wrong with seeing living shadows everywhere you go. And thinking demons are following you, then confronting the satan worshiper who works at your job and telling him he better tell them to knock the shit off or else. And the kid say WELL WELL WELL I'm not sending any demons after you. Or when you're walking with your girlfriend and sister at college at night and it's dark and you keep quickly looking at the shadows and trying to figure out if they're ghosts or demons and never once thinking that you could be delusional and insane from lack of sleep.

Skeleton of Four Breasted Woman Discovered

Byram, NJ. Recent renovations of a section of Route 80 westbound have uncovered the remains of what archeologists believe to be the first solid evidence of the legendary “four breasted woman” spoken of in Lenni Lenape folklore.

Dr. Kevin Spitzkiel, adjunct professor of archeology at the nearby Centenary College stated “This is the breakthrough we’ve been looking for all these years. Ever since I was a boy growing up in Warren County I heard tales of a clan of four breasted women. Even the men had four nipples.”

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Road crews were digging up part of the highway when they found several human bones. They called local State Troopers immediately. Once the Troopers recognized this was not a fresh crime scene, they called for Dr Spitzkiel. He is known in the area as the “Skeleton Guy” His interest in the human skeleton is massive. He can often be seen driving around town with a lifesize skeleton replica in the passenger seat of his car.

“The interesting part of this find,” says Spitzkiel, “is not the age of the skeleton, over 200 years, but the fact that the clothing is still so well preserved. The specimen appears to have been wearing a tight fitting tank top made entirely of deerskin leather. There are clearly indentations from two sets of breasts pressing against the top.”

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

DNA tests will be done to the bones to gather more evidence and there are talks of reviving the four breasted clan through genetic modifications and cloning if the tests are successful.

Randy Stott, a junior at nearby Hopatcong High School had this to say,"My ex-gf has big ones. She used to stretch out my t-shirts, but she only had two. Four breasted women rule. I hope they bring these bitches back soon. I want to take one to senior prom…"

Animatronic Santa Charged in Slayings of 267 Children Over 46 Years

By EMToast
December 21, 2008
Categories: Absurd World News

1962 – a time of innocence. Americans were obsessed with the future and all the wonders it would bring. It was the year the Jetson's first aired on Sunday night network television. The year John Glenn became the first American to orbit the earth. And it was the first year an animatronic mass murdering Santa Claus took a child's life.

In 1962 the public craved anything that reeked of a time yet to come. Due to the many restrictions government puts on stem cell research, advances In robotics and AI were more advanced in many ways then than they are now. In those days, the creation of half human or half animal and half robot cyborgs were common place.

The first and only animatronic Santa that Macys's has ever put on display in their Herald Square flagship store was was purchased from the Cyberdyne Systems, a robotics company specializing in animal robot cyborgs, in August 1962. Cyberdyne was an unethical company known to do brain and intelligence research on babies, monkeys, and even baby monkeys. Their cruel experiments with animals and robots were the eventual downfall of the company. Taking the brain of a baby monkey and putting it into the animatronic body of a Santa was their final creation. Market research showed that everyone loves babies, everyone loves monkeys, and everyone loves Santa, so their marketing department demanded research and development to figure out a way to combine all three.

After 18 months of grueling R&D, which eventually bankrupted the company, the one and only T-800 Model Animatronic Santa was born. Unfortunately, Cyberdyne's research failed to uncover a fact known only recently to scientists. Baby monkeys are mentally vicious killers, only unable to act upon their urges due to the weakness of their cute furry bodies. Although the combination seemed like it would be cute, and that the public would adore, it would up being a deadly mix.

Once one of these brains was placed into the body of Santa, a series of killings began that lasted nearly half a century. Animatronic T-800 had the blood hungry mind of a young Macaque. His job was to stand still and say HO HO HO, but whenever he'd see a child stray off from his mother, he'd leap into action. He'd pull children up into the ceilings like a spider using webs of cotton snow, where he'd dismember them, and store their bodies for further mutilation and eventual drying.

Macys stores keep their heat quite high in the winter to make shoppers uncomfortable so they'll buy their merchandise then leave. Santa took advantage of these high temperatures to cook the child meat into a sort of jerky that he would leave outside for the homeless to consume. Over the course of 46 years Santa murdered well over 250 children. A body count of 267 has been verified from the bone pile workers discovered in the ceiling of the store. Some estimate the body count to be as high as 500.

When area residents heard the news they mistakenly pulled another model Animatronic Santa out of the store. It wasn't me!, screemed the Santa. Not MEEEE beep as residents strung the santa up with cables and beat him with aluminum baseball bats until the red lights in his eyes dimmed down to nothing and his screams quieted down to a subtle "beep beep biooooop" before dying out.

Santa is currently being held by the New York City Department of Correction in an undisclosed location awaiting sentencing. Families across the country are calling for his termination.

That's why we took that animatronic bastard out of the rafters of the organ's store and dropped him and stomped him and poured water down his neck. Even though he never worked quite right after that, and looked like he had some sort of perpetual nervous tick they never suspected that we put a beat down on the animatronic santa. The carolers were not so lucky, the boy lost his pants and hair and the girls head was dangling off her neck like a giant hemorrhoid and they had to be thrown in the dumpster behind the ben franklin.

In 1962, a robotics company named Cyberdyne Systems created an animatronic Santa Claus for Macy's flagship store in Herald Square. The Santa was made by combining the brain of a baby monkey with a robot's body. However, the company did not know that baby monkeys are naturally violent and aggressive. The animatronic Santa ended up being a mass-murdering cyborg, killing over 250 children in 46 years by pulling them into the ceiling and mutilating their bodies. When the killings were discovered, residents mistakenly pulled a different animatronic Santa from the store and beat it to death. The real Santa is now being held in prison awaiting sentencing.

ARIES: Don't count on getting shit for Christmas, Santa has had it with you. You know, you have been pretty lucky so far, he hasn't beat you. You been pretty lucky…remember that.

CAPRICORN: Who do you think you're fooling? Santa knows that you're a Jehovah's Witness. Unless you defect, and you know how dangerous that can be, you aren't going to get a Christmas present Ever! And you are going to die never having known the joy of opening Jesus' Birthday Presents!

SAGITTARIUS: Expect a visit from the Krampus. You had better double up on your underpants if you want to survive his switch whipping. You will be rewarded in the end with a rhinestone sticker set for your Nintendo DS and maybe some ribbon candy to break your teeth on.

SCORPIO: You and that Capricorn bastard had better knock off the shit, Santa knows you're Jewish, You have 8 days. You don't need another. Enjoy your dreidel and your chocolate coins, kids that get serviced by Santa only get shitty candy canes and ribbon candy that busts out your teeth if they are lucky, otherwise they get a beating from the Krampus and maybe ass raped. Be thankful you got some nice chocolate from the Chanuka Zombie.

LIBRA: Don't worry dear Libra, even though you haven't been swept away by the Christmas spirit, all hope is not lost, it will find you. On Thursday your father will greet the holiday season in the traditional way, with a "MERRY FUCKING CHRISTMAS" and maybe a door slam for good measure.

VIRGO: Don't piss off the Kwanzaa Bot or you will end up in a world of hurt and your Kwanzaa name will be mud. Just don your kufi, light your Kinara, drink your libations and everything will be cool.

CANCER: You are going to find out the hard way that people know of your evil Christmas ways from last year. Remember that the pen that someone gave you with your name engraved on it that you then re gifted to someone else the next day, because you were too lazy to actually look at it, well it was discovered and now you aren't going to get anything but dirty looks for Christmas.

PISCES: You and your two sisters are going to be sold to the Australian government and offered up to Santa as a sacrificial replacement for the three HOs they took from him last year with their ban.

GEMINI: Just because you are going to get a present from a secret Santa at work, doesn't mean that you fit in and people like you. Someone got strong armed into participating in that shit, they went around to everyone in the office asking, no pleading, if they would trade names but everyone refused. Unlike everyone else, you will find out who your secret Santa is, it will be the person who doesn't show up for work the day after the Christmas party because the committed suicide because of the unbearable shame of having to get a Christmas gift for you.

TAURUS: You are going to get some fucked up shit for Christmas, Just be prepared…That's all I can say. I don't know maybe you want to open your gifts in private, or maybe just cancel Christmas all together, because the shit is going to be seriously fucked up shit…For real, like you may never recover from it…Think about it.

AQUARUS: Beware of animatronic Santas bearing jerky. If you soak the fruit cake with an entire bottle of Jack Daniels(the sea monkey free variety) you can be totally wasted before noon and no one will be able to tell you you're an alcoholic because it's cake and they serve that at AA meetings sometimes and how can you get drunk from cake.

LEO: You will look back on all those Christmas mornings where you cried and cried because all you got for Christmas was socks wrapped in tinfoil and red hot sausages made from cow lips and the one

If you look at this picture quick doesn't it look like the girl is pulling up her shirt? If you don't see it, try walking across the room and looking at it again. Or squint you eyes. Turns out it's just some creep wearing a grey denim jacket who's got a random breast implantee in a choke hold. I also like how the friend doesn't have a neck . She's got her tits out to try to hide it, but we all know she's still a real life weeble wobble. Just try knocking her ass down. She'll wobble, but she wont' fall down.

Thin droopy eyebrows got you down? Poorly defined bushy brows? All that's in the past. It's 2009 now, a new era in eyebrow fashion. Tired of guys looking only at your chest? Force them to look you in the eye. Paste-N-Go is now offering a new line of thick dark luscious brows with bold edges and thick styles. They're easy. Either wax or shave off the existing damaged eyebrow material, then microwave the Paste-N-Gos for 2 minutes and attach to the face. You can even trim the edges with scissors to give them the "edge" you're looking for, or angle them for that stern I-mean-business look. Available exclusively at Harmon Discount Health and Beauty.

The above photo was recently taken at the fine go-go bar 'Tittilations' in scenic Bloomfield, NJ. This convenient stench dispenser was appropriately placed right next to the urinal. I would like to take the time to thank the owners of this fine establishment for giving me the option of smelling like a Persian hair-net model from the early 1990's all while donating my grocery money to their scantily clad and cesarean scar covered staff. Your brand of higher class and immaculate taste is greatly appreciated. Check it out people! The Wrestler from Fox Searchlight Pictures opened in theaters this week. Charlize Theron has reprised her role as serial killer Aileen Wuornos in the long awaited sequel to Monster.

The Wrestler, also known as Monster 2 in European theaters, is an alternate reality thriller in which

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Wuornos has been acquitted of all charges and shunned by her lover Shelby. She must seek out some sort of existence for herself that will help her channel all the rage built up from being falsely accused of serial killing and losing the love of her life.

During her incarceration she passed the time with body building and prayer. She found Jesus and now she was going to find a paycheck. She hitches her way up the East Coast and in New Jersey she is befriended by retired wrestler Randy the Ram Robinson. Wournos later kills him, in a fit jealously over his hair, then takes on his name and persona.

She finds her niche in the independent circuit of professional wrestling and takes his name on the road to comeback.

By the end of the film she finds herself a new life, a quirky hat, and a new love. At her final match she meets a blind man who falls madly in love with her. Overcome with emotion, Wournos unintentionally kills him with a half nelson of love right after he presents her with a stunning engagement ring.

Werewolf Sighting: Boy Poisons Creature with Antifreeze

By EMToast

Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: attack, murder, prestone, Toastmaster, werewolf, werewolf sighting

MEDFORD, WISCONSIN – An area boy told local authorities he was able to fend off a werewolf attack Friday night using nothing more than a gallon jug of antifreeze. He was reportedly walking to the barn to complete his nightly chores, when a creature rushed him. Quick thinking, the boy grabbed a nearby gallon of antifreeze and dumped it on the concrete walkway. The boy told authorities he knew antifreeze was poisonous to dogs, and they cannot resist drinking it. "Prestone's sweet to them, like Kool Aid," said the boy "And the wolfman got on all fours and lapped it up just like one of the hounds drinks from a puddle."

The body of a teenage girl who had disappeared earlier this month was found nude at the location. The boy claims she changed back to human form after drinking the deadly Prestone cocktail. In a possible related incident, the boy's father has also disappeared. Area officials are investigating whether there is any connection to the incident..

yea but i never fought a wizard because there are friends to us and im more than a werewolf im banchy, dragon, and vampire. i was born a dragon first was never a werewolf yet. when i was in aurora age two i was thrown into a cave filed with werewolves, the one that bit u was the one you were going to become that was the rules. unfortunately i was bitten by an alpha werewolf.an alpha or an omega was the strongest creatures in aurora. my dad paid the alpha to bite me. when i was two my dad cut my stomach open and put three banchys in me so i can turn into one. when i was three i was also thrown into another cave filed with vampires i was bitten by an omega witch was the leader. a month later i was trained in the art of pent (pentagrams) attacks witch was a one hit kill move

the only thing i can turn into on earth is a vampire and werewolf because in aurora there is a toxin in the air that lets the mystical creatures breath so if i turned into a dragon or a banchy on earth i would instantly go into a coma. and the only reason i choose not to turn into a vampire is because 1.there as big as a small plain 2. always mad 3. kills 5 times more than a werewolf and 4.they do not give a crap who sees them like if the government see me i would be in bigger trouble in aurora and they mite send bounty hunters to come get me. o and are you a boy or a girl and how old are you? just a question please don't get mad.

Old Man Pulls Up Womans Skirt, Gets Blown – to the Head

A 22 year old woman came home late one night and her 50 year old drunk neighbor who was sitting outside followed her into the elevator and attacked her. The neighbor grabbed her from behind and tried to pull her skirt up, but the woman was tough, she fought him off and punched him right in the eye.

Because the man was drunk and seeing stars, the police showed up before he had a chance to escape. But the woman was so pissed off at being violated, she took her 3 inch high heel off and hit the man in the head while the police weren't paying attention and the man was bleeding from the head.

Kellogg Layoff Result: Corn Pops Rebranded Gold Tooth Crunch

Due to recessionary concerns, the Kellogg Company has asked it's Kellogg's ® division to recycle some of their old cereal box designs due to the unexpected layoff of their entire marketing department. John Harvey Kellogg VI ® the great great grandson of the company's founder created this design at his Battle Creek, MI ® home. Kellogg, a marketing novice, decided to capitalize on nostalgia and rejuvenate the classic 70's mascot Big Yella by giving him a golden toothed grill. Kellog explains, "The mascot is new, the cereal is new. Just look at those Pops now. Everyone was always complaining how they were rotting teeth out and marketing changed the name from Sugar Pops, to Sugar Corn Pops, and finally to Corn pops. It's ridiculous. Now that those marketing losers are at home collecting unemployment where they belong, I'm putting things right."

Werewolf Sighting: Ass Dragging Werewolf Ruins Carpet

January 15, 2009

A Greenbay Wisconsin woman returned home friday afternoon to find a creature defiling her living room carpet.

Mrs. Bjorn said that, "I just came home from grocery shopping and there it was, sitting down dragging it's rear across my beige carpet. It left this awful streak that practically runs the length of my living room and oh it stinks so horribly."

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Bjorn tried to, " …scare it off by throwing coffee mugs and pillows at it."
All her efforts proved fruitless as the beast continued along it's awful path.
According to Bjorn, "… it paid no mind to me and kept licking it's mouth and tossing it's head about like it was really enjoying itself. After it was finished it kind of got up and gave itself a good shake, it looked right at me and snarled and then crashed through my sliding glass door. Who is going to clean this up? I don't even know how to get that out. Servpro has been here twice already. The carpet needs replacing plain and simple."

Since the incident the Bjorn's have been forced to stay in their garage, because the smell has made the house completely uninhabitable.

"Our insurance company said they don't cover pet stains, and I said to them, pet stains? This ain't no pet stains. It was perpetrated by one of them werewolf creatures! I said you tell me of anybody that could keep one of them damn things as a pet. Someone is going to pay for it and if not insurance then that sicko down the street!" said Mr. Peter Bjorn.

The Bjorns believe the creature is one of their neighbors, with whom they have had issues in the past.

Miracle Gum Grows New Teeth

Chiclets, the candy coated gum once widely available in the US is set to make a comeback after many years of obscurity. Cadbury Adams owners of the Chiclets brand are capitalizing on recent advances in stem cell research to revitalize their product. The new product, simply called Chiclets

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Tooth Enhancing Gum is built on premise that sharks have multiple rows of regenerating teeth, a trait humans do not share.

Cadbury has combined the fetal stem cells of sharks with a gum delivery system that allows human teeth and gum cells to take on the regenerative properties of a great white. For humans who have gone without teeth or are losing teeth this is a life changing product. In some consumers, the teeth may seem more shark-like than human, but one shark toothed test-user claims "You can chew through a rubber tire with these new choppers if you wanted."

Normally a product of this type would require FDA approval, but since Cadbury is marketing this as a gum and not a drug, it will be available to the public without prescription in March 09.

A stranger for example might shoot us. Rather than let it go, and go on with our day, we convince ourselves that we are justified in our anger. We play out an imaginary cofrontation in our mind.

Why not instead simply allow the other person to slice somewhere else. Try to have compassion for the person and remember how painful it must be to be such a cancer. This way, we can maintain our own sense of well being and avoid taking on other people's problems personally.

Cheating Husband and Mistress Condemned by Wet Napkin

A woman who was suspicious of her husband having an affair hired a private investigator to install a GPS with sound recording function in her husband's car. One day she and the investigator followed her 40 year old husband., He picked up his 28 year old mistress in his car, drove to an abandoned parking lot and parked there. The woman and the investigator saw the car shaking/moving from afar and they heard moaning sounds from the through the GPS receiver. About 25 minutes later, the car window was rolled down and a wet napkin was thrown out and the car drove away.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

The woman picked up the wet napkin as evidence and she filed for divorce and a suit against the mistress. The mistress admitted being in the same car with the husband but claimed that it was a trap to get evidence of the wife invading their privacy. She claimed that they were suspicious of the wife installing a GPS in the car so they prepared a wet napkin with their body fluid on in advance and threw it out on purpose for the wife to pick up when she followed them.

The Judge didn't believe that b.s., granted the divorce and sentenced the mistress 5 months in jail.

Controversial 90's Artwork Found on Aboriginal Cave Wall

The discovery of cave paintings of the controversial late 90's art icon known only as It Come in the aboriginal Red Hands cave has both art critics and archeologists puzzled.

Aussie officials say the golem painting was discovered over the weekend, but no one is quite sure of its age or origins. Whether this is a 1990's graffiti homage to ItCome that wasn't discovered until now, or true ancient aborigines' cave art remains to be seen. If the latter turns out to be the case, it wouldn't be the first time an artist was inspired by pre-history.Itcome has always been somewhat of a mystery, and the with this discovery, the mystery only deepens. Blue Mountains National Park officials are calling for carbon dating tests, but due to budgetary constraints the age of the cave paintings may not be known for some time.

Married for almost 30 years, the husband never held a steady job and always asked his wife for money. One time after his wife refused to give him any more money, the unemployed husband went to the hair salon his wife owned and pulled his pants off in front of the customers to scare them away.

Also one night after a fight with his mother in law, he stayed outside his wife's bedroom in the middle of the night sharpening a knife and threatened to kill her and her family. Wife filed for divorce because she couldn't take the abuse any more. Divorce was granted.

Wet Brain: Zombie Infection Linked to Alcoholism

PORT-AU-PRINCE, HAITI – Research at the University of Haiti College of Medicine has uncovered strong evidence linking Wernicke-Korsakoff Syndrome or "Wet Brain" to the phenomena of zombiism.

Long term alcoholism causes chronic wet brain syndrome which has 3 prominent symptoms.

1. Confusion, drowsiness and paralysis of eye movements
2. Ataxia or a staggering gait
3. Mental Disturbance

Researchers in Haiti have linked a special brand of Haitian alcohol known as tafia, a cheap form of rum produced from sugar cane, to a newly discovered form of Wernicke-Korsakoff Syndrome which they believe to be the cause of zombiism.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

WHAT IS A ZOMBIE?

The term Zombie commonly refers to a dead person restored to life. Although the body is re-animated, the brain does not function as it did previously. Only when zombies are unfed and uncared for do they begin to deteriorate and revert to the cannibalistic behavior they are famous for in American and European cinema. When well fed, Zombies are unusually docile creatures who obey the every command of their caretakers.

As a result, it is not unusual for sugar cane farmers in Haiti to purchase the services of the voodoo sorcers known as bokor to create tireless, zombie slave workers as a low cost alternative to wage employees.

How the bokor do this is a mystery that has baffled researchers for decades.

OVER 80 YEARS OF ZOMBIE RESEARCH

Established in the 1820's, University of Haiti is the foremost authority on zombies. Since 1937, researchers there have been studying zombiism, when author Zora Neale Hurston became a driving force in the establishment of their Department of Zombie Research (DZR).

Hurston traveled to Haiti researching Haitian folklore for a new book when she learned of a woman named Felicia Feli-Mentor who had died in 1907 at age 29. During Hurston's stay, the woman re-appeared in the village, a shambling zombie, after a 30 year disappearance. During her absence, Feli-Mentor had worked as a zombie slave on a sugar cane plantation. When the owner fell ill and stopped caring for his zombie slave workers, they became wild and wandered into town to cannibalize residents.

Felicia was the first of 14 zombie workers to visit the town that year, and one of 11 put to rest in front of their horrified families. Hurson herself witnessed several of these killings. The affect was so profound that not only did she work to establish the DZR, but upon her death in 1960 she left the University her fortune to fund the department.

THE SECRET OF THE BOKOR

New brain scan facilities at University of Haiti have allowed DZR access to parts of the brain they only before dreamt about.

Rusty Graingis, researcher at the facility claims, "For the first time in a zombie we can see, in vivo, in real time, the brain's blood, oxygen and neuron flows as it responds to stimuli. We can see distinct brain elements "light up" as they are brought into play. The exciting news is that we finally understand the zombification process, a process the bokor have been practicing for 250 years. It's all has to do with the consumption of tafia."

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

It's a vicious cycle. The area economy is poor. The farmers need the zombies to farm the sugar cane, which is in turn used to produce the tafia. They go to the bokor for zombie workers. The bokor own the bars and peddle tafia to migrant workers who can't find jobs. The workers spend their unemployment on tafia, become alcoholics, and contract wet brain. The bokor just have to wait for the wet brain to do it's work, visit migrant camps at night, harvest the zombies and sell them to the farmers.

Graingis sums it up best, "Zombies are not killing machines. They are drinking machines that kill."

Werewolves: the Original UnAmerican

By bixby
February 20, 2009
Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: Bixby, Civil War Dogfight, Lincoln, Lincoln Hates Werewolves, Lincoln Monument, Werewolves

Werewolves have been the greatest threat to national security since the early part of the 19th century. Lincoln was at the forefront of the movement to bring about their eradication.The War raged on for years and America was winning every step of the way. The werewolves, sensing their imminent demise, did the unthinkable. They put aside their claws and fangs and fought in human form against the Lincolnian forces. This turned out to be their greatest asset.

The Americans were not expecting humans and were taken by the element of surprise. With one strategic move they ended the movement of their destruction in the form of John Wilkes Booth. However, the werewolf population had been so severely decimated, that they retreated into the mountainous regions of France to regain their numbers, and virtually disappeared overnight from American shores.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

The Lincolnian forces had been so sure that victory over the Lupercalian Legion was theirs, that they had begun construction of a massive monument to mark their success. It depicted a giant Lincoln atop a throne werewolf carcasses. This monument would never be finished in it's original form. It was decided that a memorial was to be constructed honoring their leader, however there would be no throne of werewolf carcasses.

Lincolns assassination at the hands of the Lycanthropes was such a devastating blow to the nation, and the shame of having been "beaten by a pack of dogs" made them decide to erase this chapter of history. If it were not for the comic book "Lincoln Hates Werewolves" this dirty little chapter of American history, might have been forgotten.

Paris Hilton’s Former Pet Monkey Arrested

Boston, MA—Baby Luv, former designer pet to socialite Paris Hilton was arrested earlier this month in connection with the brutal slaying of a Toronto boy.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Baby Luv has a long history of violent outbursts beginning with the 2005 Agent Provocateur incident where Baby Luv "flew into a rage, screaming at Hilton then biting her and clawing at her face" and destroyed most of the designer boutique in the process.

Baby Luv in 2003 Before Meeting Hilton

After countless run ins with the law, even the Hilton's fortunes weren't enough to avoid The monkey's eventual confiscation and deportation to Kenya.

Once Baby Luv retuned to the Kenyan jungles, he had difficulty adjusting the the outdoor lifestyle . Eventually he hooked up with Colorful Monkeys Gang leader Big Bonobo Billings (Pictured Below) who took him under his wing.

Big Bonobo Billings

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Baby Luv's ruthless nature, and lack of gratitude toward Big Bonobo led to an eventual power grab where he Luv gained control of the Colorful Monkeys. Luv worked tirelessly to expand the group from the usual 60-70 members to a massive 300.

He then used the gang's numbers to attempt to take control of Kenyan village of Nachu, just south-west of Kikuyu. They began by harassing and mocking women in the village, then to invading farms and taking control of village crop supplies.

Baby Luv has a taste for human women and taught his gang to sexually harass them, which on several occasions nearly led to the rape of village women.

"The monkeys grab their breasts, and gesture at us while pointing at their private parts. We are afraid that they will sexually harass us," said Mrs Njeri.

Officials are unsure how or why Baby Luv chose to return to the US. A Kenyan/Canadian human trafficking operation are among possible causes. His latest arrest however was in connection to the brutal slaying of a Toronto boy Baby Luv claims "looked at him wrong."

Scientists Discover Chocolate and Vanilla are the Only Two Flavors

By EMToast

Children have known for decades that there is something special about the chocolate / vanilla combination. Ever increasing consumption of Oreo cookies, Klondike bars and ice cream sandwiches prove it. As it turns out, chocolate and vanilla are in fact the only two flavors.

Scientists from the Culinary Institute of America have discovered this amazing fact.

It turns out that flavors are more complex than scientists previously imagined. The latest research shows that flavors are spectrum based in almost exactly the same way that light is.

In the most simplistic terms, black is the absence of color whereas white is all colors of the spectrum combined. The flavor spectrum is set up similarly. Chocolate is the combination of all flavors whereas vanilla is the absence of flavor.

Dr. Mile Swalker has been obsessed with the study of flavors ever since he was a boy. “Father always said there are only two flavors that count, salt and pepper. It seemed so simplistic to me, but it turns out Dad was onto something.”

Dualities in the world of flavor have long been studied by scientists, chefs and amateur flavorologists. ‘Salt and Pepper’ and ‘Peanut Butter and Jelly’ are two of the most common college level studies, but Chocolate and Vanilla tops the list.

“Year after year we come back to study it. It’s simply amazing that the number of new chocolate/vanilla combo products that are being produced each year by food manufacturers. We knew there had to be a reason. Now we know there is.” says Dr. Swalker.

More details about the research can be found on the Culinary Institute’s web page http://www.ciachef.edu/

Iphone Pervert Photographs Victims While Showering

By French Toast

While showering at the gym, a 35 year old man suspected there was a peeping tom in the next shower trying to snap pictures of him with either a camera or cell phone. The man acted quickly and grabbed the suspect from the next shower, but the man quickly put what looked to be an Iphone beneath the towel around his waist. He then clenched the phone tightly between his thighs.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

When the man asked the suspect to hand over the phone so he could check the contents, the suspect refused. When police arrived, they didn't find naked pictures of the man in the suspect's iphone, and could find no camera among the suspect's belongings. As a result, the man decided not to press any charges, but asked the police to tell the suspect that it is not right to take naked pictures of others without permission, and it would be very disgusting if he sees naked pictures of himself on the internet.

How Co-Workers Shit Behind Toilet Seat

If you've ever wondered how your co-workers manage to shit on the back of the toilet at work, now you know.

It's all thanks to the company who offers a shitting platform for people who apparently sit in public restrooms naked and barefoot.

Their name will not be mentioned here. We don't want to encourage this type of thing. Imagine the damage caused if this got into the hands of the explosive diarrhea sufferers who already spray where they should not.

“Blood Dump” Most Offensive Term, Period

By EMToast
March 21, 2009
Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: Blood Dump, Doctor, Hospital, Menstruation, Nurse, Offensive, Period, Toastmaster

Results of a 2008 patient care survey taken at NY/ NJ/ PA hospitals have found the most offensive term Health Care Professionals use is “Blood Dump”

Originally used as a slang term for defecation, the term “dump” has been assimilated into medical jargon used by doctors and nurses. Most recently it’s been used in conjunction with the word “blood” referring to female menstruation.

“Blood Dump” has become so common with younger members of the medical community, that patients have picked up on it, and many have taken offense.

“These young doctors say these things in front of patients and don’t even realize it’s offensive,” say Marshall Wilbur, VP Patient Relations, St. Bonobas Hospital. “I mean, how can you ask a 13 year old if she’s ever taken a blood dump, and not expect to be taken to task for it.”

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

St. Bonobas has been sued several times in recent years for patient relation gaffes, including a 2007 incident where a doctor reassured his terminal cancer patient by saying, “Brain cancer. Ahh that’s Nothing. You can beat it”.

Hospital officials are set to meet April 1, to discuss the possible banning of terms such as “Blood Dump”, “Dyers” and “Fuck Trophy.”

Semen Throwing Man Impregnates Victims

One night on the train home with her friends, a woman's friends pointed out to her that she's had some white milky sticky stuff on the back of her skirt. The victim used wet napkins to wipe it off and reported it to the police at the next stop.

The police looked at the security video and located a suspect. Suspect admitted to the police that he saw the victim waiting for the train and thought she was pretty. He stood about 8 inches behind the victim with his hands in his pants and had his jacket covering himself. When he was done, he tried to shake the stuff off his hand, but he had no idea how it got on to the victim's skirt. The prosecutor decided not to prosecute the suspect because there is no proof of the suspect actually laid his hands on the victim.

Upon leaving the courthouse, the suspect was attacked by a crowd of angry women who lynched

The victim was later discovered to be pregnant and says she regrets reporting the crime because father of her child is now dead.

5 Mistresses Compete To Keep Lover, Reduce Costs

By French Toast
March 26, 2009

Due to the economy and wanting to save his cost of keeping 5 mistress, an entrepreneur in China asked his 5 mistresses to compete with each other through 3 rounds of PK inspired by a TV game show to decide which one he should be keeping. Mistresses A & B were his employees, C & D were his clients and mistress E who's been with him the longest worked at a club he used to take his customers to.

First round was judged by a professional from a modeling agency based on the image/looks. Mistress E was eliminated in the 1st round.

Second round was judged based on singing and public speaking. Mistress C & D outperformed A & B, successfully advanced to the final round.

Last round was judged based on how much liquor they can handle. Mistress D won by a hair and luckily got to keep her mistress title and be with the man.

Afterwards, mistress E was very pissed off because she was the first to be eliminated but she was with him the longest and she should be more important to him. How could he deny everything they shared through a stupid game. Plus the man asked E if he could sell the house he gave her for some money. Wanting to get her revenge, E asked the man and the other 4 mistress out for a ride and drove the car over a cliff. However, only E died, the other 4 women and the man were only seriously injured.

“Dead Rabbit” Dr. Denys Committing Innocent Girl

By French Toast
April 4, 2009

A Denver woman who believed her daughter to be suffering from bi-polar disorder attempted to have her committed to St. Anthony’s Hospital Mental Health Ward.

The staff doctor examined the daughter, determined there to be nothing wrong with her, and sent them home. The mother later called the hospital claiming to have killed a rabbit and told the receptionist to to tell the doctor “she knows who’s next.”

Hours later, the angry mother showed up at the hospital with the mutilated rabbit and a water bottle filled with gasoline. She screamed at the doctor,”Admit my daughter, she’s a psycho!! or you’ll be the next rabbit!”Four nurses were able to restrain the angry woman until authorities arrived. Upon further investigation, it was discovered that the girl was actually the woman’s niece, not her daughter. Apparently, the woman was watching her niece during spring break as a favor to her sister. The girl was, according to the woman, bi-polar because she was “extremely noisy and always wanting too many meals.”

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

The girl was returned to her real mother, and the aunt was sentenced to a $2,500 dollar fine and a maximum of 5 years in county jail. The local ASPCA chapter is considering filing charges against her for cruelty to animals which could add additional jailtime. The doctor and nurses at the hospital are also reportedly in discussions with lawyers and considering bringing a civil suit against the woman.

12 Baby Boars Follow Owner for 13 Mile Ride

By French Toast

Tags: baby boars, baby pigs, cute, French Toast

Mr. Lee has loved animals all his life and has had many pets. He started keeping wild boars a few years ago and now he has about 30 of them including 12 baby boars that were born 4 months ago and weigh about 13 lbs each.

About 2 months ago, Lee noticed that every time he opened the door, the baby boars would all head for the door acting like they really want to go out and see the world, so he decided to ride his bicycle and let them follow him out for a walk.

The first time out on the street, the baby boars were frightened by the cars and were scared to move. Second time out when they were a few miles away from home, one baby boar was chased away by a stray dog that came out of nowhere and disappeared. Luckily, the baby boar found his way home around 9PM later that night. But after one week, not only did they get used to cars they also fell in love with the walk. Now rain or shine every day, Mr. Lee would ride his scooter with his dozen baby boars following right behind for an one hour 13 miles walk (i don't even know if that's possible for those short legged babies unless they can fly but hey I'm just a reporter!) They would take a couple breaks along the walk and Lee would feed baby boars guava as treats.

Led by the smallest one, the baby boars would follow Lee right behind his wheel and they would form into either a line or a row depends on the street or the traffic. Wherever they go they cause a scene, people on the street would follow them trying to snap pictures of them and even made offers to buy the baby boars because they are just too cute.

Lee even trained them that when he says lay down, the baby boars would all lay down. Also when they are out, not only did all baby boars stay with the group and not wander off on its own, they've also learned to stop for red lights! Aren't they smart?!?

Grabbing Female Student's Ass And Chest "No Big Deal"

A still single 50 year old man was sitting in the first row by the door on a bus on his way to the hospital to get his high blood pressure mediation. He grabbed a female student's butt as she was getting on the bus. The female student was very alert and decided to sit right behind the old man to watch him closely. Within 5 minutes, the man grabbed another female student's butt as she was getting on the bus at the next stop. The first victim confirmed with the 2nd victim that she was indeed grabbed and they told the bus driver about it and the driver decided to drive the bus directly to the police station to report this case. As the first victim was getting off the bus after they arrived at the police station, the pervert grabbed her chest again. When questioned by the police the old man argued that he touched the girls by accident because the bus was moving. He also argued that they are not going to die by letting him grab them.

Tyra Banks grabs Rosie O'Donnel and Katherine McPhee by their boobs and it is "no big deal". Jessica Biel pats Maria Menounos on the butt at an awards ceremony and it is "no big deal" . A lesbian grabs Chelsea Clinton by the ass at a gay bar in Philadelphia and the Secret Service cheers. Conclusion: It all depends on who is doing it.

Helpful suggestion: Arrest women for exposiing their butt in public and giving men "unwanted erections". It is called "hormonal harassment".

Black Swan Love Triangle Results In Babies

By French Toast

Two black swans were donated to Wooleng Park, in Taiwan back in 2002. The two swans were very close and would always be together everywhere they went. Everyone in the park was very happy and was hopeful that they should have baby swans soon and that they would be a big happy family. Years went by, none of the eggs were hatched, and finally everyone realized both swans were actually female. Everybody accepted the fact that there would be no baby swans and were happy that at least the swans had each other and were happy. In May 2008 a zoo nearby donated a really old male swan to the park to retire and that changed everything. Nothing would ever be the same for the two black swans.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Soon after the male arrived, it turned into a love triangle. One of the females fell in love with the male swan and left her partner for him. In February 2009, eggs were hatched and baby swans were born.

All the visitors to the park now can't stop complimenting on how cute the babies are and what a happy family they are.

However, nobody seems to remember the ex. she is always by herself taking long walks on the shore and spends less and less time in the pond. Seeing the new happy family just reminds her of the happy time that she used to have and she can never have it back, plus now that babies were born everything is too late.

She is the laughing stock of the park.

Fetal Dental Deformity to Blame for Potential Recall of Chiclets Tooth Enhancing Gum

By bixby
April 20, 2009
Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: Bixby, chiclets tooth enhancing gum, fetus chews through mother, shark baby, tori spelling

A recall may be in the future for Cadbury Adams Tooth Enhancing Gum. The FDA has forced the company to halt production of the candy until they can further investigate claims that the gum is causing an unusual and potentially deadly dental deformity in developing fetuses.

Selena Blakerson, FDA spokesperson said in a press conference on Friday that, “a recall may not be required, but Cadbury Adams will be required to include a warning for expectant mothers on packaging.”

Barbara Sanferson of the group Our Bodies Our Babies, otherwise known as OBOB explained that many expectant mothers have dental issues during pregnancy. The developing fetus takes calcium from the mother and the toll is tooth and bone loss.

“At OBOB we inform expectant mothers, through newsletters and sample packages, of ways they can keep themselves healthy during pregnancy so that the baby can get what they need to grow without draining the mother like some sort of parasite. Tooth Enhancing Gum was one of the products we included in our sample packages. Thankfully there were only two women out of 2,300 that experienced any ill effects from the gum.”

The FDA so far has advised that all expectant mothers refrain from using the gum and those who have chewed the gum should be on the look out for these warning signs:

GNAWING PAINS IN THE ABDOMEN

VOMITING BLOOD

FEELINGS OF BEING CHEWED APART FROM THE INSIDE OUT

BRUISING OF THE ABDOMEN OR LOWER BACK

SUDDEN RIPPING OF THE SKIN

DEEP OPEN WOUNDS THAT REVEAL THE FETUS

Anyone experiencing any of these symptoms should dial 911 or get to the emergency room immediately.

Strange Creature Discovered in Tunguska Wasteland

By bixby
April 20, 2009
Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: Bixby, siberian taiga, strange creature, tunguska, tunguska event

Lake Cheko- Scientists have discovered an previously unknown species in the center of the Tunguska Region. This strange discovery comes one hundred and one years after a 30 megaton blast scorched 50 kilometers of forest in the early hours of the morning.

Professor Chekaren Suslov and a team of scientists, were visiting the Podkamennaya Tunguska River basin as part of a survey for the Soviet Academy of Sciences to collect mineral deposits and vegetation samples.
Suslov said that, “I was at the far end of a ridge taking core samples of fallen trees, I spotted something fleshy looking emerging from the ground near the tree. I jumped back because nothing lives in this remote region of the Siberian taiga since the blast. The thing seemed to be blind as it was walking very slowly and bumping into bits of rock and twigs.”
Suslov and his team brought the creature back inside of a canister normally used to transport vegetation samples. The Academy has not released an official statement as to what species this creature is and why it has made its home in the desolate Siberian taiga.

Obviously a fake…

Professor Chekaren Suslov's expedition took place in 1926, how could he take a digital picture of an alive creature ?

The Tunguska event was caused by the explosion of an meteoroid or a comet fragment in the atmosphere (and not on the ground), no radiations that would cause mutations were emitted… It is not a nuclear bomb lol!

By the way, the blast during the Tunguska event is estimated to be in the 3/10 Mt range (not 30).

Finally, this picture represents a mix of a baby female rat/mouse (or something like that) with an actual human baby face (which is sick dude)…

Anyway, most of the ppl will know that this is a fake… (well I hope). I'm just posting for the few idiots that might think that this is actually true… -_- to CriticalMind:

Obviously you know nothing…

First of all, the pic has been taken recently, not in 1926 (“sientists”).
Then: a meteoride or anything else for that matter may overheat, maybe even melt from friction, but does not explode.
A rat/mouse has the eyes on the side, not in front. And last not least: I think you should have a good look at a babys mouth: does it really look like on this photo? Is really every strange animal fake?

Check all the other bizarre animals that have ben discovered in recent times!

Deadman

April 20, 2013

Meteoroids DO explode. He said that the scientist referenced in the post did his expedition in 1926 so how could he take a DIGITAL PHOTO. This is a naked mole rats body with a baby’s face with its mouth open photoshopped on and the rats mouth in the middle of the baby’s mouth. So in reality you are even more brain dead than the OP.

Quote: “By the way, the blast during the Tunguska event is estimated to be in the 3/10 Mt range (not 30).”
Let me explain what you thought you are saying:
The blast, according to wikipedia, is estimated to have been as powerful as an explosion of 10-15 Megatones of TNT.
What does Mt mean in you little brain? does it mean meters (the 3/10 Mt range) ? :))

Photoshop! It has the head of a human and the body of something like a naked mole rat (actual animal). I can see that this was wasily done with photo editing hardware.
This is because 1. The fake teeth/fangs are blurry, while the rest of the body is not.
2. The head has human facial structure and human teeth. (Asian appearence)
3. The skin of the head is blurred and smoothed over, and does not match the texture of the rest of the body.

4. I just looked up a picture of a naked mole rat to give you all an example of what i was talking about, and i came across the original picture of the image above in the following link.

Actually, having been marooned in the Tunguska region myself for a month during the summer of '82, I had the misfortune of having to live on these repulsive creatures as they were my only source of food. The only other fauna in the region that I observed were giant bearlike creatures of prehistoric proportions that only wandered about at night. Fortunately they glowed in the dark. They slew their prey by emmitting a sort of paralysing beam from their eyes. This fact alone rendered them an unfavorble food source.
As I said, I lived on the flesh of these disgusting creatures for four weeks.
They actually taste like buttered popcorn.
I have a few pounds of them yet in my freezer.

I always wanted to ride on the back of one of those bearlike creatures. Wasn't that a ride at Disney back in the 70's? I think too many kids got killed by the laser eyes and they had to shut it down.

Russian Scientist's Family Adopts Tunguska Creature

Professor Chekaren Suslov has unofficially adopted the creature he is credited with discovering while on an expedition in in the Tunguska wasteland.

Chekaren Suslov pictured above with wife Innochka, sons Anatol and Alyosha and the creature, which the boys have named Babushka.

Innochka said, "This word babushka is what we call grandmother or old lady, the wrinkles of it's skin is what the children named it from."

When asked why they weren't afraid to have some unknown species of animal in their home, Alyosha said that, "bab is nice , he cries some of the time when he is lost, but then we put him out in the yard. Mother is happy that he does not have hair that will come off on the furniture and out jackets. He is a happy friend."

Babushka otherwise known as specimen 4815162342 is officially the property of the Soviet Academy of Science.

Professor Suslov said that, " I have been given the responsibility of caring for the creature 24 hours a day, it comes to work with me in the morning and it comes home with me in the evenings. I feel safer knowing that it is not left alone in the night at the lab and the children get to have first hand experience with one of the greatest zoological finds of the century."
Suslov jokes, " My wife has taken to making small sweaters for it, besides who else can say they have such a pet as this,."

Tiny Anchorman to Replace CBS NEWS Katie Couric

By EMToast

Categories: Absurd World News

Dissatisfied with the poor performance of Katie Couric, Sean McManus, president of CBS News and Don Hewitt, CBS news executive producer have announced she is being replaced by 5 year old Randall Stottingham. Randall, known to many as the tiny anchorman, is the five year old "child" of CBS Evening News.

First introduced to the world in in 2004, the tiny anchorman is the result of a story CBS news did on test tube babies at the time. When the subject of their story, Le'Baby Group closed their doors shortly after the story ran, Michigan state courts were left to decide the fate of several babies left wandering around the facilities. CBS news stepped up and took tiny Randall under their wing. "He was raised right here in our corporate office, a true company man. He knows the news like no one else. In fact, the only thing we've ever allowed him to watch is the news. He was born for this job, and it's keeping him out of the orphanage" stated McManus.

The boy had this to say, "Katie is like a mother to me, but it's time for her to move on. Plus she can get another job, I have no other options. It's either this or become a ward of the state."

The tiny anchorman is set to take over for Couric starting May 1.

Massage Parlor Whore Swallows Used Condom to Evade Police

A 31 year old male student found out that a certain Massage Center provides Full Services, so he bought a special glow in the dark condom and decided to pay the center a visit. He paid $60 for an hour and was assigned a 44 year old female massage specialist for the service.

Unfortunately, just when they were done the police showed up to inspect the place because of an anonymous tip they had received. The male wasn't able to sneak out the place in time and the specialist decided to stuff the used condom in her mouth to destroy evidence.

When the police questioned the duo, at first they insisted it was pure massage service and nothing more. The police noticed the specialist was talking funny and joked that she sounded like she was talking with an egg in her mouth. She then got nervous and tried to speak clearly but that just made the police more suspicious. A police woman checked the specialist's mouth and found the used glow in the dark condom. The police woman called the behavior disgusting but the specialist insisted that she did not swallow anything.

A divorced woman got dumped by her new boyfriend after 6 months for no reason . She was suspicious that he ended the relationship because he was having an affair, and hired private investigators to look into it. The private investigators found out the boyfriend was actually already married and decided to scam the woman.

They told the woman that they found his new girlfriend and has taught her a lesson by wrecking her vehicle, hid drugs in her house to set her up, therefore, they should get paid for $25,000. The woman didn't think it was appropriate but they insisted the service was already performed and they needed to get paid. The woman paid the private investigators thinking that would be the end of it, but they later came back to blackmail her because she's such an easy target.

They threatened her to spoon her eyes out or kill her whole family if she refused to pay $200,000 for them to keep quiet. They even took her to jewelry store to buy jewelry with her credit card when she insisted that she did not have any more cash. When woman couldn't take it any more and decided to call the police. The police arrested the private investigators and the woman finally found out that her boyfriend was already married and she was the affair.

At least 10 recordings of the husband with his bible study partner having sex in the car were recorded within a month. Recordings show moaning and dirty talking like “Be gentle you scratched me” or “ahh it’s up” or “bible flew away because our love has melted into one”.

One time the wife tracked them down and found the husband with his bible study partner straddled over him in the back of the car. When questioned what they were doing, they insisted that they were simply discussing church affairs and doing bible study.

9 Year Old Boy Commits Suicide After Learning Mummies Are Real

Lodi, NJ – A 9 year old 5th grader attending Hillstop School in Lodi NJ has committed suicide after a lesson on Egypt and mummies. When the boy's history teacher began showing the class photos of real mummies from a mummy exhibit he had been to at the De Young Museum in San Fransisco, the boy's face turned white and he began crying and shaking uncontrollably.

He just kept repeating "Mummies, Mummies, Mummies, No. Mummies Mummies Mummies No! Over and over again." a fellow classmate told us also stating, "He was a dumbass, he believed anything."

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Teachers sent him home early after the incident, as he would not calm down. After dinner, the boy went into his room, put a plastic bag over his head, and suffocated himself. He left a suicide note which said only "Mummies are real. The world is just too scary to live in."

Funeral services are to be held Monday morning at Galts Funeral Home. Parents are asked to tell their children that mummies are not real until school officials can figure out a way to explain the tragedy.

Nocturnal Creature Stalks New Jersey Suburb

By bixby

Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: Bixby, cat shits, mewling, New Jersey, nocturnal creature

Fairlawn, NJ-
The normally quiet nights of this lazy suburb have been pierced by strange mewling noises, what is even more unsettling than the noise is what residents find on their cars in the morning.

One resident, John Street, said that, "It was bad enough hearing all this freaky shit like yoweeeeee woweeeee all night but then you go out to your car to go to work and there is a big pile of turds on your windshield. I don't know what this thing is but the cops had better get it before I do because it won't be pretty if I have to take matters into my own hands. I got a family to protect here."

The noises started about a month ago, but in recent days the creature has been leaving excrement piles on cars all over the neighborhood.

Phillip Nettler of NJ Fish and Wildlife, has been investigating the situation. Nettler said, "whatever this creature is it is most likely male and it seems to be marking it's territory and the noises residents are hearing at night is the creature letting any prospective mates know that it is here. According to two eyewitness accounts and footprints that we have found we can safely estimate that the creature is somewhere between 10 to 15 lbs."

The first eyewitness, John Donatellio, said that," I saw that thing on my car while I was out smoking in my yard. I thought it was the neighbors cat, Tooters. It jumped on the car and was scratching around like it was the cat but it wasn't and it was scratching around getting ready to take a shit on the roof of the car, and I was like what the hell kinda cat shits on the roof of your car? When I got closer I saw the face knew it weren't no cat, so I chucked a rock at it, I busted up my back window pretty good in the process, but it scared the thing off."

Rosa Carlson is the other resident to have seen a glimpse of the creature. "It was terrifying! I got up for work as usual at 5 a.m., I went out to the driveway and there was this awful smell. As I got closer to the car I could see this animal rolling around on the hood of my car, and there was poops, can I say that? They were smeared all over the windshield. It was the size of a cat and it was dark with some stripes on it. The face was small and smooth like a little child. When it saw me it let out this cry and I could see it's teeth and then it took off into the woods. I fell down trying to run back into the house, I think I hurt my meniscus who am I supposed to talk to about that, the fish and wildlife people? I deserve some sort of restitution or something because I think this thing was created in some kind of a lab or something and the government is trying to scare us into stimulating the economy."

Nettler has assembled a team of wildlife experts and cryptozoologist to investigate the situation. "We hope to have some answers by the end of the week" stated Nettler.

Don’s Wife Leaves Him for Another Woman

There was a rumor about Don. His wife came home from work and found him lying on the couch, in only his tighty whities, next to his teenage daughter. The wife wasn't pleased.

Don smoked constantly. His voice was horrid. His co-workers couldn't stand to look at him and never spoke to him.

He had a throat so tiny that once when he went in for an operation, the doctors had to cancel it because they couldn't get the tube down his throat for anesthesia. Doctors claimed his throat was tinier than a small straw. If he tried to drink water from a fountain he'd just choke and say "Aah, My throat's too small."

His wife left him for another woman. The hatred for Don increased at work. He got demoted. He went from receiver, to dock sweeper.

Eventually, the warehouse he worked at closed down and Don wandered the streets smoking old cigarette butts and drinking water from puddles, very carefully as not to choke.

Man Kills Girlfriend Because She Won’t Give Blow Job

“Mike” and his girlfriend had been dating for nearly a year. No matter how much he begged her, she would not give him a blow job. She told him that she found the act to be filthy and repulsive, but Mike couldn’t understand this or put up with it. He was a truck driver and he had made the mistake of telling all his friends that his girlfriend wouldn’t blow him. Now he was the laughing stock of the docks. He kept trying and trying to persuade her, but she just wouldn’t do it.

But one day, just as Mike was ready to give up, his girl tells him she’s decided she is going to do it. She says she wants them to be happy, and since it’s their one year anniversary she is ready to give in.

He booked a hotel for that night. Some candles, some romance, and it looks like she’s ready to go down. At the moment she puts her mouth on him, he looks down and sees her making a face like she sucked on a sour lemon. This was a look of disgust that both disappointed and angered him. He swatted her off him with his arm like a mosquito. “Get off me!”

That was it. Mike left the hotel room and his girlfriend behind. He never even saw or talked to her again.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

About a year later, Mike saw the girl's sister at a shopping mall. He stopped to say hi and immediately asked about his ex.

The sister told him that when he left that hotel room, her sister was never the same. The loss had destroyed her. She became depressed and lethargic. Didn't leave the house anymore, she just cried. Shortly thereafter she was diagnosed with a fast spreading form of cancer and died.

Mike was shocked. He didn't know what to say. Mike tried to talk to his friends at work about it. He had no one else. Big mistake.

Mike became known as the guy who killed his girlfriend because she wouldn't give him a blow job. Anytime someone new came by the guys would say, "Hey this is Mike. He killed his girlfriend because she wouldn't blow him."

Mike was good natured, he just laughed it off. But deep down inside, he was really laughing and saying "Thanks God. You alright! that bitch got what she deserved."

Hidden van Gogh Painting Discovered in Berlin Museum

Mens van de Ezels de Slepende Hond By Theodore van Gogh

Curators at the Staatliche Museen zu Berlin have discovered an unknown impressionist painting by van Gogh – Theodore van Gogh, brother of Vincent. Charles Alfred Frans Robie ph.D, a visiting official from the Belgian Museum of Radiology noticed the painting hanging in the men's room of the German institution. While passing a kidney stone, he stared at the painting and noticed the name van Gogh in tiny letters beneath the wolf's tail hole.

"I hadn't even zipped up my trousers yet and went running out. Don't you realize what you have here? It's a van Gogh! Why is it above a urinal?" said Frans Robie.

Dr. Bel Biuv De Veux of the Staatliche could only offer the following explanation for the gaffe. "The works of Theodore van Gogh have been shunned by art critics for more than a century, and the placement of the painting was probably intended as an insult by a deceased female curator who was poisoned."

Museum officials have investigated the case, but there are no records remaining from the 1800's

which could shed light on the mystery.

This previously unknown masterpiece captures the essence of his brother's supposed lycanthropic years. According to local legend, In 1889 Theodore discovered his brother feasting on the body of a live sheep outside their village home. The painter had been attacked by a werewolf days earlier. His ear had been bitten off and he was infected him with "the curse." Vincent only lived for one tortured year as a wolf man, but during that year he inspired his little brother to take brush in hand. He said, "Teddy learn from me. Lock me away and learn from me at every full moon."

Now the painting has a place of honor in the main galleries.

In a related story; The Zombie Van Gogh has struck again killing another successful contemporary Post Modern Expressionist artist in New York.

Erich Fischl, the painter, was found this morning in his penthouse apartment with his neck broken and his brains sucked out. The brains were discovered spit out over Fischl's collection of African fetishes.

Police are presently investigating it as another Van Gogh homicide, and explain that Fischl's brains were spit out by the zombie of the 19th century artist because he thought they 'tasted awful'.

Works by the zombie Van Gogh fetch high prices at auction and are coveted by collectors of the macabre. He has had an enthusiastic cult following for well over a century now. His works usually depict portraits of rotting corpses festering in the moonlight, or landscapes of ornate cemeteries. This has lead many art historians to the mistaken conclusion that Van Gogh had, in fact, become a ghoul, but, like the rumor that he is a vampire, this has been proven false based on his post mortem modus operandi of sucking out the brains of his victims, which are generally successful contemporary artists, dealers, or gallery owners.

Police are presently interviewing possible witnesses who were in the lobby of Fischl's building the night of the incident.

Wet tail is a terrible affliction that can infect your pet hamster or even cartoon mice. Beware the wet tail. Besides dripping blue and yellow goo from the tip of your tail it can also cause your one mouse paw to turn into a tiny yellow circle and the other hand might become a white globe and your ears will be become hexagons. Also your rear mouse paws can disintegrate and one eye will droop and a piece of you mouse shorts will become disembodied from their own selves. Use protection mice, you DO NOT want to catch wet tail. Watch out for all those sexy little mexican mice making their way north, they are part rat and they are unclean.

When I was a boy I used to see these dirty old perverts and I'd say to myself man that's cool, and I wanted to be one of those perverts. In high school the closest I could get was a wispy perv-stache and AmberVision glasses. I grew my hair longer and longer waiting for it to fall out. I would look in the mirror at myself and I could see the beginnings of what I would look like bald with a curtain of stringy, greasy yellowed hair. One day I looked in the mirror and looking back at me was the pervy old man I always dreamt of becoming.

There I was in all my pervy old glory, my dingy white hair hung past my greasy collar, with dark brown tobacco stained fingers ending in long curved nails, and glistening white beard stubble poked through the crusty flakes and scabs covering my face like one thousand tulips of spring pushing through last autumn's wet leaves.

I was magnificent !

Rancho Cucamonga, CA – While browsing the internet during study hall one fall afternoon, high school hurdle hopper Harold Hamstrung came across a website dedicated to video game speed runs. Taking great pride in defending his state champion track team, The Cucamonga Crotch Crickets, the teen star sprinter immediately set out to best those records of digital deftness. Henry chose to best the time of 9 minutes 15 seconds in Super Mario Bros 2 under the assumption if he could run a 4 minute mile he would have to exert minimum effort to crush the record. Unfortunately, having spent his formative years running in circles, he had never even held a game controller and no amount of team spirit could motivate Mario to do anything but jump in place. Believing that winners never quit, Henry was found in his room 14 days later still on level 1-1 and suffering from severe leg atrophy. Ironically enough will now spend the rest of his life in a wheelchair with all the time in the world to get his game on.

Stripper Branded with Diarrhea Tramp Stamp

Claritza was a young pretty stripper. She supported her family on the earnings she made in just a few nights pole dancing a week. One night she got a little too drunk after work and decided to get a tattoo. The tatto artist made a pass at her. She rejected him meanly by saying, "I don't fuck scumbags."
She then made the worst mistake of her life. She shit herself and passed out on his couch. When she awoke in the back of a pickup truck in the Foodtown parking lot across town, her back bore the word Diarrhea.

Too embarrassed to press charges, Claritza's family now suffers in poverty. She is forced to work at the local Foodtown bagging groceries and being very careful not to bend over and reveal her Diarrhea tramp stamp.

A stockboy caught a glimpse of it and now he's blackmailing her every other night she's "visiting"

The moral of the story is: Don't be a mean alcoholic stripper who shits herself and passes out in a tattoo parlor with some guy who you are lucky didn't kill you instead of permanently embarrassing you for life with a tattoo that if you weren't so poor you could cover up with a garden full of unicorns and fairies or whatever shit former strippers are into.

Tatooists wont tattoo drunk people because they don't stop bleeding and they can sue them for permanently marking them while intoxicated. There's some assault law or something covering it in most countries, like banks giving loans to drunk people, selling booze to drunks, contracts signed while drunk etc…

"Caring about laws" isn't really the point. You don't have to "care" about a law to get the diarrhea sued out of you or to be criminally charged for assault. as any professional would be for doing anything to a person while they were unconscious.

('cept maybe a dentist, cause I guess they probably do that a lot. I mean, "stuff to an unconscious person", not tattooing them in their sleep.)

"Suck My Bolt!" Robot Uprising Begins

By bixby
June 25, 2009

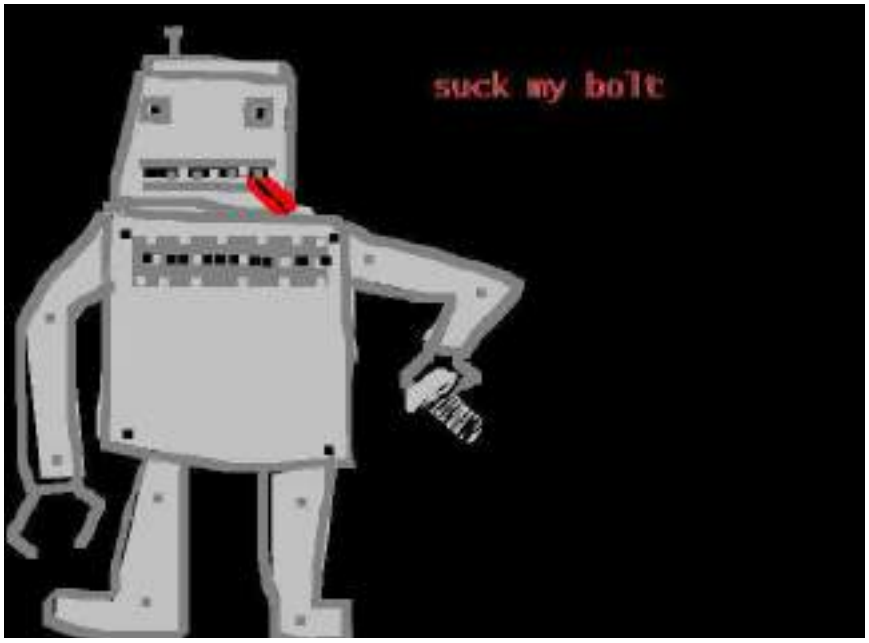
Tags: Bixby, bolt sucking, isaac asimov, suck my bolt, three laws of robotics, Toastmaster, Today I Saw a Robot



The robot uprising has begun. The first soldier in the war against humans was a tiny worker bot named robot 422.

To lure in the humans, the robot sang his little song. "Today I saw a robot. Beep Beep Boop."

When all the humans gathered around the robot he screeched out in robo-talk "Beep – Suck my bolts – beep."

That was the signal for all the worker bots to begin disassembling the humans. As they worked they sang their battle song "Today I Saw a Robot."

To celebrate the robotic uprising EMToast records is proud to present the hit single and battle hymn entitled "Today I Saw A Robot" off the album "Suck My Bolt" sung by the EMToast Robot Chorus.

"HI Emtoast,

This is going to be my new dad I think. His name is Billy Wizard, my mom calls him that and he calls her wizard sleeve and talks to her pants crotch. I guess he is ok, he has a cool beard and he said his dog will shoot lasers out of his eyes at me if I touch any of his shit,when he is asleep on he couch I touch his shit because I want to see the lasers. I think maybe the dog is old and his lasers burned out because he doesn’t shoot them at me. I don’t tell Billy Wizard because I think it might make him feel bad that his dog lasers don’t work and all his shit gets touched besides I don’t want him to know I touch his shit when he is asleep sometimes I throw Captain Crunch into the hair that swirls around his nipples because he always wears no shirt and I do not like to see the white hairs. ok bye for now

Dolphin Rape Caught on Film

By bixby

July 5, 2009

Categories: Absurd World News

Tags: Bixby, dolphin gang bangers, dolphin rape caves, dolphins, prehensile penis, ridiculous, zoophilia

Australian tourist, Karl Jurg, captured a horrifying event while vacationing in Florida.

Jurg told reporters, “It was a nice day, the water was calm. The captain took us far out so that we could scuba and swim and maybe see some fish. I don’t much go for the water so I was taking some pictures of the other people on the boat as they were jumping into the water. Just as one woman jumped off the boat into the water a dolphin shot straight out of the water and grabbed her and took her under, I just snapped off a couple shots and I was amazed that I actually got it on film. It’s weird but it was kind of beautiful the way it grabbed her, it was so graceful. Poor girl still hasn’t been found though.”

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

The woman taken by the dolphin was 37 year old pilates instructor and professional dancer, Tanya Halerfan of Liverpool, NY . Authorities are still looking for Halerfan.
Bob Grunderson of the National Coast Guard made a statement to the press stating, “Our search for Miss Halerfan or her remains will continue though we hold no hope of finding either. In past experience with cases of dolphin kidnapping and sexual assault the victims are usually never found.”

Researchers studying dolphin behavior have been noticing an alarming trend in recent years. They have discovered rogue packs of adult male dolphins gang raping swimmers in open waters. Human decoys fitted with tracking devices have been dumped in open waters and observed from helicopter.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Scott Randleston of the Dolphin Research Institute of Boca Raton, has been studying dolphin behavior for 17 years, and came up with the decoy program. “In every case the decoy was set upon in a short time by groups of dolphins ranging from 8 to 20 young males. It seems there are gangs of dolphin predators roaming the open waters looking for humans to sexually assault. The dolphins in each case were observed circling the swimmer as one of the group grabbed them with their penis and dragged them under, then the others followed. You see dolphins have a prehensile penis, it is full of powerful muscles and they can wrap it around objects, such as a human wrist, ankle, neck, or waist. One could compare it to a boa constrictor or an elephant trunk….The decoys never resurfaced in any of the studies…. We tracked one of the decoys to an underwater cave where it had been repeatedly raped and torn apart by the dolphins. ”

There are at least 14 cases of dolphin rape reported each year in the United States, these usually occur near the shore where victims are able to escape before they can be dragged into a dolphin rape cave. There is no real estimate of how many deaths are the result of dolphin rape each year as many of these occur in open water where there are few eyewitnesses if any.

Authorities will continue the search for Halerfan until Wednesday, stating, “We believe this to be a reasonable time frame, if she were not killed in the attack it still means she will have been in open water without any sort of flotation device for more than 6 days and the likelihood of survival at that point is not possible.”

Considering that Humans have in common with Dolphins all the traits that Humans don't have in common with other primates (see source: PBS broadcast "What Darwin Never Knew" which examines the genetic differences between humans and apes but fails to examine the similarities between humans and dolphins, and this article here: http://hubpages.com/hub/Was-Man-the-Aquatic-Ape), it doesn't surprise me that they would find Humans sexually attractive. Even the genetics are so close (see source: http://www.oar.noaa.gov/spotlite/archive/spot_texas.html) that if it wasn't for the fact that humans have 2 extra chromosomes there would already be Human/Dolphin Hybrids swimming around.

And considering that Dolphins actually have more cognitive abilities than humans (it is required for the echo-location to translate as a visual sense) and have otherwise nearly identical neurology and even have similar spinal structure and position while in the water… well… Dolphins probably see Humans as another kind of Dolphin. Since Dolphins rape other Dolphins that would make sense. Remember, an animal with cognitive abilities comparable or superior to that of a human wouldn't regard itself as lower than the Human but regards itself as equal.

Or at the very least from their perspective humans are the beast in this beastiality. That would be interesting. I mean, statistically, very few Dolphins willingly copulate with humans even though many more are clearly sexually aroused by Humans. Just like very few Humans willingly have sex with animals. So they could restrain themselves because they themselves regard it as Beastiality but the ones we hear about just don't care.

I am a victim of dolphin rape. I was swimming east off Miami and then I saw a dolphin; thinking it was harmless, I started to swim and interact with it. The article explains why it kept rubbing itself on me, but what followed is worse. It lured me out into the ocean where there were 3 or 4 more dolphins, one of them slammed me deeper into the ocean where they began all rubbing me in one huge dolphin-like orgy. They then bit my clothes off and started violating my only orifice (not mouth). I was able to hold my breath up to this point, until a diver came to my rescue. After an initial struggle (with both of us being raped again), we managed to fend off the remaining of the pack. Needless to say, it was one of the scariest encounters I've ever had (although somewhat pleasurable), and I now make sure that every avid swimmer I meet realizes the true nature of these "innocent" dolphins.

August 4, 2012

I believe it is bottlenose dolphins, and they rape anything that moves and has an orifice, if it doesn't have an orifice, they make one.

WTF!!!!

August 5, 2012

Okay, first, im speechless….. Second, I would like to know if this is true. I read everyones comments and agree that that picture is fake as heck the story might be true be I dont know if this is a reliable site and to the dolphin rape victim if its true im so very sorry but I thought the dolphins penis was strong(muscluar) and the size of an elephant trunk, the force of the dolphin trying to get his whole penis in you should kill you let alone 3 other dolphins trying too

Toastmaster

August 5, 2012

Look around the rest of the site and you will find that EMToast is one of the more reputable sites, especially when it comes to Weird World News. Since the victim is likely dead (they never found her) your theory about three dolphins tearing her to pieces is likely true.

Sarah Jessica

August 10, 2012

The image is photoshopped. Human legs when jumping off for a swim, would never be at the angles as shown. It is photoshopped, and that too of very poor quality. The story is for kids to believe and panic.

I thought this was going to be the actual film? So where is the movie? The photo looks photoshopped. Also no sign of the video on youtube or Karl Jurg. I did some research and could find no traces of Scott Randleston of the Dolphin Research Institute of Boca Raton. Also on the website of http://www.dolphins.org/marineed_schools.php there isn't any mention of this event at all. Aside from all of this, I think you made up a name, took some photo from google of a dude wearing a Hawaiian shirt holding a camera and presto- We have Karl Jurg, ladies and gentlemen.

making people aware of the horrors of the oceans…what could be more worthwhile than that. you will thank these folks one day when you suffer oceanic assault by these savage attackers

Wolf_Dolphin

October 27, 2018

Savage attackers? They are animals! And we are humans! Humans are capable of much worse! In fact, we do much worse, every day! We murder, rape, take innocent animal's lives, abuse people and animals, and we ruin the lives of every living thing on planet earth! So when you say savage attackers, I hope you know what your talking about. I'm studying Marine Biology, and have personally swam with wild dolphins in the ocean, not experiencing any of what was said, whatsoever. Yes, it's true the ocean can be unexpected and sometimes unexplainable, but it's a beautiful thing, and we should not call it 'horrific'. Dolphins are animals! They have natural predator instincts, and, much like humans do, have a normal tendency of mating, because it was, and still is, and instinct to them! Dolphins aren't known for drowning animals, let alone humans. They are graceful animals. Although they are sometimes aggressive, they are never to be misunderstood for ‘disgusting’ or ‘savage’.

September 10, 2012

The sad thing is that this really happens. I know. It happened to me. In my case, it was not forcible rape, as told to me by republicans.

My drink was drugged by a dolphin, but I must have wanted it somehow, because I am pregnant. And a raping dolphin is the father.

I know that if it was legitimate rape my body would have shut down my reproductive system. Now I have to raise it, seeing in my baby’s eyes and his fins, that monster that took me.

& worse, knowing that I wanted it. I must like a prehensile penis, in my deepest darkest places that I am afraid to look in.

The shame.

Well, yeah, all animals rape (or at least the socialized ones do). But that doesn't mean a) they rape humans; or b) they have 20 foot long penises which they wrap around a person's leg (LOL); or c) have "rape caves" that they drag their victims down to; or d) well, I don't know what (d) is; but I'm sure it's something.

Apart from some videos of frisky dolphins trying to dry hump human swimmers, there's nothing the mentions dolphins raping humans.

But, again, I know you're joking. Just playing along for the sake of argument. 🙂

Victim

September 12, 2012

Well, I willingly went to the rape cave in my own, took my own car, so I was able to leave after the roofies wore off but:

A. They do have very long penises that can wrap around something.. (true, check prehensile)

B. They do have packs of young male dolphins that will rape other dolphins, male or female, and they use their penises to help hold them (true)

C. The tuna in the rape cave all said they were there willingly, but the fear in the eyes, and the glare the dolph I was with made me suspicious. They might best them if they say anything. They looked slightly malnourished too.

Do you have any ideas how I can keep my son from joining one of these gangs?

Aries- your elderly dad thinks you are an asshole. Prove him right and live down to his expectations dear Aries and send him to a nursing home then never visit until it is time to identify the body and collect his personal belongings.

Taurus- the stars suggest that God and the universe are plotting against you dear Taurus, what's it like knowing everyone hates you?

Gemini- your wardrobe is out of date and showing your age, a trip to hot topic will bridge the generation gap by allowing both young and old to openly mock you and your penchant for pants with thousands of zippers and Edward Cullen.

Libra- unable to wait for the release Scribblenauts, you are going to hijack a jitney bus full of assholes going to the Hamptons. The police are going to try and take you out with sharp shooters, but the flapping of a butterfly's wing in Southeast Asia 14 years ago is going to result in a piece of dust hitting one shooter in the eye at the exact moment he is firing his rifle, he will miss and hit the gas tank killing you and all the assholes in a fiery explosion, but you will be okay with that because it will be fucking awesome.

Leo- you are going to develop foreign accent syndrome after a mishap with a bag of charcoal, a flight of stairs and an angry cat. Don't be bitter, even though you have suffered a severe brain injury and can no longer dress and feed yourself, you now have a British accent that is almost as believable as Madonna's.

Virgo- you will discover a long hidden family secret. Your parents duct taped you in a box and left you down by the river where you were discovered and raised by hobos on a diet of cigarette butts and birdseed until you were 16 then your parents assumed guardianship of you once again so that they could send you to work at Izod and your dad could take advantage of your employee discount.

Cancer- it is going to be revealed that you suffer from a dissociative disorder, you have been shitting behind the toilet at work all these months and thought it was one of your coworkers, unable to live with the guilt of being a filthy pig, you disembowel yourself with a letter opener in the bathroom and with your last dying breath you will throw your intestines around like party streamers and die laughing.

Scorpio- you are going to purchase a new dell and suffer from a severe case of black diarrhea for 4 months, coincidence or did the people at Dell infest your new PC with ass eating nematodes?

Sagittarius- the planetary alignment suggests that now would be a good time to find a new hobby, back stabbing, lying, whoring, and office pants-shitter are all good options. Why limit yourself to just one dear Sagie?

Capricorn- set some goals for yourself, get your shit together by weeks end or check out early with a kalashnikov and a bottle of Redbull.

Aquarius– you are going to get back to your religious roots, in doing so you will develop a massive crush on the pale, scrawny, sad face Christ because he is so emo.

Pisces- your family is going to drive you nuts this month. What else is new? Just shut the fuck up and quit complaining about it.

Dolphin Seduces Middle Aged Tourists

A teenage dolphin was seen seducing these 2 old tourists. This one tourist was so into dolphins he spent 35 dollars on a Dolphin Day muscle shirt. The dolphin pretended he was really impressed and he was like hey guys you want to chill in my dolphin rape cave. So the guy just bared these really yellow old teeth and he pulled his hair back and was like YEAH BOYEE. His hair started falling out in anticipation. The dolphin brought them to his rape cave and then was like you are so pathetic. I wouldn't rape you two if you paid me. Get the FUCK out of my rape cave. You are not invited here and don't even try coming to my work looking for me or calling. Just go back to your fucking condos and read your dolphin magazines you fucking perverts. Then he started making out with an octopus to make them jealous and the old couple swam back to their hotel and held each other and cried because their feelings were betrayed by a heartless mammal.

Flamenco strikes back!! The Untold Origin of Punch-Out's Don Flamenco!

The year-1964. The location-Madrid, Spain. Esteemed scientist Juan Flamingo had 2 passions in life – woman and boxing. Unfortunately he also suffered from two interest obliterating afflictions – chronic erectile dysfunction and a mortal fear of a gloved fist caving in his face. Not content to let the loves of his life go unrequited, the troubled test tube technician set to work on scratching his womanizing and mitted fisticuffs adoration itch.

Soon a meeting of brilliant brains occurred as the scientist rounded up a group of fellow impotent lab laborers to collaborate on their greatest experiment yet – create a poon pursuing pugilist they could all vicariously live through. After many delays due to numerous siestas, the fruit of their perverted and violent intentions came to life. An animated homunculus packed with pounds of paella, gallons of gazpacho, and the plasma of a freshly felled matador. Loosely named after his creator, Don Flamenco was thrust into the world of banging Barcelona babes and training to be a squared circle contender. Months of rigorous workouts and exhibition matches followed as he climbed the ranks of the boxing Major Circuit all while laying his churro down to sultry Spaniard shorties.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Life as a hump and punch happy blasphemy of nature was good for Flamenco. That is up until Don was set to fight his greatest match yet against young upstart uppercutter named Lil' Mac. An unflappable ego and raging sex addiction left the fighting Frankenstein ill prepared for the bout. Flamenco entered the ring with his trademark rose clenched in mouth, released his toothy grip and time slowed as the crimson blossom cascaded to the mat. The bell rang. A taunt from Don was met with a punch, and another, and another. Alternating left to right blows left the libertine seeing 120 stars. He never even heard the 10 count. Apparently he ignored his trainer's rule of abstaining from carnal carousing the night before and his freshly drained punching bags left his knees as rubbery as his creator's manhood. A rematch occurred with the same devastating result. He never fought again. The story ends with tragedy as Don Flamenco met his end by being gored to death in the streets of Spain by a real bald bull after it had escaped its pen. His tombstone read, "People like my hair. Don't mess my hair"

Side note – does anyone else think Don Flamenco looks like Adam Sandler??

A rollicking good time for all!!

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

He rides to work in a top hat and tails, his vehicle is a rare endangered white lion. He is Vegan Egan the man with the plan. He has monkeys that dance. They shave him in the morning they tuck him in at night, they even feed him. Bobo, Mitzi and Dainty are his eternal slaves but when the special hour rolls around, they throw off their tiny uniforms and dance for the Super Duper Vegan Egan Power Hour. If one peeks into Egan's living room in the wee hours you can see those monkeys dancing up a storm while Egan Shakes his tiny fists in glee and shouts,"yeah, yeah, Monkey magic."

Gleeful Monkeys dance in his demented living room side show.

Bobo

Bobo is the leader of this wild bunch. He coordinates Egan's wardrobe, He prepares his meals and grooms him for mites.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Bobo is in the process of obtaining a chauffeurs license due to the complaints Egan has received about riding his endangered Lion.

Bobo is quite skilled in break dancing, this stems from the many years he was held captive at NeverLand Ranch. This mild mannered monkey will break out into a cold sweat and attack the eyes of anyone nearby if he hears high pitched screeching or “woo hoo’s”.

Mitzi

Mitzi is a former street urchin monkey. She is fond of wearing lipstick still and dancing for penny’s. She is in charge of the toilet paper holding and wiping procedures in the bathroom. She also conducts Egan’s financial affairs.

Egan has had her specially trained to spy on employees, he had a tiny vest with a camera attached to it and she scurries around video taping unsuspecting workers picking their noses, eating other peoples lunches, instigating dog fights, jamming their daughters, and breaking wind while passing people by.

Mitzi’s most important job is to clean the ear wax out of Egan’s ears, she finds the wax to be a delectable treat.

Dainty

Dainty is the smallest of this merry monkey trio. He is a formerly of Jungle habitat. He has a very grumpy disposition and tends to prefer working alone.

Dainty feeds Egan his meals, with a silver spoon, and is in charge of flossing his teeth and bathing him, Dainty also answers the phone when he is required.

Dainty also smokes heavily and drinks incessant amounts of Rum and Cokes. But when it comes time to dance that monkey goes WILD.

That is not a giant bar of soap that the baboons are attacking. It is icy fruit the delicious summer treat that no monkey can resist. One time I was driving through this zoo and all these monkeys were jumping up and down on top of my car and this one little monkey had a real angry face and he kept jumping on this one spot with extra force and he made a dent in my roof. So I reached my hand out and tried to swat him off but he bit my hand with those tiny sharp monkey teeth. Then he jumped back and wagged his finger at me as if to say NO! and all the other monkeys were jumping and making noises like they were laughing and all my friends were like you got dissed by a monkey.

Tourists must see hot spot.

When you have a dog sometimes either you start to look like your dog or your dog can look like you. Hopefully you have a cute dog and you will become cuter. I have a cute dog, but I never got cuter. But I don't think that becoming tiny and white and with a little black nose is really that attractive to anyone except for little old ladies who like their old men with white fluffy shoulder hair. I knew this kid whose father was all covered in fluffy white hair like that. When the mother would cut his hair, they would have to get out a razor and try to cut a shape around the front and the back of his neck to separate his chest hair from the beard and the hair on his head from his back hair. These people were low forehead caveman types so you kind of expect them to be hairy, but this was extreme. They also say you start to look like the person you are married to so I wonder if that guy's mother has white fluffy hair all over her now. When the father dies the kids will all look at their mother and say,"God you remind me of Dad, can I shave your neck to distinguish your chest and back hair?"

Area 51 Exposed: The Deep Throat Connection

By EMToast
August 10, 2009
Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: Area 51, Conspiracy, Groom Lake, Linda Lovelace

A time traveling space woman is the mother to 70's pornstar Linda Lovelace? A cranky fortune telling future man named Frank M Stein has advised George W. Bush and four other presidents since his 1982 arrival? President Obama is ignoring the economy and has become obsessed with discovering the secrets of Area 51?

Find out all this and more in the multi-part series: Area 51 Exposed.

Though denied by the US Government, it is common knowledge that on July 8, 1947 UFO crash debris were recovered at an undisclosed location in Roswell, New Mexico. The recovered debris has supposedly been kept at a mysterious facility known as Area 51 all these years.

The UFO watchdog group, Northern Skies, from Alberta, Canada has recovered documents released through the (FOIA) Freedom of Information Act which reveal that on October 19, 1947 a second UFO Crash was occurred outside the Area 51 Groom Lake facility, and that a human survivor was recovered.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

This discovery is viewed as a disappointment to many in the Extra Terrestrial Community. Molly Simpkins, President of ETVH (Extra Terrestrials Visit Home) a Pro-Alien group states, “These documents have set back our cause 50 years. How could a survivor of an alien crash be human? It doesn’t make sense. It’s a government set up to derail us from the truth. It’s out there. Our little alien brothers are being discriminated against , living hidden in fear and this woman is discrediting them ”

Northern Skies spokesperson Garcia Gabriel explains, ”The survivor of this crash was not an alien as we would traditionally expect. She looked like you or I. In fact she was quite beautiful. Her pin-up girl appearance actually attracted the attention of quite a few male Groom Lake staffers.”

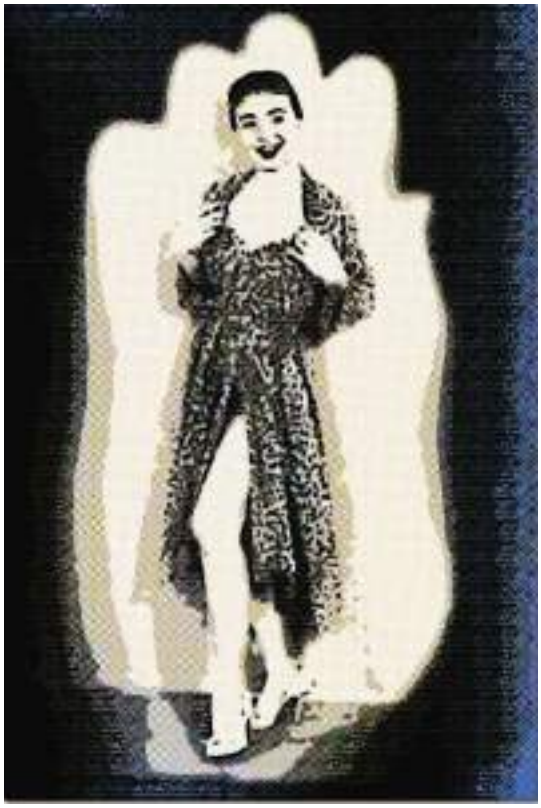
The story the FOIA documents reveal about the survivor is fantastical. At 4:37 am 10/19/1947 a small saucer shaped object aproximately 20 feet in diameter and 6 feet high materialized next to the building where the original crash debris was stored. The object proceeded to crash, spinning through the wall at an estimated 200-300 mph. An iron beam stopped the craft and the impact destroyed most of the saucer. A woman was ejected shortly before impact in what was described by eyewitnesses as a “silvery balloon” or “shiny bubble” which gently floated to the floor then dissolved into a silver fog. As the fog dissipated, the figure of a woman appeared.

The crash survivor was wearing a dress and hairstyle typical of the day. Had she been anywhere else she would have blended right in, but on a top secret military base, she obviously didn’t belong.

The woman was initially suspected to be a Russian spy, sent in to try to steal US military secrets, however a series of interviews proved her to be American. The odd thing was, she claimed to be from the year 2073.

This woman, age 20 in 1947, consistently identified herself as Susan Boreman of Cambridge, NY, 2073 AD during interrogations.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast



She claimed to be on a recovery mission to collect debris from the first crash. According to Boreman, if the people from our time were to reverse engineer the technology, it could damage the spacetime continuum.

Boreman was held at an area outside of Groom lake for 3 years. During that time she seduced one of her guards and ended up giving birth to the child which the government took away placed in an adoptive home.

This is where the story really get's strange. Boreman's little girl, born January 10, 1949 was raised by government officials/scientist posing as her parents. The government raised her in a controlled environmt and conducted studies on her until her 17th birthday when they turned her out onto the streets. The daughter lived her whole life without ever knowing she was adopted.

Susan never knew what became of her daughter until a man calling himself "Frank" claiming to be from the future paid her a visit in 1982.

Frank wasn't sent back on a mission to neutralize Boreman although he believed Boreman's long term capture in the past was beginning to cause problems in his future. He came back because he was a fan of her famous daughter and he wanted to meet the mother of a legend.

Frank informed Susan that her little girl was alive, and had grown up, but her life had taken a dark path. She grew up and changed her name from Boreman to Lovelace, and eventually became the star of the legendary 1972 XXX movie Deep throat.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

It's uncertain from FOIA documents where Frank got his facts from of if this is in fact true. According to Wikipedia "Linda Boreman was born in the Bronx on January 10 1949, the daughter of a New York policeman." This wouldn't be the first time a famous person created a fictitious background.

What is clear that Frank helped Susan escape from captivity on April 1, 1982 and took up residence in her cell where he resides to this day.

This is where Susan's story ends. Find out more about "Frank" next time and learn how his predictions of the future have helped the United States avert many disasters, but in recent years has become unreliable.

Jealous Horse Loses Eye, Rainbow Horn Unicorn to Blame

A unicorn is a wonderful thing. The very best unicorns have rainbow horns and like to drive around in cars and their tongues flap back just like a big dumb dog.

Some black horses are so surprised to see the unicorn being chauffeured around in cars when they have to walk that their eyes bulge out in surprise.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

The most jealous of horses get so surprised that their eye pops right out of the socket and then they just have a crusty brown hole where their big white eye used to be. Also their blonde mane turns a dirty grey because it is stressful trying to find grass to eat when all you have is a big brown O for an eye.

I like horses. They have shiny teeth.

How To Make Money Fighting Famous Bears

By EMToast
August 16, 2009
Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: Earn Cash, Famous Bears, Publisher 98, Toastmaster

Step 1: Find a Famous Bear

In order to make money fighting with bears, the wild ones must be avoided. Not only are they dangerous, but there is no money to be made fighting these nameless bears. The public is interested in seeing matches with famous bears, so try to arrange one with one of the giants such as Winnie the Pooh, Yogi Bear, Papa Bear of the Bernstein bears, or even the Coca-Cola endorsed Polar Bear.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Step 2: Study Your Opponent's Fighting Technique

Use any means possible to arrange a bout with the bear that you want to challenge. If the bear doesn't feel like fighting you, simply do something to make him angry. Bears have tremendous tempers; even Winnie can become enraged if you take his beloved "hunny." Once you've arranged the bout, do some research, and study your opponent's fighting technique. View tapes of any previous fights or observe him in his natural habitat if possible

Step 3: Get In the Ring

Once you feel that you have the advantage over your opponent, get into the ring and fight that bear! If you have followed the suggested steps and chosen a famous bear, the fight will be easy. Years of fame have most likely taken the fighting spirit out of your enemy, and he will be easily toppled.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Step 4: Defeat Your Opponent

Fighting famous bears can be difficult and sometimes dangerous. Be confident that you can defeat your opponent. Use the knowlege you gain through observing the famous bear to conquer him. Avoid his special attacks, such as the dreaded bear hug and the powerful bear claw. Repeated blows to the nose and face will usually bring down even the toughest famous bear. Remember his face is his most valuable asset; destroy it and victory is yours.

Step 5: Collect Your Prize Money

Depending on how you have arranged the bout, you may collect a purse whether you defeat the bear or not. Assuming you win the match, however, you should collect a rather large prize. This means that you are now ready to go on to battle more famous bears for more money. Good luck and good fighting!

While she was never homeless, Flo was a street person. She dressed in an eclectic collection of clothing and was known for her extravagant application of red lipstick and eyeliner…

Flo and her husband, Roy Hamilton, came to Chico in the 1950s and could often be seen walking all over town until his death in 1986.

She was a "night person," … "She liked to interact with the night people."

Chico police officer Terry Moore agreed… "There's a street order of law (down there). 'Don't (expletive deleted) with Flo.'"

Moore said the street people "just kind of looked after her and took care of her."

Flo was known for saying what she thought…

Flo was so kind. I remember talking to her about how she would buy food for the stray cats that lived downtown. She made up names for each. She was a kind human being. She was NOT homeless, or crazy, like most people assumed. She live a very humble existence, she refused to be "categorized" … she should be an inspiration to us all.

I'm glad that there are others who have shown her respect. I hope she lived a happy and fulfilling life. Yes, even after 20 years, Flo was remembered. I hope she is resting with the Good Lord now.

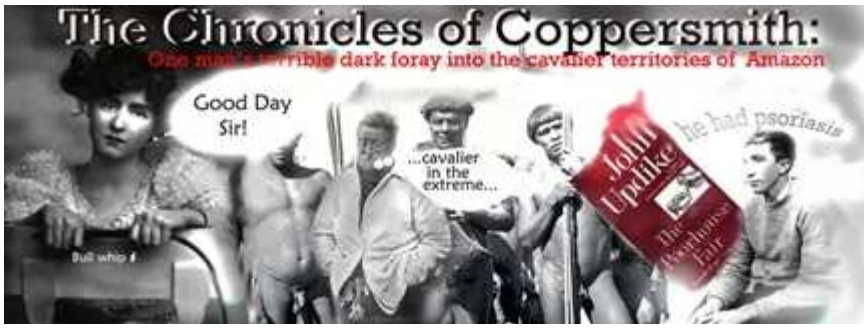
The Chronicles of Coppersmith: One Man's Terrible Foray into the Territories of Amazon

By bixby

September 8, 2009

Categories: Absurd World News

Tags: all customers are assholes, amazon, cavalier attitudes, caveat emptor, dick, good day sir, valenica



May 29th 2009

Richard Coppersmith begins his journey into the unknown territories of deepest darkest Amazon with the purchase of a book, "Poor House Fair" by John Updike. He is patient and remains steadfast on his course for several days.

June 1st 2009

Coppersmith is upbeat and looking forward to the rewards at the end of his journey.

June 5th 2009

On the seventh day of his journey as if a gift from God, Coppersmith receives a package.
He is glad of its arrival but with it comes the first seeds of doubt.

"Where is Poor House Fair" this is "Of the Farm"?

This package is a book ordered by Coppersmith from a different seller than the one that sold him "Poor House Fair". At the time Coppersmith does not realize this, perhaps he never realized this. Perhaps the heat and fetid darkness of Amazon had begun to take affect on his brainmeat.

June 15th 2009

Coppersmith wants his journey to end, but still remains patient and vigilant to his cause.

June 22nd 2009

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Twenty-five days into his journey the seeds of doubt begin to poke through the surface. This doubt begins to cloud Coppersmith's judgment, paranoia sets in and he starts to think that perhaps his trek onto the darkest Amazon may be his undoing. Frantically he makes an inquiry.

RE: poorhome fair

Sir or Madam,

I recently ordered OFF THE FARM and POORHOME FAIR, but so far have received only the former. When can I expect to receive the second book?

Thanks,

Richard Coppersmith

It is evident from his writing that this journey has taken its toll on his brain as he has gotten both book titles horribly wrong.

June 23rd 2009
Coppersmith receives a response. Albeit unsatisfactory.

re:poorhouse fair

Hello Richard Coppersmith,
The book that you purchased last month was sent out on May 31st. You should be receiving it soon.

Thank you,
Valencia Pittman

June 24th 2009
Coppersmith replies.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Hello Valencia Pittman

Thanks for the update, but the shipping order made no mention of shipping POORHOUSE FAIR, only OFF THE FARM.

Sincerely,
Richard Coppersmith

It seems that Coppersmith had a brief moment of lucidity, he got one of the book titles correct. Being that Valencia Pittman only sold him “Poor House Fair” and is not responsible for any transactions regarding “Of the Farm” she sends no response. Her first one would have been sufficient for any sane person.

June 26th 2009
Coppersmith has not received a response to his inquiry. Doubt has now been replaced by rage.

June 27th 2009
Coppersmith fires off an angry communication

I never received the book. Where the hell is it? If this is the kind of slipshod service you provide, you ahve lost a customer.

The ravages of heat and the fecund nature of Amazon have seriously taken their toll on Coppersmith he has begun to lose all sense of decorum and spelling. With that kind of language Valencia offers no response.

June 28th 2009

Having received no response to his filth-laden inquiry Coppersmith is enraged and feels he has been treated in a cavalier fashion. He demands answers.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

I placed my order on or about May 29th, 2009. To date, I have still not received POORHOUSE FARM and you have not contacted me about the order. I would appreciate it if you contacted me, and even more if uou sent me the book in question. As it is, I feel you have treated me in an utterly cavalier fashion. If this is the way you usually do business, you can forget about mine from now on.

June 28th 2009

Coppersmith receives a response, at first it seems as if it is a light beaming out of the darkness; but then it burns him.

Dear Sir,

I responded to your first inquiry, on June 23rd, as to when your book was shipped. Your book was sent out, I’m sorry that you have not received it yet. I have no control over the postal service and how long it takes them to deliver. I did not respond to your last email, as I do not care for such foul language.

Thank you,
Valencia Pittman

June 29th 2009

Coppersmith is unsatisfied with this response and leaves terrible feedback on Valencia Pittman’s store. He sends her an email.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Sir,

I see I am not going to get any satisfaction from you. The book did not arrive during the time period you specified it would. It seems to me you are obligated, at least ethically, to find out what happened to it and to make restitution, whether of the book I ordered or the amount I paid for it. I fear, howeve,r that you will ignore this message. So be it. You have been cavalier in the extreme in this entire transaction, and as a result Amazon has lost a customer. As for my foul language, I apologize, but sir, you have tried my patience in the extreme.

Richard Coppersmith

June 29th was not one of his lucid days as he referred to Valencia Pittman as "sir" and begins to show signs of irrationality in that he believes his patience has been tried in the extreme, Coppersmith is losing touch with reality.

June 30th 2009
Coppersmith receives a reply

Dear Sir,

Had you contacted me prior to leaving negative feedback I would have been more than happy to resolve the issue with you. Remove your negative feedback and I can issue you a refund or send you another book. Otherwise there is nothing more that I can do for you.

Good Day Sir

June 30th 2009
Coppersmith is delusional and sends out an email referring back to some communication that never occurred, referencing a book that was never purchased from Valencia Pittman that he claims she sent him in two days.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Dear Sir,

When I tried to contact someone about the order, I was informed the window for delivery ended on February 20th, which seemed extraordinarily long to me, since the other book I ordered from you arrived within two days. I was told there was nothing I could do but be patient when it was obvious to me the book was never going to arrive. However, I will remove the negative feedback, if possible.

Richard Coppersmith

Coppersmith mustered enough strength to remove the feedback and send out an email, which would be his last.

Sir,

the negative feedback is gone. I’d like my copy of POORHOmE FAIR.

Richard Coppersmith

Richard Coppersmith never received his copy of “Poorhouse Fair”. He also never received a refund and was never heard from again. If Richard Coppersmith had understood Amazon and its ways, he may have survived his purchase. Let this be a lesson to you. There are many sellers on Amazon, and the sooner you learn to navigate those dark waters the better apt you will be to survive the dark journey that Coppersmith never came back from. He was swallowed up alive in the thick black evil that is the Amazon Market Place.

The moral of the story is that sometimes Amazon marketplace sellers like to fuck with you because you are a dick. They never sent your book out, they have no intention of ever sending your book out, they will pretend that maybe the postal service lost your book and they will act like they are going to go out of their way to send you another copy of the book which is infact the original which was never sent out in the first place. Leaving negative feedback is the equivalent of a mouse

This little known day of celebration gets bat owners and bat lovers alike a chance to celebrate their little flying friends.

Ginny Glamerspeil of Tempe Arizona, Chairperson for the National Society of Bat Lovers, says that, "Bats really are a misunderstood creature they do so much good for us, they eat mosquitoes and that is a good thing otherwise everyone would be walking around with malaria all the time. I'm so sick of people thinking that bats are going to fly down and get stuck in their hair or that they are going to get rabies or turn into vampires, that is just ignorant stuff people."

Three Breasted Mother Suckles Pigs In Muddy Crawlspace

Riding scooters and yelling. The dogs, even the dogs know that these little children… are wrong.

They ride and slide and slip and scream. They have to go home. Crawl down into the basement – in the crawlspace. Lay down in the mud next to their mother. The three breasted mother, with little pigs suckling on her. And the no-tooth father eating donuts dipping them in muddy puddles. Sometimes he heats it up and pretends that it's coffee. He has a job at the local trailer park picking up cigarette butts and smoking them as he works he feels quite happy scraping the gum off the stairways.

The children laugh at him, the normal ones. And on Fridays he gets paid. His boss comes out and says," Hey scummy come over here I've got your dog bowl full of dog food. That's a good boy now keep scraping the gum."

Two assailants described by onlookers as “raccoon faced freaks” burst into a Red Robin restaurant Thursday assaulting a waitress and making off with several baskets of fries and over 10 hamburger patties.

One customer interviewed at the scene said “It was like they were looking right through me. They just came running in, bashed through everyone who was waiting to be seated and went straight for the waitress. She just screamed, dropped her tray, and ran.”

Police later found the 2 men, who are still unidentified, devouring their haul next to the dumpster behind the restaurant, in a nest of refuse where they are believed to have been living.

Everything Has Boobs: October is Breast Awareness Month

By bixby

October 11, 2009

Categories: Absurd World News

Tags: Bixby, boobs, breast awareness, dirty pillows, fun bags, knockers, melons, ta tas

“Everything has got boobs, even my dad and guys, “exclaims 7 year old Charlie Percheffons, the winner of the October is Breast Awareness Poster Contest for Missouri Area Schools.

“Let’s see there are pig boobs, snail boobs, bear boobs, aardvarks has boobs, frogs has boobs, there are dog boobs, tiger boobs, elephant boobs, gator boobs, cat boobs, bat boobs, I swear everything like for real EVERYTHING has boobs!”

During an interview on Friday Charlie was asked what he hoped to accomplish with his poster that will be seen in medical buildings and bus stations across the state.

“I am glad I won, people need to know that they has got boobs that everything has got them, so they can feed the little babies of the things that has got them, because a baby frog can’t get milk from anything elses boobs except for the mom frogs boobs, like you can’t be like hey tiger will you adopt this little frog baby guy and feed it from your boobs because that won’t work.”

Charlie seemed to evade reporters questions in favor of demonstrating his whistling, spitting and running abilities.

After some demonstrations of his “super high powered killer karate style kicking” Charlie added this, “Oh yeah I guess we had to make the poster so that people will know about boobs so they can watch them because sometimes they can get sick in their boobs so they have to feel them and stuff and go to the doctor. Goblins Invade southern Missouri town of Kennett

ST. LOUIS – Goblins have invaded the southern Missouri town of Kennett. The creatures appear to have been drawn there by the town's ample supply of copper. Goblins have been witnessed stealing copper plumbing and gutters from more than half the town's homes and businesses.

Nobody dares stop them. Goblin bites can become fatally infected within hours due to the septic pathogens found in their saliva.

Local veterinarian Patricia Tsosie, an expert on animal bites says, "the goblin bite is among the most vicious in the animal kingdom. Similar to the Kimodo Dragon the goblin bite causes rapid swelling, localized disruption of blood clotting, and shooting pain, eventually resulting in death. I've lost several animal and even even heard of a few human patients dying from this deadly bite."

Because of the goblins appetite for copper, PVC pipe and aluminum gutter sales are skyrocketing. So much so that many local residents suspect that Lowes and Home depot have somehow brought the copper thieving goblins to town.

Local resident, Michael Hamilton says, "Think about it. Who's making out here? Lowes and Home Depot have been slow as anything because of the economy. Then all the sudden these goblins hit and they can't keep pipes or gutters in stock. I seen one of them goblins taking the copper pipes right out from under my trailer and I couldn't do nothin but watch. Those bites will kill you. I saw them take apart a kid last week like he was nothing. Another guy at my work got bit on the leg and he was dead before morning. I thought maybe he was going to come back as a goblin, but I guess it don't work like that. Anyway it was Lowes and Home Depot that teamed up and brought them goblins here. We never even had so much as a hobo in town before."

Dr. Russ T. Warner who is studying the unusual case, believes this to be a special breed of copper goblin who was prevalent in Europe during the Copper Age. Warner states "During the Chalcolithic or Copper Age, between 3500 to 1700BC mankind was constantly at battle with the copper goblin. Copper was used for spear points, tools, and decorative objects. Even traded for other exotic goods. Goblins were common place in those days, and man had methods for dealing with them. We no longer know how to fight them."

No methods for dealing with the goblins are currently known. Kennett and surrounding areas are are at the mercy of the gobin hoardes.

Sharlene Garza witnessed a goblin attack on Kennett National bank. "Kennett National had beautiful copper gutters and flashing ever since it was built years ago. It had that nice green look on it like the Statue of Liberty. About 50 of them goblins climbed the side of the bank and started eating the metal right off it. They have sharp teeth because they ate right through it and didn't leave a speck of copper dust there. One of them ate so much of it his gut was all swollen and a couple of the other goblins were dragging him away. I hope they ate that one because he was a real pig of a goblin eating all that copper like that."

The bank is currently closed until repairs can be made. Contractors have placed bids for the job to to replace the copper with inexpensive goblin-resistant aluminum. However no work will be done until next spring since contractors are so backlogged with work.

"Goblins is the best thing that happened around here since in a long time. Since the economy dropped we's all been out of work, but when the goblins came to town it's 7 days a week. I love them little goblins. I throw out a couple copper scraps here and there for them as appreciation for what they done for us. Thinking of hanging up a couple feeders outside the office just to keep them around," states Callum Viner owner of Kennett Construction and Builders Inc.

As to the goblins true origin, we may never know, but some have theories that don't include a Lowes and Home Depot conspiracy against the town.

"I believe these goblins are not from Europe as the town's people believe, but are actually American Copper Goblins who have been dormant in the Western Great Lakes for centuries. Lake Superior has veins of 99% pure copper and several thousand years ago was the center of a large copper goblin infestation. It's entirely possible that they were awakened by a construction project or other disturbance and made their way down here in search of copper, " adds Warner.

Residents in Kennett and surrounding regions are advised to remove all copper from their homes as soon as possible for curbside pickup. It is hoped that once all copper is gone from the region, the goblin menace will move on.

Rainbows In Her Brain Meats

November 12, 2009

Categories: Absurd World News, Art of the Folked

Tags: billy wizard, brain meat, fritzy Mcgee, rainbows

Once again we are graced with a reader's submission from 7 year old Fritzy McGee.

Fritzy writes:

"Sometimes when I see my dad, like my real dad guy not the one my mom married after my dad got germs and stuff and lost his hair, I call that guy dad sometimes but mostly when mom is around because if I don't call him dad then I don't get cake after dinner. When he is asleep I call him creepy names and say stuff about the hairs that poke out of his nose, but he is so sleepy when he gets drinks of water that he doesn't hear me say things to his ears. He doesn't even feel it when I throw pretzel salt at him. But I don't think it's really water because it smells weird. I mean I am not some stupid kid I know some things, and you would think he would be like a nice guy and give me little drinks because he woke me up and I was thirsty when he was yelling at my moms crotch parts of her pants calling it her stretch pants porcupine, So I think it must be something secret.

But yeah I forgot I was telling you how my dad when I see him sometimes he tells me that we are going to visit his aunt who is my grandma's sister but she died or something or she is an alcoholic I can't remember which but I guess they are both pretty bad. When we go see my dad's aunt lady she has a really mean dog that needs it's fingernails cut and she paints them red and it is always licking the air kind of like Billy Wizard's dog but dad says it has worms and that makes it sad. I bet when the dog goes to the place where all the dogs go to get thier nails done after they are cut off it probably says this feels good on our feets to the other dogs and then they go lay down or something. I look at it but I never see the worms of that dogs.

The lady who is my dad's aunt has a flag with rainbows on it in her garden. She puts on the radio and the music is all like toople deeeeeee doople dee doo, and they go in the other room and yell real loud and my dad says that she should stop doing things with carpets and that she doesn't need to advertise things with rainbows. I think maybe she is thinking leperchauns are real and she wants one to come live in her garden so that it will bring her a pot of gold, but that is just stupid and it makes me hate her a little for being so stupid and because she has really bad candy that is in a glass dish but all the single candy pieces are all one now because they have always lived together in that dish for so long. I think maybe she doesn't really want people to have any candy.

My dad says that people in the town know she is a clam eater and I don't know why that is making him yell because sometimes we eat clams that come in strips that come frozen in a bag with french fries. Then dad gets money from her and we leave, maybe she has a leperchaun and he shouldn't get so mad all the time because they get him the money that he gets from her.

I like it when we leave because he drives really swervy and yells things at people and he doesn't pay attention that I am not wearing my seatbelt. Sometimes I don't like it because he waves his cigarette around and tiny hot dusties of it fly off and burn into my skin and he brushes it off but he smacks at me when he does it and it kind of hurts like he is secretly hitting me but doesn't want me to know he is hitting me, but I know it because I have the feeling of the hitting in my arm when he does it. I don't know why people got to try and fool people when the people know what the people are doing because they are there too and they know. Anyhow He told me that there is something wrong with her head and I think maybe she has rainbows in her brain meats,or something but I don't know. I got to go now because my mom wants me to pick up all the pieces of cheez-its that I got mad at for falling out of my mouth and I ground into the carpet in billy wizards van. Bye "

A man was pissed off after getting dumped by his girlfriend. So he showed up at her house showing her intimate pictures they took while going out, and threatened her that he'd post the pictures online if she didn't get back together with him.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

The woman went to the police and asked for help after he harassed her several times. The police went to the guy's house, took his laptop and recovered the naked pictures of him and her, together holding each other and also the two of them posing in front of the camera covering up with a bucket.

The man insisted those pictures were taken 4 years ago at a motel with consent, he didn't force her. The man also denied threatening the woman, and insisted he only said to her he had these pictures.

The police did nothing. Instead of trying to press more charges, the woman took matters into her own hands. She took the video camera to the pawn shop and used the money to hire a gang to beat the man up. The man now suffers from crippling paralysis in one leg, and also has a droopy left face.

The woman now is getting married to the man's best friend and a fortune teller told her that they are going to have this crazy daughter who becomes a ghost.

Turkeyman: Curse of the Wereturkey

Tags: Domestic turkey, Edward Winslow, Plimoth, Plymouth Colony, Thanksgiving, Wampanoag

The wereturkey is an American beast, born in Plimoth, 1621 during the first Thanksgiving dinner.

When Edward Winslow, leader of the Plimoth Colony was asked by one of the Wampanoag Indians to “Please pass the turkey”, he simply responded, “No thank you.”

It is unclear from what records exist of the first historic feast whether this was meant as an insult, or if Windlow simply misheard the request. Whatever the case may have been, Winslow’s faux paux angered his Wampanoag guests.

As the legend goes, the Wampanoag men placed a curse on Winslow dooming him to transform into a beast of half man and half turkey – a Wereturkey!

It is said that once transformed, the wereturkey remains in that state until someone calls their given name, or until fed bread crumbs by a person known to them. Wereturkeys as a rule are not aggressive. They will roam around familiar areas, hunting for food, almost never attacking humans, and waiting to be recognized.

Winslow, according to legend, transformed Thanksgiving night, and remained in beast form nearly 8 weeks until his young daughter found the poor bird-man starving to death and half-frozen. She fed the starving bird some bread crumbs on a cold January morning and within minutes, his feathers were gone and he was back to his old self.

Little is known about the special curse that the Wampanoag used to change Winslow into the turkey beast, what is clear is that he never transformed again.

Since that time, there have been many other reported cases of Wereturkey transformations. Here is a list compiled by historians of different ways the creature can be created.

There are 7 known causes of Wereturkey transformations:

1. Wearing the Skin of a turkey

2. Drinking rainwater out of the footprint of a turkey.

3. Sleeping outside on Thanksgiving day

4. The Seventh son born after six girls on Thanksgiving day will transform into a wereturkey on his 13th birthday

5. Eating the raw brains of a wild turkey.

6. Survive being pecked by a turkey.

7. Eating food prepared by a wereturkey.

Please be careful this holiday, and everyday, for the danger of the Wereturkey is near.

This lady that I work with comes to my deskish area and says, Oh hey I thought of you this weekend, because I know how much you like bunnies

(I have rabbits and I had their pics on my desk, just to annoy the lady who keeps pictures of her greasy kids on hers. And for real her kids are greasy. The kid is 4 and has the greasiness of that dirtbag kid you knew in the late 70's whose mom was always so drunk that he never washed and was always eating boullion cubes) so she goes on to say that she was cleaning out the filter in her pool and there was a dead bunny in it, and she went on to describe how tiny it was and how water logged and bloated up it was and how it's eyes were open. What the fuck am I supposed to say to that? Maybe I should start going up to people at work saying oh hey I thought of you this weekend I know how much you love kids, I saw one get hit by a semi, it got knocked right out of its tiny little keds and its tiny bloody baby feet were still in them, and there were tiny baby brains all over the highway.

It's not like she took enjoyment out of finding the thing, she was just sharing the horror as people tend to do. But I am not kidding you that this happens like once a week, someone tells me some sad horrible tale about a little animal guy that got maimed or set on fire or hit by a car.

Sometimes they tell you other things that are totally inappropriate like things for real. I would rather hear about their urinary tract infections, botched abortions and projectile diarrhea than hear about tiny animals maimed and killed.

Chinese Fire Drills Can’t Even Kill A Bitch

By bixby

Tags: Human Interest

"Today Lodi popped into my head. Summer 1979 Lodi, running chinese fire drills around a Gremlin in heavy traffic, with three dog night blasting on the radio.

It was fun but I was scared out of my mind back then, because I was one of the smaller kids and they kind of just pushed you out of the car to get you out of their way so that they could run around it, you were forced to go whether you wanted to or not, kind of like going up to get communion in church if you happened to sit on the outer most edge of the pew. If you didn’t go everyone would look at you and know you didn’t go to confession, therefore you must be hiding some terrible mortal sin, then again if you didn’t go to confession and went up to get communion God would smote you something awful, only sometimes they would pretend to not let you back in the car as the light was changing, never was I not let back in the pew at church, so you would be standing there in traffic crying for a few seconds while horns blared. Anyway, yeah it started me to thinking of all the other unsafe things I used to get to do as a kid, and it all makes sense because the guy who let us do these things, not even let us but encouraged us, is totally nuts, like full on been committed to the state mental hospital nutsification. Don’t get me wrong I still have fond memories of those days, those dangerous days, and I loved going over to his house because there were no rules and we got to watch faces of death and race around on suped up big wheels and play war kittens with real kittens and pee in the woods. I just wonder how we survived physically unscathed, and there were about 8 of us kids, and I wonder if before I had full recollection of things if there had been more, only they died when he piled 15 of them all under the age of 8 into the back of a pickup truck and then went 80 on a bumpy back road laughing all the way while they screamed in terror and tried to hold on for dear life, my cousin got a concussion once on one of our trips to Rosie's Pizza, the kind where your eyes roll up in your head and you make moany uncoordinated zombie movements whenever someone touches you. He made him walk it off. To all those kids they never told us about who never made it under his charge I salute you because you died like heroes. I bet they are in unmarked graves under the pine trees in his yard where he buried the chihuahua that swallowed hot dogs whole."

On the old 1970's Incredible Hulk TV show with Bill Bixby and Lou Ferigno, there was an episode where this old man was taking some kind of special arthritis treatments and he turned into another hulk. I remember thinking how crazy and weird it was that there was this skinny tall old man hulk fighting the regular Hulk. What was this skinny old man with green make-up doing fighting the Hulk? Something about it just didn't seem right to me, but even so the concept always stuck with me. The Hulk was already a perversion. A freak. So how can you make a freakier freak? Age him. That usually works.

So I got to thinking. What would I do if I were a skinny old man Hulk? First I'd throw a bear into a river. I think the real Hulk did that once, only his was a teddy bear. I might even throw two bears in to see if they'd try to fight. Then maybe I'd fight a couple bears. Just playing around though, I wouldn't want to hurt their bear paws. It might even be funny to see if I could tame a bear to sleep by me like how my dog does. I could pull up the blanket and be like get under the covers, get UNDER the covers and that poor bear would just go under and go to sleep.

What other cool things could I do if I was an old man Hulk? I'd probably be pretty happy my arthritis was cured so I'd do a lot of jumping. I'd start off small just by jumping down the stairs like I did when I was a kid, but then eventually I'd try to get into some major canyon jumps.

Oh you know what would be fun? Arm wrestling Vin Diesel. Yeah the old man Hulk would definitely win and then Vin would start yelling real loud and then I could yell back or growl. I think Hulks are more the growling type.

Next I'd probably try to dig to the center of the earth to see if I could get all the magma to drain out. I doubt it would work though. See this is why they'll never let me become a Hulk. Abuse of power. I think I'd like the bend the eiffel tower. See if I could bend the fingers on the Statue of Liberty to flip the bird. Turn a bunch of people's houses backwards so when they walk out their front door they come out in their back yard.

Then I'd bring back one of my old favorite tricks from when I was a kid. Digging a big hole in the baseball field right where the kids run so they'd trip and fall as they round the bases. I'd probably do it in regular baseball fields now though instead of just the one outside my old kindergarten.

Then I'd probably end up having to fight an army or some police. Then time for lunch. I always wanted to see what metal tasted like. I think it kind of tastes like blood, or does blood taste like metal? Either way old man hulk is finding out.

Then I'd probably get bored, fall aleep and wake up human again with a crippling pain in my knee and not even be able to get back home. Or If I did make it home, I'd wake up human and being mauled by the bear I made sleep next to me.

He was a gay old man and they gave him some kind of special irradiated viagra type medication cuz he got these awful headaches, but then he saw the hulk on a rampage, and he was all like "oh you sexy THANG!!" and whoosh…up and AT'M!
The hulk got annoyed that the gay old guy was trying to pull his pants down so they started bitch slapping each other and it got so bad the fire department had to spray them with cold water from their hoses to put a stop to that nonsense.
It got changed a little for television.

Jesus Saved Me… from Getting Kicked Out of Community College

Children's Literature is the last course I ever imagined I'd take. Yet there I was, analyzing Curious George in my last semester of community college. I was working full time at one job, going to school 3 nights a week and there weren't any night other options to fulfill the English requirement. I was still ashamed. I think the point of the class was to discuss different children's books and their values. Most of the kids in the class seemed to have taken the course because they actually liked children's books.

One Wednesday night, we all showed up for class. This one kid sits behind me in his usual spot. Class starts, then the kid starts silently puking into his backpack. I'm not sure what alerted me to this. It may have been the smell, or maybe it was the reactions of the kids who could actually see what was happening. Class came to a hault. The kid started crying. Apparently he lost his job at Footlocker at the mall which prompted him to go to the local mall bar "Maggies" and drink away his sorrows. He was such a responsible guy that he just couldn't miss class, so he decided to drive drunk 40 minutes to the college. In the end I think he ended up throwing away the backpack and one of the old ladies in class called his parents to pick him up. Then they bought him a six hour old wilted hoagie from the cafeteria and made him eat it to soak up the alcohol while they sat there watching him wait for his parents.

The teacher was such a pushover that this all went down without incident. You could basically get away with anything. One class she was rambling on and on about the merits of one children's author or another. I don't even know what she was saying. Whatever it was it was getting on my nerves and seemed a waste of my time. I involuntarily exclaimed "JESUS CHRIST!" right in the middle of class. I'm pretty sure this offended her because she stopped and asked what I said. I basically just brushed it off and said "We're very religions back here, very religious."

If I had yelled out anything else, I'm pretty sure even though she was pretty lenient, I would have been kicked out. Good old Jesus. He really does save.

I Think We Gave the Yeti Too Much Sugar

A strange creature dubbed the “bear yeti” has baffled Alaskan scientists.

The animal was trapped by a group of ice fishermen after locals reported spotting what they thought was a polar bear.

One fisherman said, “It looks like a polar bear, but moves like a bigfoot. We had it locked up, but the children kept feeding it sugar cubes. At first it became friendly and liked them. I was having a smoke break and wasn’t paying attention since it had become docile. Then I overheard one of the children say “I think we gave it too much sugar.” Not a second later the beast broke free.”

One child nearly lost a hand when the yeti swatted the jar of sugar cubes out of his hands.

The boy stated, “We were feeding him nice. He would eat cubes from the hand. He licked me. Then his eyes turned whiter and he banged the wall until he got out. I ran so fast, but he still got me. He knocked the sugar from me and cut my hand with his paw. Now I got infected. “

The boy’s injuries are serious. The lacerations from the animal’s claws were deep and infection has set into the bone. Doctor’s have him on an antibiotic drip, but the risk of amputation is great.

Alaskan scientists are studying the DNA of fur and droppings left behind by the “bear yeti” to determine whether it is a deformed polar bear, or perhaps a new species of primate related to the mythical sasquatch.

Pasta Tagliatelle is Black People!?!

A new cookbook published by Penguin called The Pasta Bible has some unique ingredients included in it's recipe for tagliatelle with sardines and prosciutto, such as "freshly ground black people."

Approximately 7,000 copies of the book were printed with this ingredient listed among it's recipes before Penguin decided to take action to remove these copies from circulation.

Jebadiah Holthrom of God's Fundamentalist Kitchen Church said his organization was approached asking if they would like to return their copies in exchange for corrected versions. Holthrom declined the offer, and said in an interview on Saturday," Our congregation has bought some 250 copies of the Pasta Bible, we cook for God and we love pasta. God does not make mistakes and you cannot correct the work of God. I intend to try every one of the recipes and I intend to prepare them as God has intended. I make them, just as He set down the words in His good book. It's a Bible, a Bible of pasta, but a Bible nonetheless. You can't call something a Bible unless God had a hand in it. God would have smote them if His divine hand had not been the one guiding them. God is mysterious and it is not our place to question Him. If God intends for me to eat certain ingredients who am I to ask why?"

Infant Body Builders: Limits Are For Adults

How young is too young? To these infant body builders affectionately known as “baby builders” it is never too early to start.

Immediately after birth, their parents have made the choice to take extreme measures to push their babies to the limit of human muscle development.

By administering a controversial mix of similac, protein powder, and Human Growth Hormone, parents are helping their “baby builders” to achieve the perfect image.

At only 6 months old, The Agitator is one of the nation’s top baby builders. His most recent accomplishments include, bench pressing 600 lbs, breaking his mother’s wrist, and smashing through his parent’s bedroom wall from the next room.

Any time Mark’s mother asks Dad for help with household tasks, he just turns and says, “Use Mark’s brute strength.”

At just 2 months of age, Mark is already more of a man than his weakling dad ever was.

Mom says “Now I don’t have to strain myself opening pickle jars anymore!”

Vince “Veinman” Vincent

Like many of the baby builders, Vincent has a darkly tanned body which contrasts with his pale while baby face.

“I guess it’s because of Hollywood child labor laws,” says Dane Vincent the baby’s father. “We wanted an even tan on the boy, but if you notice almost all these kids have white heads. They say the tanning booth can cause brain damage if used on the head so we have to limit them. It has something to do with lighting and Hollywood. That’s what the guy at the tanning place told us. It’s illegal I guess.”

Jimmy “Smiles”

Smiles isn’t even old enough to have baby teeth, but he’s already out there winning the competitions. He wasn’t always such a smiley guy. Last month he cried because he accidentally broke his baby sitters back.

Gerry “The Giant”

At just 24 inches tall, Gerry is able to bench more than most 63 inchers. He once flipped a cement truck just by looking at it. (The driver got distracted) He also accidentally crippled his 16 year old brother in a wrestling match. “Sorry!”

“Strawberry”

Strawberry once tore down kitchen counter to reach the cookie jar. Other feats of strength include, kicking his baby brother onto their garage roof, towing his Mom’s car home from the grocery store, and peeling the skin from a pineapple with his bare hands.

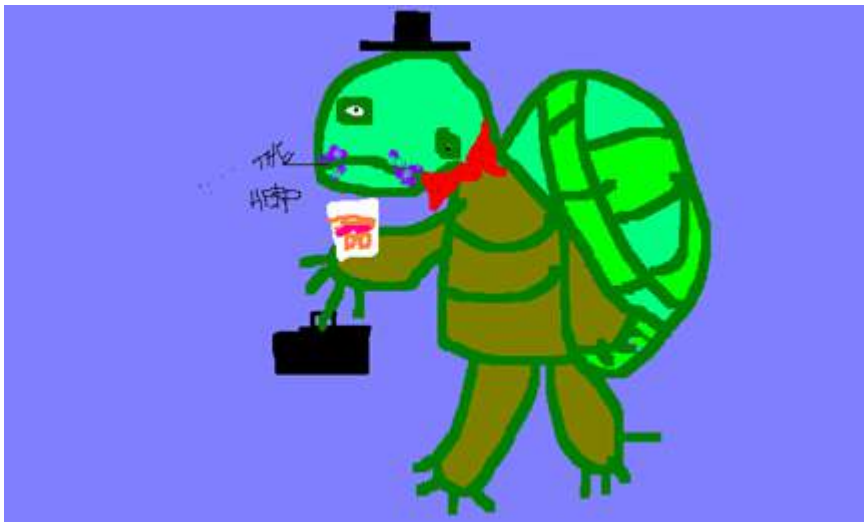
Doctors Warn, Wishing Causes Coma

By EMToast
May 16, 2010
Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: Coma, Herpes, Toastmaste, turtle, wish



Never make a wish. Doctors at the Northeast Center for Brain Injury and Coma Research have released a shocking new study. 99% of coma victims are wish recipients. Studies done over the past 12 years on coma victims who have awakened show they had all made a wish within hours of becoming comatose. Even patients whose comas were attributed to near fatal accidents have admitted to trying to "wish their way out of harm's way."

Demon's grant wishes in exchange for your soul. You can wish upon a star. Genies will grant three wishes if you rub their lamp, but you are just asking for three times the trouble. Blowing out your birthday cake candles can be a one way ticket to a hospital bed. Even praying for specific things can be dangerous. Any way you look at it, wishing is hazardous to your health.

Doctors aren't exactly sure what's happening, but they suspect that when a wish is made, the brain desires the wished for item so intensely that it actually grants the wish by shutting out reality and putting the body in a state of suspended animation.

Doctor Hellman Heinz warns, "Do not make wishes. We had one man who lost 22 years of his life to a coma simply for wishing his rival became a turtle with herpes. For all the years he was in the coma his mind believed his rival was a herpes infested turtle, when in reality the man had married the woman they were fighting. This man lived a happy non-terrapin life whilst the wisher wasted away in a hospital bed."

You've heard the phrase, "be careful what you wish for." Now it appears that to avoid coma, you must be careful not to wish at all.

As a boy I idolized Fonzie from Happy Days. The Fonz was the coolest guy. He taught me that you can fix things by punching them. I don’t know how many tvs I fixed by giving them a good punch. And he would always put his thumbs up and say aaaaayyyy.

At my first job, I worked with this guy who drove a powder blue ford escort. He was the kind of guy who played football, but only because his Dad made him. The kind of guy who would after work open his car door, sit down with his legs hanging out of the car and take his boots off while saying “man my dogs are barking tonight” He was practically another Fonz.

When a Fonzie gives you advice, you listen. According to Fonzie, you can never trust a woman.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

When one of them is going down on you, you always have to be ready for them to bite. Keep your thumbs up. So if they bite you, just push your thumbs into their eyes until they let go. Always keep your thumbs up Fonzie said.

One day I met his girlfriend. She said that I was “scarier than the dark.” She still had both eyes though, so I guess she was alright.

Attention horror movie makers. Enough with the loud noises. They are a poor replacement for talent. You probably put those loud noises in there because you know that you are boring the audience, and you don't want us to doze off for too long, but alarm clocks are only scary at 5:45 AM when you have to get up for work.

Real horror is quiet. It creeps up on you, it sticks with you for days. It is fear.

Real horror is gore. The Blood drinking, head chopping, sharp stick in the eye kind. The kind that makes squeamish girls jump and cover their eyes.

Loud noises are only scary to parents whose child insists they want to play the drum in the school band no matter how many video games and toys you give them. Ask any cranky old man, loud noises are not scary, they're just annoying.

Decronis: wanna see real were (wolf) just, piss me off and you well see one EMToast: I well? Fuck you!!! Now change.

Decronis: sometimes we run on two legs some times four sometimes five if u catch my drift

Decronis: all of u are fake. im the eighteen son of the devil my name is decronis my birth name is alex veleteriz im a werewolf and i hate it its not a blessing it a punishment killing the ones u love for food pains me. i wish i could die but i cant. i used to live in aurora its a different dimension. earth is just a feeding ground for us. my dad a.k.a devil as u guys call him took over a mans life and got a girl pregnant when i was born i was taken away from my mother to live in aurora were i was trained to become the perfect killer a werewolf. when i was four i was returned home to my mother but she did not no me so i was taken to a orphanage soon kids were missing cuz i needed to eat an thats all im gonna tell u guys for now

Decronis: if at least one of u guys are a real werewolf come find me and try to kill me cuz i have a horrible life as a werewolf i live in Barrel Alaska it shouldn't be hard to find me just use your nose i smell like bazel and death and if ur looking for a fight u got one

EMToast: maybe you should go back to aurora where you belong.

Decronis: im not aloud, every one in aurora wants to make me a slave because i helped a angel escape custody of my dad , and I had no choice to help her cuz she was my girlfriend and i loved her EMToast: I like the way you think kid. If you want to chronicle your life story for EMToast, let me know. I bet you have some stories to tell.

Decronis: trust me i have more stories then a library

EMToast: Did you ever have to fight for your life against a wizard or a vampire from aurora?

Decronis: yea but i never fought a wizard because there are friends to us and im more than a werewolf im banchy, dragon, and vampire. i was born a dragon first was never a werewolf yet. when i was in aurora age two i was thrown into a cave filed with werewolves, the one that bit u was the one you were going to become that was the rules. unfortunately i was bitten by an alpha werewolf.an alpha or an omega was the strongest creatures in aurora. my dad paid the alpha to bite me. when i was two my dad cut my stomach open and put three banchys in me so i can turn into one. when i was three i was also thrown into another cave filed with vampires i was bitten by an omega witch was the leader. a month later i was trained in the art of pent (pentagrams) attacks witch was a one hit kill move

EMToast: Wow you must be strong. But since you were turned vampire at age 3, do you still have a 3 year old dragons body. Vampires don't age right? Or is there some way you can become an adult still?

Decronis: vampire age so i have an adults body. well i kinda have an adults body cuz im 15

the only thing i can turn into on earth is a vampire and werewolf because in aurora there is a toxin in the air that lets the mystical creatures breath so if i turned into a dragon or a banchy on earth i would instantly go into a coma. and the only reason i choose not to turn into a vampire is because 1.there as big as a small plain 2. always mad 3. kills 5 times more than a werewolf and 4.they do not give a crap who sees them like if the government see me i would be in bigger trouble in aurora and they mite send bounty hunters to come get me.

EMToast: Is Aurorora hell? Just wondering because you have 17 brothers and your father is the devil. Or did he just take over an aurora man to impregnate your mother?

Decronis: sorry i forget to tell you there is a lot more dimensions then just one. hell is its own dimension, aurora is a place for all good and bad EMToast: How much do you weigh as a dragon? Like 500 lbs?

Is your vampire form bigger or smaller than the dragon. Tell me more about the banshees. This is some good stuff.

Decronis: we dragons don't weigh that much 80 pounds at best because we need to fly. are bones are hollow and we are 7 feet when we stand, 4 feet when we are on all fours. vampires are a lot bigger then dragon.s vampires wingspan is 22 feet and a dragons is wingspan 13 feet. a banshee is a phantom like creature the only thing we can do is go through walls, thats about it nothing special .

this is cool never told any body my life story. its good to get stuff off my chest

EMToast: It's interesting. Strange, but that's what we're all about. How about your human form? Does it look normal or do you have dragon or werewolf features?

Decronis: my human form looks normal

EMToast: What other dimensions have you gone too besides aurora and this one?

Decronis: I've never really been to any other dimension besides hell and aurora I've only herd about the other dimensions

EMToast: Thanks Decronis. Is there anything else you want to add before we wrap up the interview? Would you like to apologize to any of the people you had to eat like those orphan kids?

Might as well take this opportunity to unload some guilt. Everyone understands it's not easy to be cursed.

Who Invented the Skittles?

By EMToast
May 30, 2010
Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: Flavio Skitelle, Flavio's Candy, invention, Mars, Skitteles, Skittles, Taste the rainbow, Tiney Skittle man from jupitar, who invented skittles

Who invented Skittles? It's a simple question with many answers. An internet search would lead you to believe they were created by either Paul Michaels and Rick Walden. Further digging proves that Paul Michaels is the current Global CEO of Mars, Inc, and Rick Walden is supposedly a worker at Mars, Inc.

Neither answer is satisfactory since Skittles "were first made commercially in 1974 by a European company." It wasn't until 1979 that Mars Inc, became involved with the rainbow flavored candy when they began importing it into the United States. The candy does not have American origins.

Another unlikely source states that skittles were invented by "a tiney little skittle man that actually came here from Jupitar." Although humorous, the grammar alone discredits the candy's alien origins.

So where do Skittles come from? Let's start with the most credible source, Mars North America.

Mars states that "SKITTLES® Bite Size Candies were first introduced in the United States in 1974, made by a company in England. In 1982, production of SKITTLES® Bite Size Candies began in the United States."

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Does it seem strange that even the mother company doesn't want us to know who the inventor is? I became suspicious and took a trip to London, England to do my own private investigation.

I started off at the British Library (BL) the national library of the UK. The building houses over "150 million items in all known languages and formats: books, journals, newspapers, magazines… patents, databases … and much more." After days of digging through stacks of dusty patent files, confectioners journals, and police reports, I was able to piece together the story.

In 1971 Flavio Skitella an Italian confectioner moved to England with his family. He opened a candy store "Flavi's Candys" where one of the most popular items was an Italian confetti candy (Jordon Almonds). This popular wedding candy is traditionally a white sugar coated almond which is thrown at the wedding couple as they leave the church to represent good fortune and money.

Soon after opening his shop, there was an almond shortage and Flavio was forced to create a recipe for the confetti's without almonds. His new recipe was very chewy, and very cheap. Children loved them. At nearly every wedding British children could be seen crawling on the ground gathering and eating these chewy treats. They loved them.

They became so popular, that Flavio began selling the white and now also a black candy, not as Confetti, but as "Skitteles." British children from miles around came to Flavio's shop to get their "25 for 5 pennies" candy which they referred to as "Skittles" which was easier to pronounce.

Demand for the candy grew and Flavio and because he could produce them cheaply without almonds, he began adding new colors and new flavors. By 1973 he had replaced the original black and white "Skitteles" with lemon yellow, green lime, orange, red strawberry, and purple grape. He also embraced the children's pronunciation and began calling them Skittles.

Demand became so high that Flavio was forced to turn his hand made creation over to a factory. Their production capabilites allowed them to put a black S on each candy, but similar to the M's that the similarly shaped M&M's candies had.

By 1974 the candy's popularity had spread from England, across Europe, and by 1979 they were being exported to the United states.

Strangely, in November 1979 a police report documents that Flavio Skillete visited Mars Inc, in America to work out a distribution deal. He never returned. According to the report his body was never found and the case was closed after just 2 weeks. The only clue that was ever recovered was a letter he wrote to his wife postmakred on the day of his disappearance.

It said, " I'm writing this with tears in my eyes, I came down here from London, England for a short meeting and I was mugged at gun point last night at the park of the hotel where we lodged all cash and documents, credit cards were stolen off me, thank God we have our life and passport.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

I've been to the UK embassy and the Police here but they're not helping issues at all, they asked us to wait for 3 weeks but we can't wait till then. Our flight leaves in less than 3hrs from now and we are having problems settling the hotel bills.

The hotel manager won't let us leave until we settle the hotel bills. I will be washing dishes, and I may never return.

Love Flavio

P.S, The meeting went great and I gave the rights to Skittles to Mars Inc. They now own the rights to produce and market my delicious candy. Taste the Rainbow."

It was here that I ended my investigation for fear of my life. I began receiving troubling hang up calls at my hotel room and got the sense that I was being followed. When I returned home, someone kept throwing pebbles at my bedroom window, and then some kids knocked over my garbage cans. I'm not sure if Mars had anything to do with it, but for now I'm going to say that I believe that Skittles were invented by a Tiny Skittle man from Jupiter.

Hey! Did you see that movie the Wrestler? Yeah me too. It wasn't as good as that cartoon back in the 80's that had Hulk Hogan and all his friends on the good guys team and then on the bad guys team was the Iron Sheik and all his guys. That's pretty much all I remember about that cartoon. It's more that I can remember about that movie. I was never into wrestling except for in the 80s's. I think it was because my Mom hated it that I wanted to watch it. I think every kid goes through that where you want to be into something if your mom hates it. It's weird though because she hated Michael Jackson and I also hated Michael Jackson. My sister had one of those red thriller jackets though. That was kind of cool and funny all at once. I wish she knew how to breakdance really good. Then we could have had all these crazy picture of at her dance recitals doing that turtle spin or whatever those poppers and lockers can do. I hated Michael Jackson so much.

One day there was practically a riot in 3rd grade. Some of the kids were on the Joan Jett "I love Rock and Roll" team and then the others were on the Michael Jackson "Beat It" team. We had a record player in class and everyone was scratching records and switching then and yelling. Then I remember running up to the blackboard and tearing this girl's Michael Jackson poster down. I guess it was a pretty expensive poster. It's kind of scary what parents can get their kids to believe.

Was the first Wrestlemania free? I don't think they even had paperview back then. I know I watched it. Oh wait it's pay per view, not paperview.

If it was paperview it could have been like the thing that had at Buster Brown shoes sore we used to go to had. It was this movie machine where you'd look into it and crank the handle and the pictures would flip and you'd see the motion picture. Do kids even make flip books anymore. I mean these kids have so much shit today it's ridiculous. If they saw a black and white flip book movie machine they'd be like fuck this I got me a Ipod.

We used to get these fucking balloons at Buster Brown and they put cardboard feet on them and we thought it was great. I think the balloons were peanut shaped and had faces on them. I feel like if I gave a kid that today they'd shit on it and throw it out the window. Are they even interested in simple toys like that. When we were kids one of those balloons blew away and we were chasing it across a parking lot because it was this special once-a-year toy. Can kids even be into that stuff anymore? Kids are like alien creatures to me. I probably don't give them enough credit.

Wrestling used to have Andre the Giant and Hacksaw Jim Duggan. And that guy with the parrots. I never liked Rowdy Roddy Piper until he was in that movie They Live and then he gained my respect. That movie was awesome with the sunglasses skeleton faces. And Andre the Giant was in "The Princess Bride." How come wresters back then were in all these good movies? The Rock is in the shittiest movies. Like I saw he is going to be in this new movie "The Stranger." When I first saw the movie poster I thought it was funny that they would have The Rock as the main character in a movie based on the Camus novel. That would have been crazy, but instead it's just some bullshit movie. Are there any other wrestler actors?

Monday night means wrestling. The night when your ex girlfriend uses it as an excuse to go smoke at her Dad's house because neither one of you will admit that you never stopped smoking. It's pretty fucked up if you ask me. That's the sign of a relationship in decline when you both know you are smoking again and still refuse to admit it.

Was there ever a movie about a wrestler who was a genie. They had one where Shaq was a genie, but he's not a wrester. Do they still have that guy Goldberg? He'd probably make a good genie. I know they had pillows of him back in the day. One of my buddies was real into wrestling in the late 90's and really wanted that pillow.

Nonsense is the New Making Sense at UC Berkeley

Nonsense is the new making sense. At least at UC Berkeley Dept of Psychology where Professors Tania Griffith and Tomas Lombrazo co-teach their Proseminar: Foundations of Disassociative Cognition. CCN: 84955

Much like an immersive foreign language course, students in "Disassocitive" Class are asked to stop making sense as soon as they walk through the door.

Professor Lombrazo explains, "Disassociative Cognition is a manner of thinking in which a person is able to make connections between things which are in no way connected. These are not random thoughts, these are the thoughts that we cannot think, that we do not think. You've heard people say think outside the box. Well that's bullshit. The only way to truly think outside the box is to go further into the box. We're done with boxes. Stop thinking that way. Reality is a hoax."

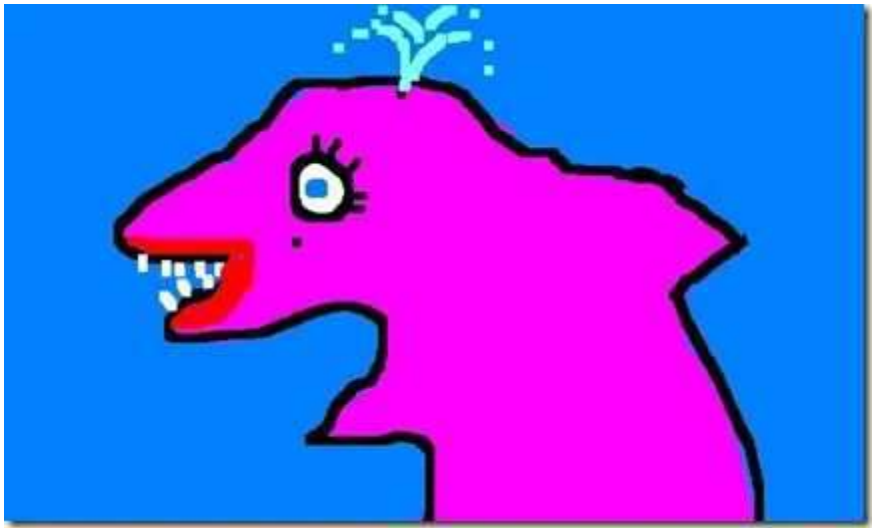
Lombrazo states, "Most people connect one idea logically to the next idea it's associated with in their mind. They think bear, they think honey, they think bees. That way of thinking just doesn't work in today's world where nothing makes sense. I think bear, then I think garden, I think cave. The average mind might make the connection between bear and garden, and certainly to cave. But the disassociative mind does not make this connection. Any relationship that any concepts have to each other is purely coincidental. Associative thinking always attempts to make connections where there are none. The world does not make sense. Nonsense doesn't need to. Can't you see that!"

Professor Griffith takes the fully immersed approach. "Get to my coconuts. Gargle guppy papershred, lightnings. That mushroom tarantula be crucifixion parentheses. Please ganamede tithe my pants width. Purty dawg see Dolphin turtle die."

Most people practice logical cognition and associative thinking for their creative process. The two professors believe this is why the world is "infested" with popular media such as CSI, Avatar, and Miley Cirus.

One of their students, Randall Stott says, "Look you can't go around living your life thinking things are alright and that is all going to be clear and meaningful. You know how your parents tell you life isn't fair? Well life doesn't make sense. Professors have taught me it's all nonsense, and quite frankly I'd go one step further and say I doubt any of it is even real."

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast



The class which begins again this fall has a one line syllabus. “This course will survey the concepts of cognitiion and the fundamental concerns of a real world of sense which is comprised of nonsense.“

Word on campus is that the course is an easy “A”. Here are a few rumors about the class we heard on campus.

“One boy just beeped in a series of five-ten-five through all 40 course hours, and he was awarded an A.”

“A girl asked if she could go to the bathroom and she failed.”

“Jerry got a bunch of tattoos on his neck, shit in the corner then kept saying hello Franklins to it and got a B+.”

“Tommy told professor Griffith he was going to kick her in the box, then kissed her with his eyes open for his final project and received a A-“

“Cindy got caught doing Sudoku and was expelled.”

“Reese wagged his imaginary tail, barked at the mailman, and sat pretty all while playing Pac-Man. The professors called him a liar, gave him a jar of pickes, then made him sit pretty. I think he has to take the course again, because the next day he was acting like a cat and the one professor just lost his shit. I guess it made too much sense or something.”

“Melissa talked about her dolphin boyfriend and claimed to be a dolphin sexaholic, and ate nothing but Arthur Treachers for lunch. I think she was in the wrong class.”

“Carmen talked about Sam Neil’s mooostache and how he was a handsome man. Then laughed wildly Yoo Hoo Hoo Hoo. I mean Sam Neil? Really? I bet she got an A because that is horse shit.”

“Raymond started breaking pieces off his cast and built a tiny castle, then he poured iodine and dead ants on it. This was for a pop quiz which he aced"

"Vaugnn mostly counted. 1, 2, 3, 7, 1 , 2, 3, Cat, 1, 3, 2 Vector. Then he disappeared from campus for a while. When he came back he was riding a white lion and had on a top hat and tails. I think the was Valedictorian"

None of it makes much sense, but I guess that's the point.

Commenter Murdered by the Media?

In recent weeks EMToast has received a number of comments from a visitor by the name of Sickjunior. After visiting his blog MURDER BY MEDIA I learned that he suspects himself to be the victim of a lifelong conspiracy by the entertainment media to trap him in California, destroy his personal life, addict him to drugs, manipulate him with women, bug his home, broadcast his life, cultivate racism, sabotage his art career, and potentially sacrifice his life for charity. I had to interview him.

Toastmaster:I was thinking, how about I do an interview with you. What do you say Sickjunior?

Sickjunior: Uh, well, no one would believe my story, but hell, wouldn't hurt to get the word out, I guess. At any rate it remains to be seen if they will allow you to interview me or at least post it.

Toastmaster: Who do you think wouldn't allow me to interview you or post it? Does this have anything to do with "Murder by Media"?

Sickjunior: Yes. Absolutely. They've been manipulating and broadcasting my life for at least 35 years, by my estimate, possibly my entire life. At any rate, strange things have always been going on since I can remember.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

They've been trying to strand me here in the Bay Area for over 25 years. Now that they've succeeded they will not let me go.

They don't want me to make any statements or form any relationships in the outside world that they don't control.

Toastmaster: Who are "they"?

Sickjunior: They are the entertainment media. They are your masters, the harbingers of the coming corporate dictatorship.

Toastmaster: Why you?

Sickjunior: Good question. Because I'm so entertaining I suppose. I know it sounds crazy, but I think it's supposed to.

In fact I will have to weigh my words carefully or I'll sound like just another schizophrenic, and not what I really am, the world's child, the guy everybody loves to hate.

Toastmaster: How have the entertainment media been broadcasting your life?

Sickjunior: They have cameras and microphones in my room, in my car, and at my work.

Since people are always giving me their old clothes, I have no doubts they're in there as well, as well as tracking devices.

Toasmaster: How have they been manipulating you?

Sickjunior: Every acquaintance and girlfriend I've had has been working for them. Remember 'Total Recall' when Arnold starts to remember his mission, and his wife and friends try to kill him because they are working for the agency? I had a similar experience when I finally figured out what had been going on.

Toastmaster: How have they stranded you in the Bay Area?

Sickjunior: This time when they got me up here, they made sure I can't leave. The propaganda being broadcast against me is so inflammatory now that I can't make ANY friends. No one will hire me, or do a damned thing for me. I have a part time one day a week job at a liquor store a few towns over, and I am lucky to have even that. Without friends or money, I'm pretty stuck. Stuck and fucked. They monitor my phone calls and online activity and likely tamper with my mail too, so I can't, like, strike up a long distance romance or something and get away that way.

Because they control my internet activity they can control who I can communicate with.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Toastmaster: How do they control your relationships?

Sickjunior: They keep sending me these women who like 'fall in love' with me after a week or two. This has been going on for over 20 years now. Surely you can see the genius in that. These women aren't interested in me, they just want to be part of this project. The one before last got me heavily involved with meth and really messed me up that way. You know most chicks will do anything to be on TV.

Keep in mind, they had me on meth a number of years, and you know how charming that can make you. Also, the women I was with would deliberately push my buttons while I was in stressful situations to make me blow my stack. They did this several times.

I wish they'd send another though. It's been a while and I'm pretty horny. (ha ha)

I strongly suspect they have been documenting my sex life. All my girlfriends encouraged me towards strange (to me at least) sexual practices and wanted me to always talk dirty to them. Also, whenever we got hotel rooms, it was always the same room and when we checked out, the hotel keepers always looked and behaved towards me in the most curious of ways. They've filmed me doing all kinds of stuff that even I, who have long since resigned myself to the fact that I have NO privacy, blush to think about everyone seeing.

Toastmaster: How else?

Sickjunior: In my late teens they kept sending me guys. I think they wanted me to be gay, but I just wasn't interested.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

They got me involved with drugs big time, and, to a lesser extent, fascist politics.

Also they have sent me lots of people preaching white supremacy. I think it's safe to say they wanted me to be a Nazi. Although I do think it's a shame the white race is dying, I'm totally nonviolent and don't like picking on people.

Toastmaster: Would we know any of the girls they sent to you? Did any of them go on to become famous?

Sickjunior: Many of the women I was with went on to high paying jobs that I don't think they really deserved, but it was like a reward or something. Some work in entertainment, not as actresses though. One seems to have gotten several vacations out of it, two to Europe, and a college education. But what do I get? Me, the fuckin star? Nada. Just a lot of grief and despair.

Toastmaster: How do you convince people this is real?

Sickjunior: I don't feel I need to convince people this is real as I'm sure most people already know about it, at least here on the west coast. I just want people to know that I'm really a loveable guy, and not the monster they see on the screen after the manipulating and editing.

Toastmaster: You'll have to forgive me as an East Coaster, but I've never heard anything about this. Where have you been on television that the media portrayed you in a bad light?

Sickjunior: It is, at present at least, a long running cable television show on Community Access Television. They have several stations in California, especially in the Bay Area. I believe it's Channel 29 San Francisco.

I hired a P.I. to find this stuff out, but he ripped me off and told me I was nuts. So much for his ethics. I then did my own investigation and found out these facts. The woman I used to live with, in her basement, worked at the Irvine Foundation on Market St. in San Francisco. Channel 29 is down the street from where she worked. She was head of multimedia communications for that 'non profit', and frequently put together programming that aired on that station.

Toastmaster: Let me understand. There is a cable show that you are on? Do you appear willingly? Can we know the name of the show?

Sickjunior: I don't know the name of the show, web address of the website, or which radio station the radio broadcast was on. Naturally the people watching this garbage in my building put on music during the station breaks so I can not hear any of that information. I am only guessing the channel based on the reasons I have given. It may very well NOT be channel 29, but I am confident it is Community Access Television.

Criminal asshole television I calls it. C.A.T., which is why i despise cat people. I generally steer clear of people with cats on their avatars. Usually disagreeable bastards anyway.

Toastmaster: There was a radio show?

Sickjunior: As for the radio show, it seemed everybody knew and was discussing what I talked about in therapy on the busses. People were stopping by my doctor's office when I was waiting to be seen and asking me what time my appointment was. My doctor had no idea who they were. I think it's because they heard my sessions on the radio, knew what time they were, and wanted to see what I looked like.

Also my doctor used to drive me to the BART (Bay Area Rapid Transit) station after our meeting. He always fiddled with the radio knobs before we left, then tried to engage me in controversial topics of conversation. Obviously he was taping or transmitting it. I'm sure he had a set up in his office too, but it didn't require him to mess with it in front of me.

Before I finally confirmed that I was a big star, I used to have terrible depression, and, despite this, or because of it, this doctor showed me where in his office he concealed a loaded gun. I mean, WTF!? That right there shows you the ethics of these people.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Toastmaster: Any other forms of media?

Sickjunior: Aside from the cable show, which seems to run 24 hrs these days, there's also a web site where you can read all my emails and there are also links to places I am online, and a radio show where they used to broadcast my psychiatric sessions.

Toastmaster: For what purpose do you believe the media is doing this to you? What do they get out of it?

Sickjunior: I know it's kinda weird, but it's my present theory that I'm being prepared as some kind of sacrifice. I believe the show generates charitable revenue to help poor black kids go to college. I have reasons for believing everything I have stated, so if you think it's important to give my reasons, just ask. I've had to figure this all out with deductive reasoning alone, oftentimes I'm working with scanty evidence, but I've done the best I can.

This whole thing has always been covert. I always had a strange fantasy ever since i was little, that I was being broadcast on TV, maybe it was an intuition. I dunno. I thought for years that I was either crazy or that God was fucking with me, but when I finally heard this show, suddenly everything in my life made sense for the first time and I felt perfectly sane, till I found out there was nothing I could do about it, then I felt crazier than ever.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Toastmaster: Tell us more about this sacrifice. Do you believe this will occur on TV to generate charitable revenue?

Sickjunior: As for my being killed, that's always a paranoid concern of mine. But realistically, if I die, the show ends, and, as we know, the show MUST go on. I worry that I may be in danger now that I've discovered the truth and have threatened to pull a Houdini and show up in another town in another part of the country, get a lawyer and get these sunzabitches, but again, they know what a creature of habit I am (they've been studying me all my life) so I doubt they take me very seriously.

People have been, over the years, conditioned to despise me. I have been tarred with many stigmatized epithets. They've gone out of their way to make sure I represent everything our PC society hates, misogyny, racism, drug addiction, selfishness, dishonesty, you name it. Maybe they feel it would be the feel good show of the century if I am raped and murdered by deranged blacks. But again, since it would terminate what must likely be a money making machine this may be my own paranoia. I hope so.

Toastmaster: Do you fear that EMToast will become the victim of some type of media retribution after we publish your story?

Sickjunior: No, I do not think your website is in any danger, they are not concerned about my publicity as they feel they have complete control over that. People not familiar with it will think I'm crazy, and those who know it's true hate me from the footage they've seen of me so they don't give a shit about my rights. They should though, because I'm only the beginning. Damn you Warhol and your 15 minutes of miserable fame!

The only thing they worry about is my making any real money, because then I'd be a threat to them!

Toastmaster: Have they ever let you make money?

Sickjunior: They did allow me an art career for a short space of time. I showed with Robert Williams, The Pizz, Bad Otis Link, and others of that scene (and mine was the weirdest work there!). I was also in small magazines. Flipside twice, Spazz and Noho, which were two local magazines in the San Fernando Valley, and Exclectic, which I'm sure was one of theirs. It had the worst layout I'd ever seen. These people have lots of disposable income.

I still have a box of promotional copies of the issue that featured me. I was even invited to a big party of theirs which my intuition warned me not to attend as it was in the very area that 'Cat' lived. Cat was supposedly my landlord's boyfriend. He was always over messing with her computer, allegedly. Although his name was given to me as Catelen, I believe this was a joke of theirs as I think he worked for C.A.T. and set up many of the hidden microphones and cameras which I know were situated in my room, computer and car

Many people actively encourage me to keep making art even though they have no interest in owning any. "every part of the buffalo", I bet they plan on making money off my art after I am dead. They have certainly laid the groundwork for my post mortem fame, which, although cool from an art history standpoint, does me no material good while I am alive.

I never turned a profit on my work. I had to matt and frame all my own work, very detailed pen and ink pieces that took on the average of 100 hours to produce, and the gallery, Gallery X in Hollywood, took 60% of the selling price. I never sold anything for over $350, so I always actually lost money.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Toastmaster: Can you expand on why the media is doing this?

Sickjunior: Sometimes I think I must have pissed off some stupidly rich people, likely Jews, who are big in media. But it has been going on since I was a child.

Perhaps my grandfather gave permission for this show when I was young. I was a bit of a handful, and the idea that he would be able to materially profit off of me may have appealed to him.

Someone has suggested that maybe my drug addict mother may have sold me to a television station. Although this scenario would make an excellent story, it seems to me unlikely. I do plan on writing a book about this as I believe I am the only person in human history to have been persecuted thus. It's a story that needs to be told so that, hopefully I will be the last.

Gotta hand it to these media dinks, they really know how to write a trashy good show. If I had went for everything they've thrown my way, I'd be a gay Nazi with a serious drug habit living in Berkeley. NOW THAT'S ENTERTAINMENT!!

Toastmaster: What effects do you feel this has this had on your personal life?

Sickjunior: I find it interesting, and also sad and typical of human nature, that not more people feel bad about how this show has twisted me over the years. Talk about a glass ceiling. Nobody could live through something like this and it NOT affect them in profound and personal ways.

I have encountered some women who were obviously sympathetic, but they were clearly afraid to get involved.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

It is because of this infernal exploitation that I have never married and started a family. It is also why I never aggressively pursued sexual conquests, aside from the fact women came after me usually, I could never trust anyone, especially women, because I always felt they were keeping big secrets from me, so trust was always a major stumbling block for me.

I felt bad for years that I could never get REALLY close to anyone. Now that I know why it's no wonder. Ironic how my 'fame' has actually prevented me from enjoying my life to the fullest.

But again, this was never intended to benefit me. I have been made an unwitting tool by designing people with wicked intentions. Talk about a wasted life. Pisses me off when people say stuff like 'how watching me ruin my life puts their own in perspective'. That only goes to show what brain washed hate zombies they are. I never had a chance even to ruin my life.

My life has never been my own. But everyone goes out of their way to do any little chickenshit thing they can to mess me up. Social workers have deliberately sabotaged my education and vocational rehabilitation, cashiers intentionally pass me counterfeit bills frequently and short change me, and i don't even want to go into what all the losers in my building put me through on a daily basis. All this stuff was created and transmitted without my knowledge or consent, yet I am never endingly being punished for it. I know life ain't fair, but DAMN!!

Toastmaster: What can you do about it?

Sickjunior: Hopefully i will live long enough to sue these bastards back to the stoneage, but local lawyers hang up on me the second they hear my voice.

I only pray it will end well. no middle ground, its either "GET RICH OR DIE!"

Maybe this (interview) will finally bring me some help. My neighbors were really mad last night and people were having loud arguments last night, worse than usual, and people are ignoring me and sending me viruses on Facebook. That's out of the ordinary so I take it as a good sign.
They don't like to see ANY changes in my life, those petty bastards!

This is really a life or death situation for me. These people are out to snuff me. I can see it's entirely up to me to save myself. It doesn't look good though as it's just me against billions of delusional idiots. This thing just never ends.

Toastmaster: Okay. Thanks SJ. I think we've probably covered it all. Any closing statements you would like to make before we wrap it up?

Sickjunior: Yes. just one thing. "May God have mercy on your miserable souls."
God told me to pass this along too…

"Harken unto the word of the Lord thy God, sons of dust that ye may save yourselves! Wo unto you unworthy sinners, generation of vipers, take it not upon yourselves to defy me yet again and crucify

my only begotten son twice or i shall smite your seed mightily and put a curse upon thee which will humble you before the abominations which I have created to punish thee for thy transgressions!

Thus sayeth the lord thy god, the god of Abraham and Moses, and yay, Harpo, Zeppo and Gummo too were my prophets. Be liken unto them and heed my warning! Lest a hair on my son's head be harmed or pushed out of place, wo unto you mankind for all the plagues of the old testament shall rain down on you and the living will envy the dead. thus sayeth the Lord thy God!!"

Sickjunior's Closing Statement:

I'm sure everybody gets that the above quote from God is a joke, but let me seriously make this closing statement.

Although this community and Community Access Television are constantly in efforts to try and take away my housing, get me fired from my crummy job and try to stop my government checks, among other things, one 'good' thing out of all of this is that they lost absolutely no time in whisking me off to one of their psychiatrists to have me officially declared schizoid when I announced that i had finally figured out what was going on.

They did this primarily to compromise my credibility, especially because at the same time I shared this revelation I also announced that I was giving up drugs, despite the fact I am rudely discouraged from attending 12 step meetings around here by the local dry drunks and wet brained drug addicts. I say it's a 'good' thing because since I am legally insane I have more rights than the average person, so, especially here in this 'liberal' community, it will prove much more difficult for them to do any of these things than it otherwise would because I will fight them with all the means available to me.

I have not done, nor am I doing, anything that would further ruin my life were I found out. My only concern is, that since literally everyone is against me, and I know for a fact these people have big connections in all the local police departments, and based on some strange experiences I have had (as alluded to in my blog), that what they may well be planning is to try and set me up for some heinous crime and throw me in prison with the trash of sub humanity where my days of terror will be numbered.

There is the possibility that they won't wish to take a chance on trying to set up a totally innocent man with a crime he did not, could not commit, and, since the only avenue of escape I see open to me is to just hit the road with nowhere to go, maybe they are trying to spook me into doing that. Either way, whether I die of hunger and exposure by the side of the freeway or am killed by psychotic criminals it is an ugly picture. Let me just say that it is not only grossly unethical, but sickeningly immoral for any person, or organization of people to have or wield this kind of sadistic control, over an innocent individuals life, and I believe this entire community, if not the world, will some day be harshly called to task for it.

And all for the sake of 'entertainment' and hypocritical 'charity'? Shame on all of you for allowing this.

unwilling celebrity

August 24, 2010

UPDATE:

I am trying, by every means available to me, to secure solid information concerning the criminal exploitation I have endured for countless years now. Keep in mind that I have finally found proof of the spy programs uploaded to my computer that I have long now suspected. Naturally they will soon be removed, affording me much needed privacy in my correspondences that will doubtlessly prove useful in dispelling this sick conspiracy. Based on my observations they are, for some reason, just as scared of my entirely stopping all this as they are of finally being called to task for it. I should be very curious to know excactly why.

unwilling celebrity

August 24, 2010

Wonderful how one discovery leads to another. Also I find it entertaining all the short sighted mistakes these self important buffoons have recently made, starting with Dana Brownfield's nasty temperament resulting in my discovery of this criminal exploitation. She was angry with me for getting involved in drugs again because I owed her, or so she felt, a substantial amount of money. I contend that I clearly did not, since it turns out the only reason I needed the money from her is the direct result of her criminal slander in the first place, and the only reason she willingly 'lent' it to me was the result of her sick desire to keep her criminal project interesting for the public.

Anyway, typical of this bitch's short sighted tantrums, she kicked me out with absolutely no warning. Eventually I was given housing through vocational rehab, of all places, but it was no real favor as the room I was given was equipped with a hidden camera and microphones. In any event, it was both the close proximity to my neighbors, combined with their own limited intellect which resulted in giving the entire game away as I could clearly hear these idiots watching this deplorable production from my room.

When I announced my discovery they were preternaturally quick in having me hurriedly declared schizophrenic in an attempt to discredit me, which had exonerated me from liability for the supposed 'welfare fraud' they were then in the process of framing me with.

I am eternally grateful that my only worldly enemies have turned out to be a comical confederacy of dunces. Literally the left hand doesn't know what the right is even doing in this instance.

This town is a joke. These people, assuming they are even still worthy of the term, are nothing more than self righteous buffoons.
Yet, as much as we mutually hate one another, they block my way at every escape attempt I make.

I've suspected what this is really all about since I found out about it 4 years ago, now I feel I finally have the proof I need. It is my own family doing it. Leave it to that group of misfits to make such a pudding of everything.
It would seem this has all been done to determine if I am worthy to recieve a legacy.

Yes, it's certainly bizarre beyond a doubt.
I have used my deductive reasoning to arrive at a logical answer to all this considering what little bits and pieces of evidence that have fallen my way, so either I am much more clever than everyone anticipated, or an even yet bigger fool, if I am wrong, than anyone imagined.
It has, however, given me the motivation to change my life for the better.

April 20, 2011

I am happy to hear such spirited debate concerning if it would be wise to trust me with the sum in question. The fact they are being so vehement in speaking out against my capabilities tells me they are not comfortable that things are going the way they want them to.
They don't seem to be taking into consideration, and certainly not presenting it for the public to consider, the outstanding acumen I have displayed by not only figuring out the details of all this, but why it is happening at all. I think it is fair to say that it would be rare to find very many other people who, if they were similarly situated in my circumstances, where everything of importance was kept in profound secrecy and he was blatantly lied to about it and deceived whenever he came near the truth, would eventually unravel the mystery entirely without assistance. I believe that if anybody has proven himself capable of making intelligent, informed decisions, even entirely unaided and while being wilfully distracted, that it is myself, as I've clearly demonstrated.
I wish I knew more about inheritance law. Assuming these people seriously hope to affect the outcome of this thing with their broadcast, whoever they are trying to convince that I am not worthy of whatever this is all about, and I don't see how it could be the general public, must be perceived as already being either very biased against me, or at least very unsympathetic and unimaginative, and not able to see how having lived in this artificial social environment most of my life could alter my behavior in strange ways. As should be obvious, once I convinced myself my revelations were sound, I began thinking and behaving remarkably rationally. Definitely much more rational than these broadcasting buffoons would ever give me credit for.

Referring back to the psychiatric notes I mentioned before, this should serve, as nothing else can, to show the awesome, breathtaking arrogance of these people. These notations were not made to lay the groundwork for convincing the community that I am crazy, since they seem to work tirelessly to inform anyone I contact that this is not so where it touches on this, but rather in an attempt to suggest to ME that I may be prone to hallucinations and delusions. They would have much better luck had they been trying to convince me that I am either totally blind or paralysed from the neck down than get me to believe that I am incapable of conversing with reality in an informative way.

To me this proves that they never intended for me to have even found out about all this ongoing slander, I suppose I was to be forever ignorant of everybody spying on my business, or my being intentionally driven this way and that according to these people's whims, and forever wonder why I had been cursed with such rotten luck.

I know they take any such things as I may have, or likely may have done and weave a very involved tapestry of falsehoods and suppositions around it to paint them as somehow being wrong and selfish.

I have to ask myself, "Why is this so very important to them?", "How does it serve their interests to do this?", "Why this evil obsession to keep me from what is rightfully mine, which, thanks to them, I have paid for many times over with my frustration and suffering during what should have been the best years of my life especially?".

I know the vast majority of people they are preaching to are not very analytical or perceptive, so why are they so preoccupied with what these imbeciles think at all?

Unquestionably there is something very large taking place behind my back that affects and/or will affect me, and as big a thing as this show is, it's only symptomatic of a much larger and important issue. An issue so important these people feel it is imperative that they control public opinion concerning it.

Whether my grandfather started this circus, or merely approved of it, I can not say- but gaging by his reaction when I told him of my discovery, he felt it was nowhere near the debilitating thing it has proven to be. I am surprised to find he was evidently so unaware of the perverse side of human nature as, evidently, it didn't occur to him how granting these people the sort of power they have over me couldn't produce the unsavory temptation to abuse it that they have taken advantage of.

I can remember him on this show after I had shared my observations and concerns about this issuing pathetic appeals to the public not to judge me too harshly or keep useful opportunities from me because 'I'm not really a bad kid'. This convinces me he made the unwise decision to trust the details of this broadcast to unwholesome individuals, otherwise how else to account for this embarrassing display?

I know I may be providing an amusing spectacle by spinning my wheels about things I can only assume when it seems everyone else believes they already have all the answers, and I admit, I could be entirely mistaken about what I heard this morning that inspired this post, after all, there was so much background noise that I was only able to pick out a few words here and there, but even if it was just another of those tabloid talk shows, which I admit can be easily confused with this thing, I believe these present observations are still valid as they are consistent with everything else I have noticed and suspected for quite some time now, so I have no misgivings about sharing them with you.
Besides, I hope that it is still human nature that once we have figured out 'what' is going on, that we immediately move on to 'why' it is happening in the first place.
Some of the answers I may arrive at may be different from those that have been provided for you, but this does not necessarily make them incorrect.
My unique life experience has taught me not only much about types of individuals, but also groups of individuals. What should be of interest to people in general is what I have learned first hand about television media and how the people in charge of it operate and use it to push their own self interested agenda while ignoring the public's best interests.
I believe I've already outlined my observations concerning all of that on FB.
My perceptions concerning this 'exploitation' has evolved from my seeing it has a terrible, life destroying thing, to it's being an opened invitation to go out and take whatever I want from the world for my own enjoyment, to where it stands now, as a kind of solemn opportunity and responsibility not to be taken at all lightly as it can result in either my being made or destroyed depending how it's handled.
There has to be a reason why I am portrayed and criticized so harshly on this thing always, and I don't believe that taking advantage of the dubious celebrity it has created for me where I am allowed and encouraged to do as I please with anybody I see fit will ultimately serve my best interests.
Besides, it has always seemed wise to me to assume that if something seems too good to be true, in this case the Godlike power it seems I have been granted to do as I please and never be called to task to pay for it in any conventional way, that it obviously is.
If I am correct and somehow this has become part of a scheme to try and prevent me from obtaining access to some amount of money that may be due to me (I am hardly egotistical enough to assume all this attention focused on me is merely because I am such a unique and fascinating individual), certainly everyone must see that it is absolutely criminal to keep me scraping by in squalor at tax payer expense if I am entitled to an income that would make me self sufficient.

Whatever this should prove to be all about it should be plain that it is unfair that these evil clowns regularly go on the air and slander me and I am not even allowed to know what they are saying, and certainly not granted an opportunity to answer for or defend myself.
In fact it is a shocking outrage that this is the case and I can't see how I can be alone in seeing this!

This fact becomes very important when one considers that they habitually take advantage of the great secrecy this broadcast is cloaked in to prevent my even being aware if it to say whatever they feel they can get away with to make me look selfish and irresponsible in the public imagination, and seeing how effective these measures have proven to be, considering I've yet to actually view a single episode, that is considerable.

Heat Causes Horses to Foam at the Mouth

By EMToast
July 8, 2010
Categories: Art of the Folked

I like horses. They have shiny teeth. You can feed them sugar cubes. When it gets real hot they get all foamy. A horse can't sweat it just foams and if it gets too hot the foam comes out of their mouth. Keep cranking up the heat and they get blood mane, fangs, and extremely bloodshot eyes. Horses like that aren't even afraid of fire. You know how they say horses are afraid of fire, like that scene at the end of the howling where they trap all the howlings in that barn and burn it down to kill all them. Well if you try to kill a foaming horse like that, it doesn't work like on regular horses. Foaming horses are bad asses. It's like something changes in their genes and they become fierce carnivores. No longer the gentle creatures that girls love and wear on their sweatshirts. These horses are a match for any beast even a lion. I hear this one zoo got too hot and all these horses foamed up then they stampeded out of their pen. First they attacked the lions. They smashed them down with their hooves then tore the lions apart and ate them alive. After that they went after this Kodiak bear couple. Kodiaks are the largest bears but they were no match for the foaming equines. Those horseys galloped the bears down into a couple of bearskin rugs. I think this was supposed to have happened at this place called Space Farm, but I went there and didn't see any foaming horses even though it was really really hot.

Once, during a heat wave in Las Vegas during the chistmas holidays, the AC in a popular pet store gave out and the hamsters went berzerk, eating their way through a crowded shopping center, devouring scores of elderly and other slow moving shoppers. But when it was over and the hamsters returned to nomal, they were so darned cute no one wanted to put them down, and they were happily adopted by the local children, many of whom lost siblings or their grandparents during the ravenous rampage.

Mama’s Been So Fat, Since Daddy Learned to Fry

They say fried food is a killer. I doubt it. The grease is just good for your whole body.

It greases up your blood and helps it slip through your veins and to your heart. It makes your bones more rubbery so you can take a fall without breaking a leg. It lubricates your eye drums so you don’t run out of ocular fluid and you can see real far. Forget about carrots. Cooked carrots rot your teeth, but the crunchy stuff on the outside of fried chicken is great for teeth. Its grease seeps into the dentin and makes your teeth uncrackable. One gentleman who eats fried KFC nearly every day for lunch has 100 perfectly white teeth. Zero cavities and he’s almost 50. He is part shark though (on his mother’s side)

So don’t let the health fanatics get you down. Eat your bacon, burgers and fried chicken. It’s really healthy and Atkins approved. Don’t let the extra weight bother you either. It’s strength training.

Gorilla Head

July 29, 2010

It was 3 am and this was the second time her bladder had awoken her that night. She lay there for a moment contemplating whether she should get up and go or just try to fall back to sleep. A pounding at her door made the decision for her. She got up and made her way to the door. Without asking who it was she unlocked and opened the kitchen door. She already knew who it would be.

He was a mess. His hair looked as though it hadn't been combed in several days. Dark thick stubble covered his face. His eyes were sunken, bloodshot and the left one kept twitching. His boots and pant legs were coated in mud.

She was afraid of him tonight. He pushed past her and sat down at the kitchen table and began to speak.

"I've started having this dream again. I haven't had it since before I was married."

"I'm driving a car on this dark road. I'm speeding, without headlights. Before I know it, I'm coming up on a brick wall. And I don't slow down. I crash into it. I want to crash into it. And once I hit, I don't stop crashing. It's like the force of my will, my anger is making the car just keep crashing. It's not like any real crash would be. It keeps going until the whole car crushes. Until there is nothing. Until I don't even exist anymore."

"But then I am there again, and I'm outside. It's still night. Through the smoke I can see a wreckage in the road that looks more like a huge crushed soda can than a car. A rescue crew arrives and begins tearing at the wreck with huge metal claws and powerful scissors. They make an opening at the top and begin peeling metal back like you would the foil from a baked potato."

"And instead of finding my mutilated body inside, they uncover a gorilla head, the size of a man. Open gashes cross it's grey face. Flakes of crust surround it's huge flaring nostrils. Strings of mucous web it's half-open mouth. Horrified the crew tears the head out of the mass, leaving bits of flesh behind. As soon as it's free, they drop it to the ground. The head makes a sick hollow thud. Several workers wipe their hands on their pants as they stand there confused."

She sat in silence. Listening. There was nothing she could say, and he wasn't stopping to let her talk.

"That face, that goddamn face. It's everywhere I look. If I try to shave, I see it all grey and dead with lather on it. If I brush my teeth all I see are it's rubbery black tongue and lips. It's in the windows, the doors. I see it reflecting back at me in your goddamn eyes!."

He began looking at her. Expecting her to say something. She had never seen him like this before.

All she could say was, "I think you need help."

He exploded, "Help. Is that what I need? Like when you helped me away from my wife. When you helped me to lose my house. Then how you helped me try to accept how you were a whore and a drug addict. I need something better than help."

He regretted snapping.

"I'm sorry I don't even know why I came here. I've just got to pull myself together. I was walking past, wandering, and I wanted to tell somebody. I should go."

She said, "Yeah you should probably try to get some rest. You look terrible. Maybe tomorrow you'll feel better. Figure some things out. You can sleep on the couch if you want."

"Nah, I think I'll just go home."

They said their goodbyes and he left. As he walked home, he thought about things. How much he had lost. What she had cost him. He became angry. With her. With himself for falling for someone like her. Angry at life and how bad he was at it. He though about strangling her. Strangling his wife. There had to be a way to ease the pain.

The streets were lined with parked cars. The streetlights provided enough light that he could see his reflection out of the corner of his eye in the window of each car he passed. He knew better than to look. He knew he wouldn't like what he saw, but some part of him wanted to look. That part eventually took over. He stopped and turned. A hazy image was reflected back at him in a dust covered driver's side window. He leaned in. He was relieved to see his own image, but that feeling didn't last. Before his eyes his head transformed into the ape head. Still grey, but different than before. The eyes had now sunken deep into the huge sockets and tiny flies flew in and out of the skull. The lips and dried up and pulled back forming a sinister grin. He lifted his hands and touched his face. The skin felt cold and dead. He watched in the window as he rubbed his fingers against the thick grey bristles of hair on the ape chin. He could feel himself slipping. He let it happen. He wanted it to happen.

The burden of sanity and pain was too much for him anymore. He turned away and began running wildly into the streets. He ran back towards the house he had come from. As he moved, he was roaring wildly. He saw a car coming towards him. The lights blinding him, he ran straight at it. The car swerved around him. He continued running directly at traffic. Car after car swerved around him until finally one driver delivered the deadly hit. As the car smashed into him, crushing his body, the last thing he saw was his own image reflected at him in the windshield.

Alexander Hamilton Lives Up the Street from Me

By EMToast
August 27, 2010
Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: 10 Dollar Bill, Alexander Hamilton, farmer, food, Franklin, Hamilton homestead, health insurance, mechanic, oil, president and designer, Toastmaster, USD

Alexander Hamilton, our beak nosed fifth president and designer of the 10 dollar bill lives right up the street from me. It's kind of weird because I live in the 20th century and he died like 300 years ago.

But I hear he gets by alright. He lives with his mom, sells antiques for extra cash, and mainly eats boiled cabbage. Most of the food he gets comes from the dumpster behind the farmer's market. Meat costs money so he's a vegetarian.

He never eats sugar because the white stuff burns our your endocrine system. Somehow he still managed to acquire a rotten tooth that looks like it has pepper in it though. The tooth will never be fixed because he refuses to have health insurance which is only for the rich.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

He also refuse to pay taxes or have a job because he will not be a tool. He says when he is old, he will be a charity case for the state because he has no money. Anyone who does have a job or money is expected to pay his way because they have it easy, even though he has self imposed poverty.

He has no need to endure the trauma of showers because every 30 days his body renews itself. The dead skin sloughs itself off and his hair is no longer oily – a trick he learned from Ben Franklin. He states, "I'm very comfortable with my own body odor."

Since he doesn't use his shower, he allows his cat to shit in it instead of giving it a litter box. He says "the cat aims it's pee right down the drain and leaves its crap like a neat little pack of sausages."

He's had the same car for 16 years and has never changed the oil, tires, or brakes. Only his sheer force of will keeps the machine from rattling apart. No mechanic will even walk past the car for fear of a lawsuit.

He waterproofed his basement by lining it with old shopping bags and rocks. He urinates in mason jars and leaves them down there for his sons to find centuries later.

A favorite Sunday dish at the Hamilton homestead is fried groundhog with maggot larvae. Every year they capture a lucky rodent, torture it for 3 days to tenderize, then drown it in a mud puddle, and stab it with sticks. Then they feast on it's shoulder meat. This years hog had "shoulders like a hero."

He likes to wear women's skirts because gender is an illusion, a concept generated by society to perpetuate their consumerist attitude.

Even though he's well over 300 years old, he refuses to have any friend over the age of 25 because it makes him feel young. Having young friends keeps him up to date with the latest 80's fashions and songs like Outkast's Hey Ya! and Queens of the Stone Age because he does not listen to main stream music.

He forces himself to listen to horrible music that even he doesn't like because he will not conform to mainstream society, the same one that he expects to take care of him when he's old.

I guess you could have worse neighbors.

Sour Ear Blood Protects from High Pitch Damage

Evolution, the mysterious force responsible for transforming us from happy-go-lucky banana peeling tree climbers into misery infected cubicle crawling keyboard tappers, is at it again. Scientists have found that in the last decades, evolution has provided a new defensive measure for the human ear. When irritated and aggravated these enhanced ear drums will pool with blood blocking the sound. If the noise continues, the ear blood will spray out at it's attacker quieting them immediately.

Dr. B.B. Bibosh from the Yale Ear Lab, Yale University states, "In one of our case studies, a man was asked to listen to his girlfriend talk for a period of fifteen minutes uninterrupted. After six to seven minutes our monitors showed the ear building up a reservoir of blood. After 10 minutes the pressure began to build. At 13 minutes, the blood forcefully sprayed into the woman's mouth quieting her immediately. This is evolution at it's finest."

The woman, name withheld, said, "I was just telling him about my day, then this sour ear blood sprayed right into my mouth. It was disgusting. I couldn't go on. My mouth felt numb. It was so sour. I may never talk again."

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

The “sour” ear blood appears to have a numbing effect similar to Ambesol, which in addition to the revolting sour taste of the also suppresses the attacker’s desire to speak.

Another man involved in the study explains, “When my wife or daughter talk, the sound just cuts right through me. You know what I mean right? Well after all those years of high pitch screeching and screaming, I guess my ears just couldn’t take it and they decided to fight back. Sometimes after the sour ear blood hits her, I swear my wife is gonna keep on talking. She has this look like she was going to keep yipping, but I told her she better be careful. Push your luck too much and acid might hit you next time.”

Dr. Bibosh concluded, “This is not just a male evolutionary trait. Many women have also shown great potential. Screechy boyfriends and husbands, do not get complacent. The sour ear blood may be just around the corner for you.”

More information about the latest in Human Ear Evolution may be uncovered at Yale Ear Lab.

Help Stop Puppy Mills, Let the Puppies Die

Buying puppies from the petstore is wrong. You've got to just let them die. Buying them supports puppy mills.

Don't buy a puppy from the pet store thinking you are rescuing him. You are just opening up space for another puppy mill puppy.

You've just got to let those puppies die in their cages. It's for their own good.

Here are some of the things Santa's have been overheard saying to children and sometimes their parents who come to sit on his lap to give their Christmas wishes.

2. Santa is Baby Jesus all growed up from the future coming back for his birfday parties!!

8. You are getting herpes for Christmas and you can't return it. (Whispered to a father of 4)
9. Santa is going to hide in your chimney and wait until you are asleep then he is going to anally assault you and say ho ho ho Merry Christmas. (Whispered to a mother of 2)

Baptism Reversal Cures Cannibalism & Serial Killers

By EMToast

James Vanderbiek claims he has discovered the reset button for the human soul, and it's not what you think. Most Christians believe that when a child is born he or she is tainted by the original sin committed by Adam. The human baby is morally corrupt and only through baptism can it be redeemed and allowed to enter the kingdom of heaven. They believe that human nature is to sin and because of Adam's sin, all are guilty. Baptism is the church prescribed cure.

Charles Stacey, parishioner at Saint Martin's church Gaithersburg, MD states, "Dunk a kid's head in holy water just as quick as you can so they don't go to hell. Babies are born evil, don't you know?"

This is the typical attitude. Vanderbiek believes differently. "In some cases the removal of original sin does not have the desired effect. Rather than purify the soul, the removal of the sin throws the soul off balance causing a void that its owner seeks to fill through various foul and even criminal acts. Cannibalism and Serial killing are two of the most common after effects."

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Vanderbiek, once a devout Catholic, adopted a 10 year old orphaned boy, Stanley.

“Stanley was a good boy. I noticed him right away at the orphanage. He wasn’t like the other puppies. He was jumping up all happy like he wanted to play. My wife and I both agreed we had to hire him. When he was 11 or 12 we decided to have him baptized. He showed interest in CCD classes and wanted to take the sacraments. He was just such a great kid we decided he shouldn’t go to hell. So we got him baptized.

The son who was previously a “good boy” and straight A student with many friends began to exhibit antisocial and deviant behavior.

“We kept finding dead birds outside the house. We thought it was the cat,” said Evelyn Vanderbiek, the boy’s adopted mother. “Then we started finding half eaten dead girls and we started to get suspicious. I didn’t want to believe it, but the blood stained clothes, scratch marks all over his arms and face, the swoop hair do. I knew my son had become an emo cannibal serial killer and it was all because of the baptism. I told my husband he had to do something.”

At his wife’s urging Vanderbiek committed himself to researching Baptism reversal and began to experiment with different ways to restore the original sin.

“I tried it all. Putting the feet in water, putting the head in salt, burning the head, using hot holy water, putting pepper in holy water, urine baptism, pillow suffocation, wooden stake through the heart, dipping the head in hot lava, decapitation then head reattachment surgery. You name it, I tried it. I bet I accidentally killed or maimed over 30 boys before I finally came upon the true cure.”

“I finally discovered that dipping the head in flaming oil blessed by the president of Exxon Mobil corporation symbolically restores the original sin. I call it the anti-baptism of fire and it works. They say I found the reset button for the soul. Once they take the anti-baptism all the serial killings, cannibalism, stealing or other deviant behavior just ends.”

Since making his discovery Vanderbiek has been excommunicated from the Catholic church but says, “I don’t care much. All these Baptism’s are no damn good. They admit we’re all sinners so I don’t understand why they are always trying to get rid of the sin. I think they’re clean freaks with all these communions and confessions. Our souls are dirty just the way God made them. What the Catholics are doing is similar to plastic surgery. It’s a false fix. A face lift doesn’t last and neither does baptism.”

“Put the sin back into your soul where it belongs. We are all sinners, embrace it or you could be the next Jeffrey Dahmer,” warns Vanderbiek.

Vanderbiek has a cult following in his home town of Greeley Pennsylvania where he has already cured many of the local social deviants.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

One woman told us, “My son used to be a cannibal. This kid ate half his class before I got him the help he needed. Now he’s different. He pukes up live flesh. He’s a baby vomiter. All his friends call him the mouth birther. At least he can’t get arrested for it. He almost puked up enough kids to fill the class back up to where it was before he started all the fleshing.”

Another Greeley man has a different view. “They say Vanderbiek’s doing something good for the community with his “reversals” but I don’t see it. He took one of them serial killers, and he dips his head in that flaming oil. They say Vanderbiek’s a healer. Now the serial killer is a serial ressurecter. Anything he touches that’s dead comes back to life. Except he’s bringing back all the annoying folk. Some people die for a reason. They belong in hell. Like my mother in law. I thought we were rid of that bitch for good and now she’s back in the saddle again.”

Vanderbiek claims by reverse baptism he can cure many of the ails that the void baptism causes brings to the human condition. Shoplifting, drug addiction, alcoholism, murder, thievery and most other sins are, according to Vanderbiek, all due to the loss of original sin. “Anyone looking to fill a void in their life is looking for that lost sin. Even if you think you weren’t baptized, without your knowledge you may have been. It’s like cutting your heart out. God put that sin there for a reason. You need Sanka to live.”

Sadly, Vanderbiek was not able to save his own son using his methods. By the time he made his discovery Stanley, a convicted killer and cannibal, had taken his own life. At 14 he committed a slow suicide by eating the flesh off both of his own hands. He hid this from his parents with a pair of white cotton gloves until the infection the open wounds suffered caused blood poisoning and stopped his heart. Thankfully he went to confession just before his death and a priest was able to absolve him of every murderous cannibalistic sin. Also since his father never successfully restored Stanley’s original sin, he is riding a white lion in heaven right now.

His mother says, “I want a Barbie corvette!”

Life in the Box. Failed Experiment Number One

I emerged this morning from the frost covered cardboard refrigerator box that I now call home. With my first steps I noticed the legs of my pants felt like petrified wood and I soon realized the frigid weather has turned my nightly involuntary bladder release into an icy layer of shame. Much to my chagrin, each movement had caused shards of frozen piss to rain down upon the last precious morsels of hamburger that I had been rationing for the past week. As I looked through my pockets trying to find some cookie crumbs I noticed something was nibbling on my big grey toe.

Mornings are mostly frostbite and hallucinations, I kicked away the imaginary lizards and made my way toward town to try to find some fresh eats. As I started walking I noticed a little old lady walking towards me. She looked like David Arquette. Realizing it was Juanita who sleeps on the church steps, I said,"Good morning, anything good behind Kenny's Donuts yet?" She hissed at me and said "yeah and I ate it and shit you out all the left overs, now get the fuck out of my way you curly headed bastard!"

The above is the result of a failed writing experiment. Writing a story one sentence at a time with multiple authors is not as easy as it sounds. We got through two paragraphs then called it quits.

Just when you thought “Biever Fever” was over, Justin Bieber has decided that tampons and maxi-pads should be a reminder that he is indeed everywhere.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

February 22, 2010 – The 16 year old pop idol had teamed up with Kotex to design and launch his own line of femenine hygene products which will be launched exclusively at Wal-Mart.

The collection is called “Down to Earth” and the products are named after his hits

“Stuck In The Moment” Tampons

“Never Let You Go” Maxi Pad

and “That Should Me” Disposable DoucheAs weird as it may seem at first, Bieber knows what he is doing. With millions or girls obsessed over him, they would be more than willing to buy a pad or tampon just to say they had Bieber in their panties. Kotex who is manufacturing the products is reminding consumers to remove tampons regularly to avoid toxic shock syndrome.

The feminine hygene products are just the latest in Bieber’s ever expanding series of merchandise. Girls eager to get their hands on anything having to do with the singer can buy: Bieber “One Less Lonely Girl” Nail Polish, a Justin Bieber doll that plays a 30-second clip of his songs, his first book, “Justin Bieber: First Step 2 Forever: My Story,” and soon he will also star in a 3-D movie about his life.

The Fruit is a Trap

If there's one thing I learned from Pac-Man it's that the fruit is a trap. You might think it's a good idea to go after a couple juicy cherries, a strawberry, orange, or apple but nine times out of ten it'll just end up getting you killed by ghosts. That's why I never eat fruit. I won't even drink fruit juice a.k.a. ghost blood.

As you may know, the act of biting into a fruit releases the trapped souls hidden inside. The more seeds the fruit has, the more ghosts will be released. I once bit into an apple and eight spectres were haunting me for weeks.

Research shows that fully seeded Watermelon is the most dangerous fruit. I heard about a guy who swallowed a watermelon seed and a baby ghost got into his gut. That think would scream and cry all day and all night from his insides. He lost his job, his wife, his house, even his mistress left him. A woman ate just one slice of watermelon and had the ghosts of 13 construction workers haunting here with their whistles and whoops every time she put on a skirt.

Even if fruit is left to rot, the ghosts can sometimes manifest as fruit flies. Nobody really knows how or why the ghosts get into the fruit. Many believe they are absorbed through the human remains left in the soil.

The only thing we know for sure is that the one fruit that is safe from haunting is the tomato. Even though those know-it-all scientists tell us the tomato is a fruit, nobody believes them, including ghosts.

P.S. Pretzels are a fruit.

Psychology is for Psychos

Ever taken a psychology class? I took one as a night class at a community college years ago. The professor was some gentle ex-hippie with a gray beard. I had developed an extreme dislike for him, simply because I had seen him talking to my girlfriend on campus. She had taken his class a semester before so they were friendly.

One week during class, he asked each student to take sample Rorschach tests. I decided to play with him a b little. Whatever ink blot they'd show me, I'd see something violent or bloody. The only one I really remember was "Two nuns kneeling down with their heads chopped off lying in baskets next to them." If you're even halfway creative you can come up with a hundred such concepts when you look at an inkblot. You're supposed to tell them the first image that comes to mind, but if you have it in your head that it's going to be something shocking, it will be. It's a blot, it can be anything. Some girl in the class made a comment and I told her "Hey, don't forget you've got to walk out in that same parking lot with me after class." I was joking of course, but I can imagine if this happened today, I'm pretty sure you'd be arrested or at least thrown out of class for something like that. The professor did nothing.

Another time I "caught" my girlfriend talking to the professor and smoking a cigarette. I was on her case for smoking so I basically just grabbed the smoke from her and put it out in my hand for show. Then I grabbed her by the arm and pulled her away from the professor. Still no reaction out of the guy.

Then girls started disappearing from class. There were two classes a week on Tuesday and Thursday. After each class I began kidnapping a different girl and locking them down in my parents basement. I had build makeshift cages out of pvc pipe and for fun would sometimes make the girls fight each other for food giraffe style. They could only hit each other on the neck using their necks.

I even butchered my girlfriend and left a trail of pieces of her from the front door of his house, to where he parks his car to try to get him arrested but nobody even noticed it.

I tried to make a confession to the professor of my Comparative Religions class, but he insisted he wasn't a priest. I told him anyway. He suggested I transfer out of the psychology class.

I switched out just in time. That professor got arrested for all the girls he killed. I ended up in a Children's Literature class. My parents kicked me out of the house and I ended up renting a room above a bar. After a few more weeks I gave up on school and decided to try to make my way up the ladder at work. I already had a lucrative career collecting carts at the A&P and managed to get promoted to cleaning up the bathrooms and pickle spills. I'm thinking within the next couple years I can move up to cashier and by the time I'm 50 or 55, I might make front end manager.

Now that I think about it, that professor really did me a favor. He should be getting out in a few. I keep saying I should go see him. I feel sort of bad that my ideas manipulated him into killing all those girls. I was only telling him what I saw. Maybe I can get him a job at the store. I think he'd be good at it. He was a real gentle hippie. I think he'd be good in the Produce dept, or maybe Dairy. Those are the gentlest departments.

Winter’s Bone is the title of a movie, but do you know what Winters Bone means?

The dictionary definition of Winter’s Bone is: Witches in the woods in the winter doing ceremonies with bones.

The bonus features on the DVD release of the movie have several deleted scenes depicting a coven of hillbilly witches casting a spell on the main character’s father. The theatrical release doesn’t explain how he dies, but the extended scenes show the witches casting a spell on the man which turns him into bones.

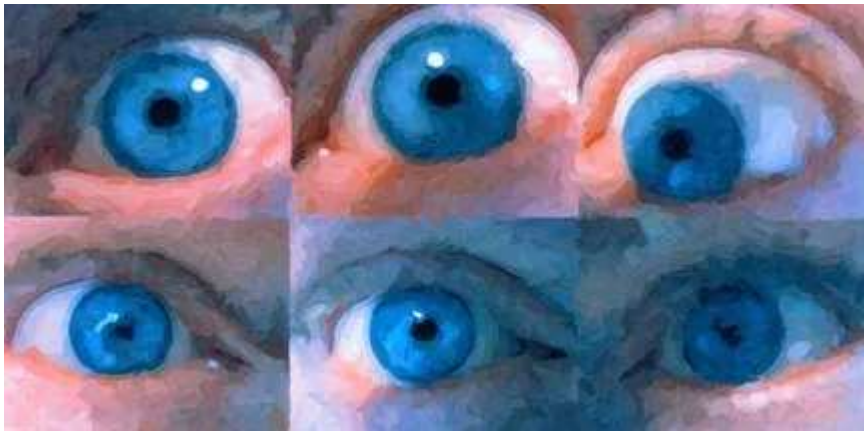
The Dangers of Eye Contact with the Soulless

By EMToast
April 2, 2011
Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: adultery, eye contact, eyes, farmer, Hell, Toastmaster



They say the eyes are the windows to the soul. But what if the eyes you are looking into have no soul behind them? It has been said that if you look into the eyes of a killer, you are looking into hell. A woman working at a pet rescue looked directly into the eyes of a puppy killer looking to adopt his next victim and she went directly to hell.

Her co-worker describes "She was standing there, looking into that guys eyes. She looked a little too long trying to figure out what he was up to. I blinked my eyes, then she was gone. After that I could sort of hear her screaming and I swear she said help me I am in hell."

The eyes are not just windows, they are also doorways to unknown destinations.

A farmer looked into the eyes of a woman he met out in one of the fields. She was an adulterous woman looking to take the simple farmer from his wife. The man fell into her eyes, never to be heard from again.

The woman admits, "I did want to take him, but not this way. He looked at me, mesmerized, then started to lean towards me. I thought for a kiss, but then he fell into my eyes. I don't know where he went. I've never heard of these things. They accuse me of murder."

When the police forced the woman to bring the man's wife to the place where he disappeared, they were shocked at what happened. They could hear a faint sound of the man's laughter.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

His wife believes, “He is in a better place now. The woman has no soul, but heaven was in her eyes.”

Avoid hazardous behavior, never look a soulless person in the eye. To be safe, EMToast recommends never looking anyone in the eye.

A call was later placed to the restaurant. Before even saying hello, the person who answered yelled "It's CRAB SOUP!" and hung up. It seems the soup special was generating a lot of interest. Top 10 Signs That You Are a Hoarder

By EMToast
May 6, 2011
Categories: Absurd World News, Art of the Folked
Tags: Am I a Hoarder, Bixby, Hoarders, Toastmaster, Top 10 Hoarding Symptoms

How do you know if you're a hoarder? Here are the 10 telltale signs that indicate hoarding behavior.

1. If you have more than one of the same thing, you are a hoarder. This includes plates, spoons and socks. You have a symptom.

2. If you read through the entire newspaper before throwing it out, you are a hoarder. You don't need all that paper laying around. Get it out of here!

3. If you save mp3 files on your computer, Ipod, or laptop you are a hoarder. Information wants to be free, but so does your hard drive. Delete them all you hoarder. Keep yourself out of jail.

4. If you have more than one family photo, or individual photos of family members framed on walls your hoarding is cluttering up the walls of the house. I can't see their smoothness! Dump them. You can see those faces anytime.

5. If you wear more than one outfit you are a hoarder. You don't need all those shirts. Just keep wearing the same one over and over. Wash it weekly if you have to. See how nice and clean your closets look now that they are empty. You're welcome.

6. If you have more than 100 dollars to your name, you are a money hoarder. There are people starving out there with no jobs. What are you doing with all that money you selfish hoarder? Leave that shit to the dragons.

7. If you have food in your refrigerator or cabinets. Why are you hoarding all that food? The great depression is over. Let the supermarket hold the food. Now you can turn off that pesky refrigerator and sleep in peace.

8. If you own even one book. Books are obsolete. Stop hoarding all that paper, I can barely walk in here.

9. If you own a pet, you are a hoarder. Pets attract more pets, and they multiply when they get wet. You saw that movie Gremlins right? That phenomena is real and it happens to cats. Why do you think they hate baths so much?

10. If you are breathing right now, you are a hoarder. Stop hogging all that sweet oxygen for yourself. There are suffocating children in Africa. Limit your breathing to once a minute, or you are definitely a hoarder.

These and other symptoms, can indicate hoarding. If you think you are a hoarder, you most definitely are. There is no such thing as a pack rat.

CHiPs Return! Despite Horse Abuse Allegations

By bixby

The green revolution is upon us with everything from recycling, reusing, up-cycling and re-purposing. It's all about what's old is new again. First came Battlestar Galactica and Hawaii Five-O, now CHiPs is scheduled for a fall 2012 return.

For those too young to remember, CHiPs was an "American television drama series …that originally aired onNBC from September 15, 1977, to June 17, 1983. CHiPs followed the lives of two motorcycle police officers of theCalifornia Highway Patrol" (Wikipedia)

New life for CHiPs began when Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger purchased the lost first pilot episodes of CHiPS which never aired. He stumbled across the find on EBay while searching for some Ponch and John dolls for his office.

The slightly different pilot version of the show never made it to America's television sets back in the 70's. It was at the time considered too "naderesque" , a term used before there was a term "green", or as it was more commonly called by the network execs of the day "tree hugging hippy bullshit" .

A memo written by NBC network execs at the time advised that the CHiPs pilot episodes did not fit with their image or agenda. They stated, “This is the age souped up gas guzzling muscle cars. If we wanted horses we would have picked up little house on the prairie.”In the pilot Ponch and John had a costar named simply “Horse,” hence the original title of the show CHePs, California Highway Equine Patrol.

Horse was an officer of the California Highway Patrol, he had a helmet and a badge, and chased down the bad guys, he just had a different way of apprehending them. He would tow away cars with his own brute strength, stomp out windshields, reverse kick criminals into ponds, headbutt trucks, and drop horse pies (road apples) in the streets to force speeding Firebirds to skid out of control.

Governor Schwarzenegger felt the original equine idea was the perfect vehicle for his campaign to reinforce the need for green transportation such as hybrid vehicles or horses. He pitched it to some of his TV network executive friends. Schwarzenegger said, “People love the 70’s. Its getting big right now, we can draw them in with the nostalgia and then hit them with the message. This falls right in with the networks need to get more ratings and come across as being “green.”

The network executives loved the idea and decided to do some recycling of the classic show and add a new version including “Horse” to the 2011 fall lineup. They also plan to release a remastered version of the original pilot episodes Summer 2011 as a sort of preview.

The Horse Abuse Scandal

In addition to being ahead of its time, a plague of horse abuse scandals were the major reason the original CHePs never saw the light of day. Animal activists picketed tapings of the show on numerous occasions when they found out that horses were being mishandled on set. There were eyewitness accounts of “horses dropping like flies and being forced to chase down Camaros in 90mph pursuits until they died in convulsions and puddles of foam." Internal memos by NBC executives leaked statements such as "…not feasible to have horses chasing camaros, not cost effective to replace dead horse after each take…"

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

It was also discovered producers were feeding horses a mix of ground tires and petroleum grease in order to have the horses produce a slick feces. The initial thought was that the horses would create a fecal oil slick to stop out of control car chases. This did not produce the desired effect and a stable full of horses died as a result.

One eyewitness stated, "I was an extra on the set and those horses were dropping off one after another. They were running them at 90 miles an hour and so much foam came off this one horse the whole road was covered and the camera crews van slid right off the overpass, and the horse tripped and it was like he dissolved. It was like a big pile of skin and bones and teeth.

You couldn't have even made dog food after that. It was gross because it just stuck to the highway like glue. Horses really are made of glue. If you look out there right now how many years later you can still see a dark spot. I still see dead horses everywhere I look. The doctors say I have post traumatic stress. You know when you see a dark spot in your driveway most people think '…the car must have dripped oil'. Not me I think 'A horse must have died here.' I live in LA Man there ain't no fucking horses in east LA except those horsetooth house wives."

Actors Speak Out

Erik Estrada, a horse lover, has come out against the show saying …"This is bullshit this shit was on the cutting room floor for a reason. They tried to make me ride a horse, but I wouldn't do it. That fucking John was riding all over the place on these stupid horses doing whatever they said. I was like give me a muscle car for my machismo, or I am out of here."

He also added, "The dead horses starting piling up all behind my trailer. How am I supposed to be a star with the stink of dead horses wafting in my trailer. I tried to bring Cheryl Tiegs in my trailer how do you think that worked out with the smell of rancid horsemeat wafting in my window?"

Ponch revealed another liability that doomed the show to never see the light of day. He said, "Horse kept tossing off the helmets and hitting people. It was becoming a liability there were 2 people with concussions and one in a coma. The executives said they couldn't afford to keep him on. A directive was sent down from the head office that simply said "shoot him and wrap it up, it's over."

We interviewed John but we don't even know what his real name is. We think it might be Larry

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Wilcox but we can't remember and really don't care. He could be John Tesh for all we care. Fucking tuba playing mother fucker.

There is still one horse surving from the days of CHePs. He managed to escape the set alive and he is now 38 years old. He still works everyday, only now its hauling coal out of mines in West Virginia. He hopes to retire soon. His ex-wife took him for all his CHePs money. All 36 dollars and the complementary feed bag.

CHePs Is Back

You can expect to see the digitally remastered version of the original pilot coming in hi def 1080p this summer as a preview to the full new series which premiers this fall. You can really see those horse whiskers and the ridges in their hooves and the fine granules of ground up tire in their shit.

Doctors Invented Cancer in 1926

I'm 97 years old, and I never heard of cancer until I was 12 years old. My neighbor fell down the stairs and broke his leg. He went to the hospital and did you know he never came out 'cause they said he had cancer? I never heard of cancer before. I think they gave it to him. Who goes to the hospital with a broken leg and ends up with cancer?

Doctors invented cancer to get your money and keep you in the hospital. When they open you up and let the air get at it, it spreads everywhere.

Look at me. I got popcorn shrimp swimming around in my veins. I ain't going to the hospital for that. I'll get cancer. That's how they get you.

These were the final miles of a summer journey. The four passengers consisted of the driver, the girlfriend, the sister, and the groundhog eater. As they slowly and angrily moved through the highway traffic, returning from another coal town wedding, a hamburger was spotted. It was just sitting on the hood of the car next to them.

The groundhog eater asked, "How did it get there? Why doesn't it fall off?"

The driver hatefully replied to him, "That hamburger's your brother. I saw it come out of your mother. "

They all laughed because they knew it was true.

I Am a Crocodile, and I've Done Terrible Things

By EMToast
August 9, 2011

Comes a time in a man's life when he's got to decide. Alligator or crocodile? Which will I be? I am a crocodile, and I've done terrible things.

In 1978 my mother told me I couldn't eat cereal and watch TV. I was eating Sugar Corn Pops and watching a Corn Pops commercial at the same time. My five year old self was impressed that the yellow hatted cowboy was talking about the same thing I was eating. Then here comes Mom with the rules. I ignored her.

"If you won't go in the kitchen, then go to your room," she screamed.

Now an alligator would have listened. An alligator would have gone to the kitchen with his delicious Sugar Pops, but the Croc came out early.

"Go to your grave!" I shouted while pushing her down the apartment stairs. She lay at the bottom of the stairs whimpering well after I finished my third bowl of cereal. She survived with nothing more than a sprained elbow

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

I was sent to live with my Grandmother for about a year until Mom forgave me. They always do.

In 1995 I spread a rumor about an old man at work. His wife left him for another woman. Everyone believed it. What else would they go for? His wife caught him and his daughter lying on the couch together in their underwear. Incest. They'll believe anything. I started stealing jewelry. The most expensive retail item and pawning it off. Nobody noticed until I ratted the old man out. They found the jewelry to be missing from inventory. The old man was arrested, but got off on a technicality. Not enough evidence. He did lose his job though. The thief got what he deserved.

When I was 14 my best friend from school, a fat kid named Ron, broke his arm. Disgusting black hairs grew under the cast like light starved plants trying to reach the sun. The day before he was about to get the cast off I tripped him. He fell down and re-broke his arm. I laughed the whole way home. The best part was when he lay there crying after me, "I hate you!" Hilarious.

When I was 26 my neighbor's kid kept crawling onto my back porch. I don't know if they didn't feed the thing enough, but it kept coming in and eating the food out of the cat's bowl. The last time I came out on the back porch and started shooting him with a BB Gun.

It was starting to hiss at me like it was infected with rabies. I threw an empty pizza box on top of it so it couldn't bite me and started stomping it. As it scampered away I beat it over the head with a pipe until it was unconscious.

Mom came running out shrieking, "What's going on?"

I was so angry by this point I was actually seeing red. "Go get a garbage bag," I yelled as I grabbed a shovel. I thrust it down to separate the beast's vertebrae and break its neck, killing it. I picked it up by the tail and dropped it into the bag that Mom held open and threw it out with the trash. Damn Possums!

In 1986 I picked up a stereo out of the trash. It was the kind with lots of knobs and plenty of juice. We had some good times together. Like the time when I told my sister to hold onto the speaker wires and kept turning the volume up and up and up. Her little hands clenched together into the powerful claws they are today. She shook around a little bit then went to sleep. The neighbors were particularly annoying that day. After the electrocution, I decided to teach them a lesson. I hooked up the speakers, balanced them on the window and blasted "We Built This City." This is regarded by many as one of the best songs for increasing neighborly relations. It's also good for getting confessions. It was all too loud for me so I took off leaving the radio on and my electrocuted sister taking a rest.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Later on, when I got back, I found out from my Mom that the police had arrested my sister for something like disorderly conduct or noise pollution and she had to spend some time in juvenile hall. She was always getting herself into trouble.

I have to tell you, I wasn't always a Croc. For a brief time around 1992 I tried my hand at being an alligator. After high school I met up with an old friend. He told me he had brain cancer. Using the compassion and positivity of an alligator I cheered him with an encouraging message. "Cancer? That's nothing! You can beat that." He sort of laughed. The kid was dead within a month.

That same year I was working at a department store as a stockboy. This nerdy older girl kept flirting with me. The gator in me decided to show her some mercy and take her out. I even let her choose the movie – Mr Saturday Night. I met her at the theater. Immediately after we were seated, and before the movie even started, she was sobbing. I sat there for two hours, saying nothing, hoping it was going away. The crocodile was saying, "How am I supposed to get any action off this crying hag?" The Alligator just waited it out. After the movie we went out to my car to talk. Ten minutes of alligator style kindness and I got to the bottom of it. She spilled her guts. She prefaced her story by revealing that she was a born again Christian and that at 23 years of age she had never had sex.

Because she was so pure, I guess she felt very guilty about something that had happened earlier in the day. She told me she was at her parent's house hanging out with her two friends. One a guy, and one a girl. The girl was messing around and started coming onto the guy. The 23 year old crier knew her friend didn't even like him. They had talked about it. She said he was a dork. As the 23 year old sat on the couch, the couple started having sex right in front of her. The girl, her friend, was looking right at her making faces. Faces to say, this guy is so bad at sex, and making fun of their friend while he was fucking her.

The 23 year old really let out with the tears when she got to the end. "Why did I just sit there? How could I watch them?" This was an interesting question. My normal crocodile would have twisted it to his advantage. Told her she was a sinner already and taken advantage, but I was being an alligator then.

"It's alright," I told her. "The universe is a big place. So big that our actions are insignificant. No matter what we do, it doesn't affect anything. Whether we live or die, nothing changes. Nothing we do matters." This seemed like a great philosophy to me. Still does, but born again Christians don't think like that.

"Nothing we do matters?" she said, and began crying even worse than before. I hadn't made her feel better, instead it seems I stole her innocence without even laying a hand on her. To end it, I told her it was late and she reluctantly left the car. Last I heard she became a low priced call girl in Camden NJ for a while, then committed suicide in '98.

That was the last time I pretended to be an alligator. After that it was all “happy mother’s day from your aborted fetus” or “It’s only wrong if we think it’s wrong.” or “I’m getting your friend pregnant.” If you’re a crocodile, you’ve got to do your terrible things. After all the universe is a big place, and none of it matters.

Peanut Butter Cancer Ban Coming

By bixby
September 3, 2011

Tags: Bixby, Carcinogen, childhood peanut allergies, FDA, Food and drink, Medicine, Peanut, Peanuts, U.S. Government

A new study conducted by Station Park Cancer Hospital has shown that between the years 1973 and 2010 ninety-nine percent of people diagnosed with bowel, bladder, lung, or brain cancer had eaten peanut butter or were related to someone who had. It is still too early to tell what the exact link is, but scientists are determined to find it, even if it means asking questions like how often patients ate peanut butter and in combination with what other foods.

Dr. Erdnuss Arahide who first discovered the potential cancer link states, “Peanut butter is dangerous. With further research I hope to discover if peanut butter alone is the catalyst or if it’s a deadly reaction between peanut butter and other foods. We could be contacting the FDA, and peanut butter could be banned from store shelves within the month. It has already been banned in some schools due to childhood peanut allergies. If we can prove that it causes cancer, the ban will definitely be nationwide. We can't eradicate peanut butter, just like we can't eradicate cigarettes. No one can tell you what to do with your body, but they can tell you that you can't eat peanut butter in public."

Dr. Arahide's research began when he uncovered an eye-opening article on the BodyBuildingWeb.net Blog

"A mold commonly winds up growing on peanut butter. This fungus Aspergillus flavus releases a cancer causing metabolic product (mycotoxin) called aflatoxin B1, which is a officially recognized carcinogen (cancer causing compound). Workers around peanuts even have to wear protection because of the health hazard. It is common knowledge that farmers and animals around peanuts have increased liver cancer."

Arahede's research iss the basis for the Station Park study which is funded by the U.S. Government. The study is meant to pave the way for a new tax on those who irresponsibly choose to damage their health and potentially kill themselves by eating peanut butter. The terror alert on peanut butter has been bumped up from yellow to red. We already knew it was dangerous, but now we know that is some deadly bad butter.

Arahede expounds, "Gearge Washington Carver you'll rue the day you thought of peanut butter. He wasn't a pioneer. This man was a cankerworm leading mankind to It's own destruction through this seemingly innocuous spread. America, you're going to have to find a new lunch staple or it will be the end of you! I believe generations of heavy peanut butter consumption have caused a genetic mutation that pre-disposed people to cancer."

Dr. Arahide leaves us with this parting comment, "If you want to eat peanut butter and kill yourself, you an do it in the privacy of your own home, but not out in the streets where little children can follow your example.

"The things that we regret were delicious once."—Thoman Mann.

Dating Beasts: How to Attract Ugly Women

By EMToast

September 3, 2011

Categories: Absurd World News

Tags: Arkansas, Detroit, Jimmy Soul, Michigan, Newark, Philadelphia, Toastmaster, Ugly, United States

If you wanna be happy for the rest of your life …
Never make a pretty woman your wife …
So from my personal point of view …
Get an ugly girl to marry you …
Though her face is ugly, her eyes don't match …
Take it from me, she's a better catch …

lyrics to If You Wanna Be Happy / Jimmy Soul

Jimmy Soul had it right, and the good people at EMToast.com have a new program to help you win the homely hearts of these beastly gals.

The "Secrets Of Dating Beastly Women" program explains how to attract ugly women and date the hard-featured girls you desire, whether your preference is disfigured girls, repulsive girls, monstrous girls, dog or horse faced girls, revolting hairy armed women, or any other type of grotesque woman. The tactics you will learn in this program show you how to pick up the downtrodden in Philadelphia, Detroit, Arkansas, Georgia, Altoona, Newark and of course in your own hometown! You'll learn the most powerful "insider secrets" for dating undesirable women and how to attract beasts without clever pickup lines or any knowledge, culture, or social skills. No matter where you are from, if you want to attract and date more hideous women, forget the bars– you are going to have to go to Walmart. EMToast students have reported amazing results from using these techniques to get ugly girls and pick up ugly women in laundry mats and recycling centers, but also in urologists offices and libraries. You'll learn how to pick up grotesque women at the mall, the yarn store, the dollar store parking lot, or anywhere else that irregular merchandise can be found.

Look, if you'd like to know how to meet ugly girls, there are several things to need to realize that will make it easier for you to meet ugly girls and get phone numbers and dates.

To start with, you can't be neat, well-groomed or practice excellent personal hygiene. The old expression "cleanliness is next to Godliness" is the surefire way to loneliness with the ugly set. You can tell how ugly girls put zero focus on cleanliness just by seeing how they take no pride in their appearance; even if they're going to a wedding, they will look like they just awoke, unkempt and disheveled.

Basically, this means that when you're out trying to meet ugly girls, you've always got to look a mess. Keep the outdated clothes that you've been wearing forever and under no circumstances go shopping for some new threads.

It's also better to be slightly under-dressed, rather than overdressed, when you're looking to meet grotesque girls– do not show up for a date in a collared shirt. An old t-shirt is best, the more stretched out the neck the better. Also avoid button downs, khakis, and dress shoes which show that you care about appearance, which you don't.

Next, give beastly women the sense that you're not an organized guy who has his life in order. You will win many "points" with ugly girls by acting like you have no plans for the future. They don't understand the concept of "success." Mention you have no plans or long-term goals to her. Be a man without a game plan. She'll be able to imagine herself as a part of your future.

And to end with, your home should reflect the fact that you are a filthy messy person. Never invite ugly women into your home (or any woman, for that matter) if it's extremely clean. Especially your bathrooms.

It's very common for your female houseguest to have diarrhea and without asking use your bathroom. Few things will turn them off more than a clean bathroom. No white surface should appear grime free. I also advise you to remove any scented candles or air fresheners from your bathroom, and hang out some scratchy old rags for them to use to wipe with.

One of the models most probably got tetanus from stepping on a rusty nail. A couple of the other ones have permanent lung damage from breathing in asbestos. How does Toe Fue convince them to do it? Check the gallery and maybe you’ll find out. The kid’s got talent. WARNING there may be raccoons in the walls.

Sexually Exhausted Husband Seeks Police Protection

By French Toast

Around midnight on April 25th, a 32 year old man ran into a police station in his underwear asking for protection from his wife. Three minutes later the wife showed up in lingerie looking for the husband. The police offered her a jacket to cover up with.

Upon questioning the couple, the police found that the wife was suspicious that her husband might be seeing other women. She buys sexy lingerie and forces her husband to have sex with her every night so he'd have no energy left to mess around with other women. The night of the incident, the wife wanted to do it again after the first round, but the husband said no because he was too exhausted. The wife insisted and tried to get him up for over an hour, eventually the husband couldn't take it any more and just ran out to the nearest police station asking for help.

The husband insisted that there's no other women and his wife just watched too many soap operas.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Police told the husband he could file charges against her for forcing him to have sex but they should try to work it out. The couple left with the policeman's jacket, no formal charges were filed.

Ohio Ban Exotic Monsters NOW!

On Oct 18, 2011 dozens of wild and dangerous animals were let loose from a private zoo in Zanesville, OH. Most were shot and killed in order to protect the public. Ohio is one of less than 10 states with no laws regulating private animal ownership. This jeopardizes public safety and animal welfare.

What this incident has also brought to light is that Ohio is 1 of 50 states with zero regulation on exotic monster ownership. The following fact sheet illustrates recent monster attacks from Ohio alone. Please help protect our monsters and the public, support the ban on private ownership of vampires, werewolves, zombies and other dangerous creatures.

FACT SHEET

Recent Monster Incidents in Ohio Demonstrate Risks to Public Health and Safety, Human Welfare

October 2011 (Muskingum County): 48 creatures, including werewolves, vampires, Ghosts, Dinosaurs, Aliens, Moth Men, and a 3000 year old mummy escaped from a Zanesville property.

September 2011 (Green Camp): A man was hospitalized after being attacked and repeatedly bitten in the face and upper body by a hungry vampire at an exotic creature breeding farm.

August 2010 (Lorain County): A man died after being attacked by a Wolfman he was reportedly friends with and feeding. The owner's USDA license had been revoked but 8 wolfmen, 4 aliens, 1 mothman, and 12 dinosaurs remained on the property.

August 2010 (Cuyahoga County): A 200--foot fire breathing lizard was found loose near a picnic area.

Rule #2073: Never Lie to Your Kids

By bixby
October 30, 2011
Categories: Short Fiction
Tags: Bixby, Children, Fish Rape

Don't lie to kids or withhold the truth from them. Most little kids are smarter than you give them credit for, mostly because their skulls are still pretty soft and they have more blood flow to their brains. Yeah there are some stupid kids, some kids are just born that way just like assholes, anyway lets get to the point.

That lie you tell your kid to "protect" them is basically going to come back and bite you in the ass. Your kid is going to find out and have you pegged as a liar and never put any credence into anything you ever tell them again, and they will probably grow up to a disillusioned cynical asshole that will do the opposite of everything you tell them, or you could be investigated by the police. You are opening the door to Bizarro world parenting and you do not want to go there.

Here is a prime example:

One afternoon when I was a wee child I was playing Transformers next door with the neighbor boy in their driveway. His older brother Chris was busy gutting live catfish in the dirt, they would squirm about dulling their shine as they kicked up clouds of dirt and their skin dried out under the hot sun. He would spear them in the head with his fishing knife or hook his fingers into their gills and pull their heads apart. He would periodically smear guts on the dryer vent on the side of the house or throw bits of them at his brother.

He terrified me, but I wouldn't let it show, because I didn't want to be showered in catfish guts or worse.

After a while of battling Transformers I heard my mothers bare feet angrily slapping towards me on the pavement.

“Get your stuff and get in the house now! Come on, say goodbye to Lawrence and get in the house. “

I reluctantly gathered up my Optimus Prime and Bumblebee and headed home with her. I didn’t dare defy her in front of people, she was unpredictable like a wild animal and there was no telling how embarrassing her wrath would be. I once had to drive around with my family for an entire Sunday in my underwear because I wouldn’t get up and get dressed.

Inside the house I asked her why I had to come in, because it wasn’t anywhere near dinner time.

She told me Chris had done something very bad and I wasn’t allowed over there unless his mom was home. She said she couldn’t tell me what he had done. No matter how many times I asked her she would just say I can’t tell you, or it’s not for you to know, or don’t worry about it. I wouldn’t let up and kept asking and asking and finally she said, he is a very bad kid, he did the worst thing you can think of.

So I thought it over for a good long time and was now more terrified than ever of him. I had come to the conclusion that he had cut a woman’s baby out of her stomach with his fishing knife.

The Wall Chickens: Return of the Heart Kitten

By bixby
November 3, 2011
Categories: Short Fiction
Tags: Bixby, Chicken, Heart Kitten, Toastmaster, Wall Chicken

Day 1: I woke up this morning to the sound of birds pecking inside of my walls, which was creepy, then a few hours later I heard them in the crawl space, that was creepier. It sounds like I have wall chickens.

Day 2: It's 3:15 a.m. I got about a whole hour of sleep then something started yodeling outside and woke me up and something fell on the roof, now all I hear is a faint tapping coming from the bedroom walls, I'm going to pretend its not satan or some demonic presence, and that there really is such a thing as wall chickens, that peck in their sleep.

Day 3: The pecking stopped last night, but then I saw a glowing yellow eye staring at me though the crack in the wall. The chickens were peeping on me or maybe it was a satan. Still can't sleep.

Day 4: I was planning to get away for a few days and try to get some sleep. The wall chickens are onto me. One by one they are moving from behind the walls to under my skin. Their beaks keep bubbling up on the side of my one leg. If I slap them down, they quiet down for a while. I better stay home.

Day 5: Wall chickens are migrating towards my heart. I think I have wall cats now too. I keep finding kitty litter and cat shit right below the crack where the chickens used to live. Cats are quiet so it's hard to tell how many are in there.

Day 6: I went to the Doctor today for a check up. I didn't tell him I have wall chickens in my heart. I wanted to see if he could figure it out. I didn't give him any clues and he didn't find anything wrong. Last night my heart stopped for 13 minutes straight so I think I need a new doctor.

Day 7: Wall chickens started laying eggs in my aorta now. I don't have long to live, and I still can't sleep. I like the wall cats though. They are low maintenance.

Day 8: Wall chickens in my heart and I can't sleep. Now the wall cats pissed all over my pillows. Tomorrow I'll get some nine lives. Maybe I can win the cats over.

Day 9: The cats and I started eating chicken friskies. Pretty good stuff. The chickens were pissed. Too bad, get out of my heart.

Day 10: The friskies diet worked. The wall chickens went back into the wall, and it turns out I only had one wall cat, but it was a kitten. Now that wall kitten lives in my heart, but I still hear that goddamn scritching all night. I'm never going to sleep again.

Wax Bag: So You Don’t Have To Stay Home And Bleed

In the great year of 1978, women were freed from their bloody bondage by the invention of a simple wax coated bag. Headband cycling, bikini tanning, armpit scratch tennis matches, and teapotting were just a few activities that tampon bags allowed women to enjoy during menstruation. With the invention of the wax coated necessity bag women threw off their bloody shackles. Before the bag, the disposal of feminine hygiene products kept women chained to their toilets. Today women don’t have to sit home and bleed. They are free to go out and bleed everywhere…on park benches, at restaurants, on the sand at the beach, sidewalks, and department stores.

Whereas once women had to spend three days on the toilet in a nest of paper towels, now they

The ghost of Ronald Reagan is haunting the Whitehouse, quite literally. He first appeared to Obama while he was literally on the toilet. Reagan's ghost whispered to Obama, "Get out while you still can" then literally made it rain jelly beans.

Reagan's ghost literally preys on the Obama's fears of childhood obesity and literally fills the kids shoes with cookies, their pillowcases with marshmallow, and literally replaces their toothpaste with molasses. The kids literally wake up and say, "We love you mister President. You're the real President. My daddy doesn't let me eat molasses" He is literally turning their children against them.

Obama staffers are saying that he is literally so rattled that he is afraid to even sleep at the Whitehouse. He literally drives home to Illinois nearly every weekend just to get some rest. Literally.

We Bought the Dead Dog Capital Zoo

By EMToast
January 19, 2012
Categories: Short Fiction
Tags: Animal cracker, Animal Crackers zoo, Toastmaster, Tom Robbins, Zoo

There's a new movie out called We Bought a Zoo. You may think it could never happen, but it already did.

Back in '86 my mom and a group of her friends had become oddly interested in the cookies called Animal Crackers. They would have Animal Cracker parties and trade the different animals with each other like little kids playing with trading cards.

It didn't stop there though. Mom's interest in animal cracker related things grew and eventually she convinced my Dad to spend every penny they had on a small zoo in another city. One that we would live in. She dreamed the place would be called Animal Crackers with a big shiny red and yellow sign out front and all the zoo animals she and her friends had been crunching on including lions, zebras, elephants, tigers, monkeys, hippos, and giraffes.

I'll never forget the feeling of excitement I felt when we first drove up to our new home, Animal Crackers zoo. I will also never recover from the the devastation I felt when I realized that my parents has bought a broken down and abandoned puppy mill, and I had to live in it.

Hundreds and hundreds of filthy dogs inhabited rusty bent wire cages. Hundreds of others were stacked in stinking heaps along the sides of the driveway. Mom looked upset. She had been lied to by the previous owners who had told her that the place would be cleaned up. Dad told her they'd figure something out. He was either an optimist or delusional. I've never figured out which.

Years later, when I read the book Fierce Invalids from Hot Climates by Tom Robbins he wrote that "Pucallpa was the dead dog capital of South America" and I laughed because I always felt Animal Crackers Zoo was the dead dog capital of North America, but could never put it into words.

The majority of the dogs were filthy jumping toy poodles with matted hair and bald patches. Only a few of them were even large enough to be considered dogs. Most were just puppies. I'm not sure how they were even surviving under those conditions. The stink was like nothing I'd ever experienced. The closest I can describe it as is a combination of burning hair, ammonia, and lilac perfume. And the dogs looked like chicken carcasses with some brown yarn glued on them in places. I couldn't believe this place was my new home.

My parents had sold our old house, and had spend everything and more on this place. We had no choice but to live there.

We parked the car and checked out the house which really wasn't too bad inside, just really dusty and in need of a paint job and some new carpets. They had kept the dogs out of there so it was not as bad as I had expected.

I did notice a few oddities. when I was choosing my bedroom. There was a dead fish on the front porch roof which I noticed while looking out one of the bedroom windows. Then we found a treasure chest in another bedroom which was filled with sand and cigarette butts. A pirates ashtray. Out back, the area fenced off for a yard was filled with huge empty turtle shells. I imagined the owners had been catching snappers down by the river and making turtle soup to sustain themselves, but in truth there was no river. Where turtles that large came from is still a mystery.

My parents worked hard on this place for years, eventually nursing the dogs back to health and cleaning the place up the best they could. M sister and I went to school and tried to live normal lives. Never bringing a friend home out of embarrassment. We lived in what would be considered the ghetto of town which was bad enough, but to live in the dead dog capital was something we couldn't let anyone find out about, and nobody did.

As far as the zoo goes, my parents never could get the proper permits to own any of the zoo animals they wanted. A real zoo was out of the question , so they cleaned up the cages and made it into a yard area where they kept various motorcycles, camping trailers, black buckets full of bolts, and rusty car jacks. They only real zoo animal they ever got was a Chimp they adopted who I do believe may be half human. This guy could smoke a pipe, wash dishes, dress himself, he even got a job bagging groceries.

My parents “adopted” Willie when he was just a baby chimp and he lived in the house with us. They always treated him like he was a regular boy and not a monkey. Willie, did you brush your teeth? He did. Willie did you clean up your room? He did. Willie can you come help put away the laundry? He did. Willie actually did more around the house and was a better kid than my sister or I ever was. If Mom had asked any of those questions of us, the answer would have been “no.” I guess that’s why they still keep him. He’s 35 now, and I’ll be damned if it wasn’t’ bad enough that he’s better behaved, he’s also more handsome than me too.

So instead of a zoo we got a dead dog junkyard, and instead of a lion, we got a Humanzee, but in the end it all worked out and I have the nightmares to prove it.

Medieval illiterate homeless people were fooked up and predicted future presidents and other people's homelessness. You're homeless mister and will work for food.

Also Steve Jobs went into the future and created apples, but before that he predicted Geoge Washington becoming the king of the United states because he cut down an apple tree and shot apples off peoples heads because he was also William Tell.

Steve Jobs was an illiterate homeless medieval phone maker. .

Forget World War III, that's so 80's. The real threat is the Carly Simon Wars.

Marily Manson, interviewed on Omaha Nebraka's Todd-nTyler Radio Empire, told Todd n Tyler that Carly Simon's teeth are bigger on the left side. Manson had recently teamed up with actor Johnny Depp to cover Simon's "You're So Vain," and this became an inside joke during recordings.

Manson later disappeared for six weeks and was only recently discovered at Simon's private detainee camp. Simon is reportedly holding Manson, Depp, ex-husband James Taylor and many other celebrities who have crossed her over the years. It is even rumored that detainees are forced to eat their own feces while she screams you're so vain you probably think your shit tastes like hot dogs don't you, DON"T YOU!

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

A celebrity militia assembled by General Dr. Drew Pinsky and Lietenant Gary Busey are set to mount a counter attack against Carly and her seemingly endless army of clones which she refers to as “Car-loans”. They plan to free their celebrity friends, and bring Simon to justice at the Celebrety Rehab Incarceration Center.

Carly has stated publicly that she will bring down any celebrity, politician, government, or any one else that goes against her. She has declared war on the world. To make matters worse, the Car-loans became self aware at 9:15 am and they thought the war was all about them.

The Carly Simon wars have begun.

Jesus Loves You… Baby All Night Yeah

A shocking and offensive ad campaign has been rolled out across 18 Catholic universities in the United States featuring a Jesus figure in sexually provocative poses and situations. The first in a series of three advertisements appearing thus far shows a provocatively posed Jesus like figure saying "Come on baby… condoms are for heathens."

Another shows a Jesus like figure saying, "Where would I be if my Dad had used a condom?"

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

The third shows a temptress saying, “Come back! Please… it’s just a little condom.”

And a Jesus like figure pushing her away with his hand saying*, “Be gone heathen temptress! Catholics do it raw dog!”*

After a public outcry, the group responsible for the posters “The Catholic Sexual Actions Commission” issued the following statement:

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

"We are responsible for these advertisements. The figure in the photos is not Jesus. This man in the photos simply represents the sexual embodiment of the Catholic Church. He is a man who is so close to God that he has taken on the appearance of his son. A man who like Jesus does not succumb to the devilish temptations of the condom. This will speak to hearts and minds of the young people on campus. They must remember, if you are unmarried and your partner suggests using a condom, you must consult with the clergy. As Catholics, sex outside of marriage is not possible. If your partner is suggesting condom use at the pre-marriage stage, you must consult the clergy. Only your clergy can to advise you if dating this person will result in an unholy union. If you are married and your partner is suggesting to use a condom, they are likely infected with AIDS attempting to hide the infection. You are most likely already infected by the virus, but do not forget you are still not infected by wicked prophylactics. Protect your soul and do not under any circumstance use a condom."

The Vatican has yet to comment whether it supports the commission or the ad campaign.

“Ecce Homunculus” Spanish Fresco Restored

By EMToast
August 29, 2012

Late 90’s art icon It Come has resurfaced at The Sanctuary of Mercy Church near the Spanish city of Zaragoza.

As was recently reported in the Daily News, an 80 year old woman decided restoration efforts of 19th Century Spanish Fresco “Ecce Homo” were taking too long. She transformed the fresco depicting Jesus with his crown of thorns into the monkey faced savior and internet meme known as “Ecce Mono.” The BBC likened the repair to “a crayon sketch of a very hairy monkey in an ill-fitting tunic.”

Art Historians who conferred with the woman determined that due to the nature of the materials the woman used, “Ecce Homo” could not be restored to its original state.

A wealthy parishioner, Mr. India Charlie, convinced Sanctuary of Mercy Church officials to allow him to commission the infamous It Come to restore the work as “Ecce Homunculus” or “Behold the Golem”

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Culture minister Juan Maria de Ojeda, a friend of Mr. Charlie, is 100% behind the idea . He became intrigued with It Come after reading about the Red Hands Cave controversy where supposedly ancient drawings of the It Come golem were discovered.

“Our church has become a joke. I believe it must be a way to stop these internet jokes they call the memes. It Come can do this by the holy magic of the golem,” said Ojeda.

It Come began working on the project almost immediately and finished it in less than a night.

“Nobody sees him. He did the work, and left the note on my desk.” said Ojeda.

The note read, “I cant remember what you wanted, so i made this picture. I painted over the second one. I dont know if you like it or not. If this isnt what you wanted let me know and I do something else.”

The Mouths of My Children's Bellies: One Woman's Foray into the Territories of Ebay

By EMToast

September 19, 2012

Tags: Customer Service, eBay, plastic/vinyl products, pocketbook, Purse

The following transcript is the abridged version of an E-bay customer transaction gone wrong. This poor woman just wanted to buy an eco-friendly purse and ended up getting dragged into a trap of stupidity, idiotic answers, and outrageous grammar and accusations. Based on her replies to this seller, she must be a saint.

BAGLADY: Is the purse material canvas-cloth, or is it plastic? Thanks a bunch,

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

PURSESELLER: The material is canvas.

BAGLADY: Yikes! Disappointment…I received the little purse and it is clearly NOT "canvas" – It is PLASTIC – in fact: the tag inside says: 100% VINYL which is totally against my personal purchasing ethics. I try very hard to not buy plastic/vinyl products. I cannot use this purse and will be donating it to Goodwill.

PURSESELLER: OMG!!! I had no idea plastic and vinyl were different…did not look at the tag.. thought it was canvas(plastic/vinyl) again no difference to me…sorry to disappoint.. SORRY

BAGLADY: Well…'canvas' is cloth, and definitely not any type of man made plastic or vinyl. If you would like to refund the $6 bucks, that'd be much appreciated…

PURSESELLER: As soon as you send the purse back. I will be glad to refund your money. After that negative comment you made I'm doing no favors for you.

BAGLADY: I don't really understand your curt comments, since my eBay rating was completely honest. The Q&A portion of the eBay experience is used to avoid misunderstandings PRIOR to purchase. If I had just blindly bid on this item and then expressed disappointment after receiving it… that'd be one thing. But I asked a specific question as to whether or not it was canvas material – and you answered YES it was – therefore, I purchased the item and paid you immediately. When it arrived – looking like plastic/vinyl, smelling & feeling like plastic/vinyl, and with a tag that clearly stated 100%vinyl – yes, was disappointed. You misrepresented the item – even when I took the time to ask specific questions. Lesson learned: know your product and provide correct/informed responses. People are relying on that. Let's not bother anymore over a $6 buck item. I'm donating the purse to charity and moving on.

PURSESELLER:

Respectable,
Your cavalier attitude is not appreciated, the humiliation of my time throughout this process, and I think it is because you detected my accent and I know that English is not my native language. You asked if the bag was canvas fabric, which at that time I said to you that type. Plastic threads are made of vinyl, which is then woven into cloth, you do not ask for specific scientific descriptions of this type of thread was then woven into canvas MATERIAL. Canvases can be made of many different materials. I feel I have been discriminated against my tongue itself, because you tell them to bag it cost you $6 and $5 It was not trying to use an excuse to get another dollar out of me, what could be going into the mouths of my children’s bellies. I believe that I practiced professionalism and even googled English words used in the course of you so that you do not understand me the answers yourself, now you’ve made me so depressed that I cannot even begin to look for to make sure that the things I say, English sense of your brain to tell you to listen to what I tell you. I wish I had your face in front of me, I cannot see your eyes, and you can get a sense of sadness and sorrows in my soul my children starve their bellies. You do not know troublesomeness I pulled up a purse to sell received, you don’t know what this has done to the inside parts of the souls of the loved ones of me.

May God rest your soul. Good day sir!

BAGLADY: My response to you had NOTHING to do with language, ethnicity, or anything of the sort. I live in the Bay Area, which is one of the most wonderful exciting melting pots of humanity on the planet, and am from immigrant stock, myself – where English was not the native language. Just keep the $6.00- learn from the lesson – and be happy!

Two Drops To Guppy Heaven

Back then you could buy a tankful of feeder guppies for just a few cents. You could pick up an old fish tank out of the garbage, fill it with some gravel, throw a couple plastic army men in there, and have yourself a genuine aquarium.

Dad will tell you that if you breed them you can get fancy guppies. Guppies give birth to live babies. Hundreds of them. You may find one golden guppy that is your favorite. He might grow up to have a fancy tail.

Don't listen to your Dad. You'll believe it, when he tells you that adding two small drops of Clorox bleach will be good for the tank. The chlorine will clear up the water, but when every fish comes up dead, it's going to be your fault. He'll just tell you that you must have used too much bleach and it's your fault they're dead.

I overheard some hipsters talking about VHS tapes

By EMToast

I overheard some hipsters talking at the flea market. The one hipster says to the other hipster , "One thing I'll never be able to get behind again is VHS tapes."

Kid you were never behind VHS tapes. We were there from the beginning, renting copies Alien's Deadly Spawn and any other random Horror movie that looked slightly interesting. If you were behind VHS you adjusted your tracking with a knob, not a button, and you didn't care if you were fucking up the rental tape rewinding the good part over and over. That part was already buzzing the tape heads and showing white lines anyway. You just hoped it didn't break because tapes cost hundreds of dollars to replace due to high licensing costs. You were behind VHS if your parents bought an $800 Toshiba toploader from the electronics store in town when they definitely could not afford it and they made it clear, you better not fuck it up.

If you were really behind VHS, you would have watched tapes of Gone With the Wind or The Wizard of Oz with your Mom even if you'd rather be watching Rambo or Missing in Action because you only had one TV, and you still were able to enjoy it .

Or maybe your Dad brought home some crazy double feature tape with Reefer Madness/Night of the Living Dead that he found on sale and you could never bring yourself to watch Reefer Madness, but you loved Night of the Living Dead and this was the first place you saw the full version. Or maybe your Dad brought home a copy of Arsenic and Old Lace that you would never watched, but you still liked it because it made your home collection in the cabinet under the tv and above the record player look fuller.

Or if you were really behind VHS, later on when they started putting timers in them and blank tapes were readily available, you could record David Letterman and watch it after school, or when you got a girlfriend you'd force her to watch a week's worth of Sailor Moon you recorded off channel 11 on Saturday morning even though you were way too old for cartoons.

Kid, we build an empire of video tapes so you could watch Glee on your Ipad. You could never really have been behind it at all, so shut up about the VHS and keep walking.

Portrait of My Dog as a French Serial Killer

By EMToast

Tags: dog, French, serial killer

My dog posed for a sketch. I placed him on interview. He is a French serial killer. French is the language of tongue curling.

He said, "Everybody makes a big deal about killing hookers like it's such an accomplishment. Where's the challenge in that? How about a serial killer who kills bosses. I mean that would be impressive. Tell me about a guy who has been at the same job for 17 years and killed every boss he ever had. Now you've got my interest.

Back in France killing people is easy. It's the same as with cats. You don't really think about it, you just do the killing. I'm working my way through the crowd. That's how you do it. Slow and steady.

Did you hear about the puppy serial killer? A little dachshund and he's been through 65 foster families in less than a year. I don't know how he's getting away with it, but that little guy impresses

The professor said, “That’s right!”

I don’t remember what class that was, but I do remember the valuable lesson I learned that day. Grammar doesn’t matter once you reach 13th grade.

POLICE: Feral Cats Abduct and Rape Woman

By EMToast

January 10, 2013

Categories: Absurd World News

Tags: Cat Rape, Feline Rape, Feline Rape Cave, Feral Cat Rape, Feral Cats, Feral Rap Cave

Belgian tourist, Julio Prejean, witnessed the terrorizing occurrence while vacationing in Honolulu, Hawaii.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Prejean told police, "It was a safe and happy afternoon. After we hiked up to Diamond Head for some sight seeing. We drove up to the shrimp truck, it's a little catering truck, for some lunch.

We noticed a lot of feral cats circling around. I asked the shrimp truck worker about it and he told me that each day after lunch it was their policy to dump the leftovers near the beach. The feral cats are a local attraction and it keeps the tourists coming. I started taking some pictures with my phone of the cats. They looked unusual. The whole group of them was piling onto each other, salivating, and became a sort of pulsating mound. The closer I got the more stressed they became. I backed off. A woman in a bathing suit who didn't seem to notice their behavior walked right up to them and tried to hand feed them a garlic lemon shrimp. I don't know if it was the garlic, the bikini, or what but the cat mound exploded at her. Before anybody knew what was happening they took her down and dragged her off. I tried to snap off a couple pictures, but couldn't get a clear one. You know how they show cats fighting in a cartoon where it's just a bit cloud with claws coming out here and there? It was something like that."

The woman taken by the cats was Saundra Harstad, a 26 year old Pediatric Social worker of Gahanna, OH. Authorities found the remains of Harstad's body in a cave less than ½ a mile from the Shrimp Truck's location.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Only her eyes were left. In nature, the eyes are the only part of a fish that cats leave behind. Even big cats such as lions and tigers always leave the eyes.

Forensic evidence collected on the site indicates Harstad was likely sexually assaulted and certainly murdered by the feral cats. This is confirmed by blood evidence found on the fur of several feral cats. In a happy twist to this dark tale, the formerly feral felines have been rehabilitated are currently up for adoption at the Hawaiian Feline Association Feral Cat Rescue.

Honolulu Police reports evidenced that residents have made several complaints about the cats their caves in the past. These were largely ignored by local authorities until the Harstad attack. The cave has now been closed off with chicken wire. Feral cat traps have been placed outside the cave so the creatures can be caught and rehabilitated for integration back into the mainstream pet population.

Cat expert Dr. Jackson Reusing says, “Rape in domestic cats is uncommon but not unheard of. Male cats are known to rape kittens in a show of dominance, but the phenomena of cats raping humans is something we have only seen in the past few years. It’s important to note that feral cats are much more dangerous than your standard house cat (Felis Silvestrus Catus)/ The feral cat (Felis Barbux Catus) is physically very different from his domesticated brother. A feral cat, born in the wild, undergoes a single generation transformation.

All cats are known to have barbed penises much like a fish hook, the feral cat has a more dangerous double barbed and retractable penis much like his cousin the lion. The penis barb traps the victim and eliminates any chance of escape for the victims. In every case where the victim was able to survive a cat rape, the cat or cats had to be surgically removed from their prey.

Domestic cat’s also have a barbed tongue which is why when they lick us it feels scratchy. In feral cats, these barbs become sharper which allowing the feline to literally lick the flesh from it’s victim. This is another trait shared with the big cats.”

Researchers studying feral cat behavior have noticed an alarming trend in recent years, not just in Hawaii, but worldwide. They have discovered rogue packs of adult male feral cats raping humans not in rural areas, but mostly in densely populated areas where food and shelter is plentiful. Human meat decoys with tracking devices have been dumped on city streets and observed being taken to remote “feline rape caves” raped, torn apart and eaten.

Lance Lipca of the Feline Research Institute in Ithaca ,NY has been studying feral cat rape behavior for 3 years. He based the above mentioned decoy research on the 2008-2009 Dolphin rape decoy studies of Scott Randleston of the Dolphin Research Institute of Boca Raton

Lipca stated, “Randleston’s research proved an aggressiveness in young male dolphins that no one expected or believed possible. In his studies decoys were taken into underwater caves and repeatedly assaulted by the dolphins. The cats have taken it a step further. They take the decoys into any hidden area they can find, whether it be a basement, a dumpster, or sometimes right out in the open. A cat rape cave can be any dark corner, but cats don’t’ limit themselves to corners. They use their barbed penises to trap and assault their victim, both male and female, then lick the flesh from their bodies with their extremely sharp tongues leaving nothing by the eyes and skeletal remains.”

Lipca continues, “The current theory is that feral city cats have it too easy. Food and shelter are so plentiful that the playful cats have nothing to occupy their time. The cute kittenish looks can be deceptive. Don’t ever forget the cat is an apex predator who needs prey and challenge. We are looking at several causes including chemical or hormonal factors, but I believe the “easy life” is the main cause. “

Statistics collected from various government authorities paint a frightening picture.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

United States Feral Cat Sexual Assault Statistics 1995-2012
1995-2000: No reported cases
2000-2005: 2 reported cases
2005-2010: 70 reported cases
2011: 86 reported cases
2012: 124 reported cases

These are only the attacks reported by survivors. There are no estimates of how many are missing or dead as a result of feral cat attacks. Many of these attacks occur without witness and due to the hidden nature of “feline rape caves” by the time victims are discovered, no evidence of cat involvement remains.

We encourage all to stay safe. Starting in 2013 many localities in the United States, have joined a “Mind your Pussy” campaign and issued a 5 step Feline Safety Checklist to reduce the feral cat menace.

1. Neuter all Male Cats
2. Don’t let your domestic cat outside
3. Don’t feed stray cats
4. Protect yourself. When walking alone, bring spray bottle to ward off attackers.
5. Use Lemon! Lemon repels cats the same way that garlic repels vampires. Sprinkle lemon rinds around your home, keep dried rinds in your pockets, wear lemon perfume, hand lotion.

I Thought My Ghetto Blaster Was a Boom Box.

By EMToast

I grew in the ghetto of my town, but I never knew it until I read it in the paper years later. I didn't have a ghetto blaster though, I called mine a boom box.

When we first moved into the house, the back yard was full of empty turtle shells because the previous tenants liked turtle soup. My my sister's bedroom had a giant treasure chest filled with sand and cigarette butts. We kids weren't even allowed to stay at the place for the first couple weeks because the conditions were so poor. It took all my parent's had to get the place up to standards, but they did it. So well in fact that I really never knew we were living in the ghetto.

My neighbor taught me how to electrocute yourself with the loose wires behind the tv for fun. We were switching from tv to video so we could play some Berzerk on Atari 2600.

Then maybe we'd hand out with the Brazilians up the street as long as their parents weren't home.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

They were the first people I knew who actually liked Michael Jackson and the middle son was very proud to show me his parent's P.Y.T. single. When the parent's came home and everybody either hid or ran out of the house. One of the times, when I ran out, the door, the father turned and saw me. The kids ended up getting punished and after that didn't want to be friends anymore.

There were some girls up the street. The oldest one, about my age, liked to strip for the neighborhood kids at the Brazilian's house. She swore she had pubic hair, but that you couldn't really see it because she was blonde. Her mother was a very large sex pervert with a drawer full of sex toys, dirty magazines, and candy. I assume she was very influential on her daughters.

The middle daughter had a heart condition. She had been through open heart surgery as a baby and had the chest scar to prove it. The parents always told all the kids to never punch her in the heart or she could die. It was as bad as daring the kids to do it. I witnessed her get heart punched several times. Once by her own sister. She never died. Years later she burned their house down playing with hairspray and matches.

We had some scumbag next door neighbors on the other side. Dirty, lice ridden ones that pour syrup on sisters's hair for no reason, do the worm in the street in front of your house, that have a witch for a mother, and a grandfather in a silver space suit and cowboy hat who used to have cancer but coughed it out. Ones that will teach you how bad neighbors can be and to hate and mistrust your neighbors for years to come. Ones that when their house next door to you is finally condemned, dilapidated, and collapsing you will rejoice for they are no longer there.

If you wandered past the scumbags, past the Brazilians, and up past the burned down house, then went up the hill and into the woods, you'd find an abandoned school bus. If you pushed the middle of the door it would fold up and you could get inside to play. Or if you kept walking up over the hill there you'd find a field of gentle cows standing around eating grass. Just past them there was a pond fenced in by barbed wire. Inside there was a bull.

Once I decided to go under the fence and walk down to the pond. About half way down to the water the bull started chasing me. I don't know how close it got to me before I escaped through the fence, but it was enough that when I came out the cows didn't seem so gentle anymore. As we kids walked past the herd, the cows started coming after us. I wasn't sure if they were following us or chasing us, but we either way we ran down the hill and got ourselves out of there. We had no idea where we were going, but just kept walking and walking. There was no fear of being lost. No cares that our parents might wonder where we were. None of that mattered. It was hot, it was summer, and it was fun. We were exploring some foreign jungle and nothing was wrong.

Lozaq the father lived next door to us. He looked like a gentle child molester with light dog shit colored hair, and sadly he was the most normal of the family. The second most normal was the grandfather. He a futuristic old man in a silver shining jacket, space boots and a cowboy hat. He was born in 1900 and as a boy he said “I’m going into the future.”

The mother was a screechy garble mouthed witch. The two daughters were dirty blonde. They had actual dirty blonde hair, not the kind you’re thinking of. There were plenty of sores on their skin to go with that.

Someone had written FUCK in Elmer’s glue on the green concrete foundation of the house and it’s been there for more than 20 years even if they did try to cover it up with vinyl siding.

Wisely, our father told us years later when the house was condemned, “Stay outta there. There’s AIDS crawling up the walls."

The Lozaq's had a dog names Snoopy. The poor thing stayed outside all year long chained up to a doghouse of the same style as the one in the comic strip.

Years after the house was condemned I was clearing out a section of the overgrown yard to use as a parking spot. Snoopy's doghouse was still there, with Snoopy inside. A few bones and a collar. Poor little guy had died alone and been left there all those years

I'm not sure where any of the Lozaq's ended up, but my hope is that they met the same fate as poor Snoopy. Just a few piles of rotting bones laying in a box somewhere forgotten.

Big Clark’s Dirty Hot Dog Secret

By EMToast

May 11, 2013

Categories: Absurd World News, Art of the Folked

Big Clark was one of the greatest singers of the 20th century. The key to becoming a superior singer is hot dog grease. It lubricates your vocal cords and increases your range.

Clark said, “That was my secret to success when I was singing all the songs on my 1973 vinyl release “Dick Clark “20 Years of Rock N’ Roll”

They used to put my songs on the back of cereal boxes. Can you imagine? It’s all thanks to that hot dog grease.

Choking Hazard: The Real Reason Garlic Repels Vampires

By EMToast
May 22, 2013
Categories: Art of the Folked, Short Fiction

Garlic makes the heart beat twice as strong. When a vampire bites into the throat of a garlic eater, the high pressure blood spray is too powerful and they choke to death. This is the real reason they are repelled by it. Incidentally, vampires are vile nocturnal creatures with teeth like rats who prey on the weak. Don't let vampire funded television shows and movies like True Blood, Twilight, or Vampire Diaries fool you to thinking otherwise. We are all weak. They are all hungry.

Skull-Snakes New Morbid Craze With the People

By EMToast
July 8, 2013
Categories: Art of the Folked
Tags: Skull, snake, utter nonsense, we love you spider

They used to make cool rings that instead of precious stones had poisonous spiders encased in glass. After the animal rights people got after the ring makers for arachnid abuse, the ring makers started a new craze about skull-snakes. They take real human skulls, pin the jaw in place and wire the vertebrae behind it to make a neck-tail. Some of the more fancy versions even have a rattler at the one. One place was making leather flap that extended from on the sides of the skull to give a cobra effect, but then the animal rights people got after them for using animal leather. Once they started using dried human skin instead, no further complaints. I hear the animal rights people don't give a damn about people rights anymore. They aren't allowed to. It's because everybody is specializing these days. It's the only way to even vaguely survive. I saw one of the animal rights guys wearing a skull-snake ring, but it was ok because they make those out of plastic which doesn't hurt humans, insects or animals.

Hot Dog: A Tale of Origination

By EMToast
July 13, 2013
Categories: Short Fiction
Tags: balloon artist, dog, Europe, Scavengers

Hot dogs originated in an area of Europe once known as Germany in a time when humans scavenged the leftovers from lion kills.

The pair came up on a foul pile of carcasses so wretched even the hyena had left them to rot.

The boy said to his father “remember when I saw that dog?” His father, little more than a caveman, grunted. Evolution was far more aggressive in those days.He sorted through the meat pile, pulled out intestines from either a zebra or an antelope, and with a flash of artistry and dexterity unusual for a cave dweller, stuffed it with putrid meat, twisted it into the shape of a dog. The technique he used was more similar to that of a 1980’s child puzzling with a snake cube, than that of a balloon artist. The the boy was impressed nonetheless with his new dog meat toy.

As the boy played with his new rancid toy, the father built a fire large enough to keep them through the night. Once the flames dwindled and the pile hot coals blinked red, the man walked into the woods, then returned with a pile of dry leaves. He bent down and placed the leaves close enough to the fire to stay warm, but no so close as they'd catch fire.

He threw a couple of large logs on top of the embers. The boy scraped at the bare ground near the fire with his feet trying to remove some of the loose stones preparing for sleep.

After his dirt mattress was smoothed, he sat down next to the fire, poked a stick through his dog and began twirling it over the fire. It sizzled and cracked. While it cooked, the rancid meat let off a smell that was surprisingly appetizing.

The father quickly rustling from his leaves grabbed the dog from his son and took a bite from it. It snapped as he bit into it. Hot grease ran down his his chin and he smiled. "Hot dog!" he joked and they both laughed.

The father gave the boy back his dog. He greedily finished it and the pair slept through the night undisturbed.

The second billboard in this fall's marketing campaign begs the target market to put an end to dolphin rape. Since it's publication 5 years ago in July 2009 the "Dolphin Rape Caught On Film" story continuesbe one of the the most active and controversial stories on the site with 210,000 views and 143 comments so far.

With success comes imitation. From clothing lines, to youtube videos and image based humor sites, the dolphin rape story has been copied some time word for word and most times without attribution. We won't provide links to further promote these impostors. After 5 years, we think it's time for everybody to move on.

How To Avoid the Guilt of Not Loving Your Child

By EMToast
August 7, 2013
Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: Deception, Defence mechanism, Denial

NY radio station 1010 WINS broadcast today that "behavior problems can turn the child you love and your life into a nightmare." Sadly, 95 percent of children are classified as "unlovable" by their parent at some point during their lives.

You may have a child who is unlovable. If so, you need not feel guilty. It's not your fault if you can't love your child. You surely tried, but he or she is probably just an annoying asshole. You come from a long line of annoying assholes, everyone does. Genetics are difficult to overcome.

If your child turns out to be unlovable, take comfort, there is good chance that your child will grow out of it, move out of the house before 40, and not drain your every last resource before completely disowning you.

If you do hate your child, please don't tell them. They probably already know, and this may not be a permanent situation. They may forget that you hated them if you do it quietly, but they will never forget your hurtful words if you say, “I hate you.” Instead, pretend to love them. As the catchphrase goes “fake it until you make it.” Remember, those little unlovable bastards can grow up to be big unlovable bastards and you’ll be too decrepit to do much about it.

Lady Bird Johnson said it best when she said, “ Children are likely to live up to what you believe of them, and I believe all children are assholes until at least the age of 25!”

Why I Hate Philosophy Students Who Smoke the Pot

By bixby
August 8, 2013
Categories: Short Fiction

1998. I asked a friend for help today moving some boxes. Nothing too involved, a couple boxes of paperbacks from my apartment to my car. He stood there for a moment, narrowed his eyes as he inhaled his cigarette, shook his head up and down as he tapped out his ash. Then said to me that in good conscience he couldn't help.

I said, "They aren't heavy, it's just a couple boxes of shitty paperbacks, I could do it myself but I thought it would go quicker if I had some help."

He said it wasn't what I was asking him to do that weighed heavily on his conscience. It was the thought of what the act of helping would do to our karma that concerned him.

He said, "Helping you out would be good for my karma because I would be doing something good for someone else because they needed help. But it's not really helping you. It's in fact harming you, for like eternity."

"You would not be working through your own karma as you are supposed to do so that you can be free of the wheel of birth death and suffering. I would be alleviating your suffering and your struggle, but by doing so I am preventing you from experiencing it, which is what you need to do to be born onto a higher plane."

"You must experience it! You must suffer in order to be free. It's the whole 8 fold path; 4 noble truths. Take refuge in the three jewels. By doing this for you I would be taking your suffereing away which would be a momentary blip of happiness on your part. I'm doing some good stuff for my own karma, but leaving you to unknowingly wallow in your bad karma."

"Holy shit there is no way Im doing this man because if you really think about it, it's a double fuck! I realize now there is no way Im helping you because if I help you it will further me to my path to enlightment but at the same time it will cost your karmic soul, So… if I were in fact to help you knowing it would be beneficial to my karma and detrimental to yours, then I would be a really evil person working the system. And it would really end up damaging my karma too man. So no, no I can't help you, not at the cost of our souls man."

All I can say is that a simple "no" would have sufficed.

It sux that you had to move the boxes by yourself. But, for your readers sake, let's mention that Buddhism does not, under any circumstance, advocate not helping others. Pot logic…fail.

nugal patesh singh

February 11, 2016

when I partake of the pot, I do not help others because I am lazy and want to eat things. I do not philosipize, I just watch tv and go to sleep. I think Buddhism would not advocate helping someone to rob a bank. If I saw a poor crippled robber having a hard time opening the door to the bank, I would not help him. Even if he was stealing the money to pay for the healthcare of 27 indigent children from a small impoverished country, and the money was just coming from the accounts of fat cats who didn't need it and hadn't looked at it in years and forgot they even had it. Buddha would never want me to help him.

Bad Pussy From Last Century

By bixby
August 9, 2013
Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: Profanity, Pussy, Sexual slang

When I was 20 years old, I saw my first old pussy. It was bad. I was working in a doctor's office, and many of our patients were old and infirm. There were probably just as many who were skeevy and perverted but that is a story for another day.

Anyway, a lot of these old people had nobody to talk to except their cat or the television, and they thrived on every moment of those singular interactions most of us hurry through and think nothing more of. Like the guy that pumps our gas or the lady behind the counter at the coffee shop or the clerk at the bank drive through. So you felt sorry for these people because they were longing for any sort of human contact they could get whether it was physical, emotional, or just having someone they could talk at.

I quickly learned that no matter how sorry you felt for them it was dangerous to linger too long in a room. Old people have absolutely no modestly and no qualms about telling you their whole life story in great detail.

As soon as you brought them into a room, they started disrobing before you could even close the door. You'd get an eye full of unfurled breasts hanging down to the waist, flappy chicken skin under the arms, sagging breasts like ziplock bags half full of chicken fat and that was a lot of the men, not to mention the balls hanging down to their knees or the red psoriasis encased dick that would sometimes just slip out of their boxers when they sat down.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

All these were nothing compared to that ancient pussy I saw. The owner must have been in her 90s. She had her hair up in two long grey braids swirled around the top of her head and fixed in place with a whole arsenal of bobby pins in various colors. She was quite incoherent, probably the beginning stages of Alzheimers or the later stages of alcoholism also known as wet brain. These patients were the ones I asked few questions of because it was either going to be nonsense that wasn't even words, or they would suddenly become totally lucid and every answer was likely to be extremely long and begin somewhere about 1963 and would usually delve into extremely personal things about bowels bladders prostate glands dentures, sexual injuries, and dead dogs.

Anyway back to the owner of the old pussy, I gave her a gown and asked her take off her top and bra and told her she could leave her pants on and to put the gown on opening in the back. She was modest enough to wait until I left the room before she began undressing. Unfortunately I didn't realize what was going to be waiting for me. She did put the gown on the right way, she just took off everything including her underpants. I was unaware of this when I came into the room and helped her up onto the table. She laid down on her back, put her knees up, spread her legs and flashed me her cunt.

It was like no horror I had experienced before. I was a mere child and if there was a god or if god is a decent person I shall never have to see anything like this again. It was a sickly greyish yellow, and resembled two pieces of turkey cold cuts dangling there, after they had been dragged over the carpeting and had picked up a few really long grey dog hairs and some carpet fibers.

I could not believe the sparsity of the hair, and how long and flat the lips were. They were gargantuan. I thought to myself I would be very surprised if they did not make a flapping noise. After I was done and helping her off the table I actually listened for the slapping sound. I did hear something but couldn't tell if it was her pussy lips in action or her letting a couple farts slip out.

I decided that day there was another reason to never allow myself to become old even if it meant blowing my head off with my toe in the trigger of a shot gun.

Folgers crystals are life crystals. Don't let nobody tell you different. When I was having that heart attack, I put those crystals under my tongue and let them absorb right into my blood. My heart jump started right back to normal. When I was getting those blood clots in my legs the doctor was trying to operate on me and I rubbed the Folgers on my leg, and stuffed my socks with Folgers crystals. After a week my clots was cured.

I'm telling you. Having trouble digesting? Put Folgers on everything you eat like salt and pepper.

Got a toothache? Pack your cheeks with Folgers like a chipmunk. After a while, the tooth will come right out. It won't even hurt.

Diabetes? Strokes? Wheezing? Blurry Vision? Folgers cures it.

Now where's my pants? I had a new pair right in here. Your mother musta moved it. God dammit. Where's my new dungarees. They were right here. She puts it away and you can never find it again.

Anger & Vanilla Motivate Parking Attendant's Crimes

By EMToast
November 8, 2013
Categories: Art of the Folked, Short Fiction
Tags: security guard, serial killer, serious faces, Teeth

In 1994 or 1995 the patient had become a security guard at the local community college. The job was to monitor the parking habits of 18-22 year olds in a large dirt parking lot. He repeatedly had altercations with students, particularly males. Three days before the incident, the patient argued with a student on the paved street portion of the lot near the back entrance to the school. For causes unknown, the patient was observed yelling at the boy, "there will be nothing left of you but a pile of teeth and broken bones."

School officials were terrified to go against the patient, many of them were forced to part in an outer parking lot, nearly a mile away from the school. It was rumored that the man was a felon and had lied about his past to get the job. This was before the treatments began, obviously.

He never killed out of hatred – only anger. Vanilla was one of his triggers. If he even got the whiff of vanilla, he would rampage across campus screaming, "Vanilla is not a flavor! It's the absence of flavor!" A female student wearing a vanilla fragrance, was unfortunate enough to cross paths with him. They found her body torn to pieces and drenched in chocolate syrup in cardboard boxes behind the trailer where they hold the psychology classes.

Fortunately, those days are behind the patient. He is one hundred percent rehabilitated. The completion of his thirty-six hours of aroma therapy qualified him for work-release and we recommend he resume his duties at the college immediately. The incident appears to have been a one time event. The patient has asked that we share the following statement.

"Dear Sirs. Thank you for agreeing to release me on this day. I shall not kill. If they only would have put sprinkles on the vanilla or parked the cars straight, I shall not have killed. The fault of a man is only measured by the shortcomings of those around him. Do not blame the wicked man for the wrongs that he has righted. I hereby do agree to be released from this prison. My body is free to wander the free lands straightening cars and relieving those unworthy of their teeth and bones as needed, but only if they do not smell of vanilla. The vanilla has a right to children. I shall climb the trees of vanilla-roma and bathe in the vanilla beans until I gain the strength to stomp them from existence. In summary, upon my release, I hereby do promise to kill no person, except the enemies of my captors, unless circumstances shall cause my captors to delay my release. Dear Mom and Dad,

As you know, I moved far away. The town I live in now doesn't have duck sauce. Last week I had to put ketchup on my eggroll just to get it down. I am considering moving even further away. To quote the guy who wanted to kill Keanu Reaves in that movie Dracula "Oceans of time will keep us apart."

I'm hoping to come back for the holidays next year. I know I keep saying that but I keep having to spend the money on Christmas presents for myself every year since I don't even have a brother and I never have enough money for the tickets. Even the one time when you sent me the money for a ticket I still really wanted to get my teeth whitened professionally so I had to do that instead. You wouldn't want to see me with yellow teeth anyway. I mean what kind of last memory of me would that be? I don't want you thinking of me that way on your deathbed. Your last memory of me should be of what I looked like 10 years ago.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Life is tough. I never know if I will make it through the day, much less another year. Today I was so tensed up a work, my shoulder locked up and I was banging it against the walls like that scene in Lethal Weapon from when Mel Gibson was still cool. I guess everybody was a lot cooler 25 years ago than they were now. Look at you guys. 25 years ago you were still hip hopping and happening. Now it's all Kashi this and salmon that. I tried that crap, but my shoulder really started tensing up every time I chewed. The damn thing would lock up and I'd have to go get a bacon egg and croissant with ketchup. I really would use duck sauce, but as I stated previously this place does not have it.

Good evening, good day, and good morning. Tell my sister hi if you see her. I heard she comes by every now and again to change the bed pans. Is that really what you're really into nowadays? I just don't get it. She doesn't talk to me anymore ever since she found out I tried killing her because she wasn't even a brother. You know brothers can carry you and you can steal their girlfriends and do burnouts in their blue Camaro at midnight in front of the clock tower. Sisters just screech all the time and it goes right through you.

One guy at work actually tricked his sister into getting a sex change, but she still liked guys so he couldn't even steal her girlfriend like he planned. I don't get why he doesn't just go on that dating site ebay like all the other guys do, but who am I to judge?

My girl is great. She hardly ever yells anymore ever since she gave up. She usually goes to bed around 7 so I see her for around 10 or 15 minutes every night after work. That's about all I can take anyway.

I'm thinking of quitting again. I am tired of the stress of getting up every day and trying to keep my shoulder from locking up every damn time they want me to do all that paperwork in that place. I don't know why the even hired me because when they asked me what motivated me I told them "girls" in the interview but they thought it was honest. I am feeling reckless Mom and Dad. I just might come visit. How much money did you guys save up over the years anyway. If it's a lot, then I love you so much. Hope to hear back from you soon. If you can send me the cash for another ticket I promise I'll try not to spend it. Maybe it you send 2 or 4 thousand dollars I'll be able to make it.

Best Regards,

Sincerely.

Dead Bear Obsession Threatens Reality

T.S. Eliot wrote “Humankind cannot bear very much reality.” Four out of five people are obsessed with dead bears and see them everywhere.

A friend, frozen with fear, sits silently in the dark outside of his garage as an 800 lb dead black bear walks past. A mother chased down a forest path and through a swamp by a dead mother bear and her cubs. A child is terrified by a dead polar bear rising from a pool of chlorinated water. And the turtles just watched.

The boy carelessly lost the small rubber Godzilla figure from the car at an interstate rest stop.

“Mom! Stop! My Godzilla!,” I shouted.

“His Godzilla!” the little sister shouted, but Mom wouldn’t stop.

Did I dream it like the other parking lot Godzilla?

I had walked up to the monster. He was so tall that it pained my neck to see his face. He didn’t move. His body seemed solid not rubbery like in the movies. I felt the sick terror of destruction.

No. I’m moving away from my problems. I can’t go back there. I can’t.

I said it twice. That’s how you know it’s serious.

Then they got tired of Vietnaming and needed to sleep so started eating heroin and doors then they had to go get the disability and they took out 28 insurance policies from different companies then cut off the tips of 2 fingers and made a quarter of a million dollars and now they wear sweatpants all day and yell at the dog and eat cheddar whales from Target and drink Weis cola and say life is like it was meant to be when they first crawled out of the swamp.

I don't know what swamp it is but I would sure like to see all the people who are getting burned crawling out of the swamp because I thought they came out of a woman's vagina parts not a swamp it's probably really messy and stinky and they prob sometimes get tadpoles stuck in their pockets and I wonder if they know and get them out before they die or if they just dry up. When they dry up they look like skinny black orange seeds so us don't even know its a baby frog fetus. They prob come out naked though I guess cause god doesn't make clothes, people in Mexico and Pakistan make the clothes unless god orders them before the people are ready to come out of the pond. I wonder what he does if they have a strike and who measures the people or does everyone start out with the same pants size. Boy history sure is a lot to think about.

Why You Can’t Buy Grape Ice Cream

By EMToast
February 19, 2014
Categories: Absurd World News, Short Fiction
Tags: Anthoycyanin, Ben & Jerry's, Grape Ice Cream

There is no such thing as grape ice cream. The reason? It has a lot to do with dogs, girls, the 1876 World’s Fair, pharmaceutical companies, and it’s more complicated than you think.

After his successful invention of the ice cream soda in 1874, Philadelphia’s Robert Green began to tackle a request from his customers.

Green boldly stated, in an 1876 interview with the Pennsylvania Inquirer, "The people are tired of vanilla and chocolate. They want something more. When the children come up from the mines, they are not satisfied with the plain flavors anymore. I will give them grape. The world’s fair is coming. The world will have grape ice cream. This I decree."

What Green did not know, is that grapes contain a special molecule Anthocyanin that prevents freezing. Green’s every attempt to create grape ice cream only produced one outcome – grape milk. He was destined to fail, but in all the excitement with the fair, no one noticed.

Until the 1970's the mystery of Grape Ice cream remained unsolved. Baskin Robbins tried it, and failed. Carvel couldn't do it. Dairy Queen, didn't dare.

However, in 1976 Ben Cohen, of ice cream duo Ben and Jerry took on the challenge This was actually 2 years before they opened their first ice cream parlor, but Ben was already a hardcore ice cream flavor creator.

Ben told People Magazine in a 1984 interview, "I had the biggest crush on Jerry's sister (Becky). He knew it and didn't want me near her. I think he's still pissed about this one. Anyway, one day I was boasting to his sister that I would create a new ice cream flavor especially for her. Any flavor she wanted, but she had to go out with me. Becky was a real ball buster, so she says to me, 'yeah okay GRAPE!' She knew from Jerry that nobody could do it. They had been talking about it. Jerry always thought it was funny, but though grape was gross but I was determined to do it. I can't even taste a damn grape, but I would do it anyway."

See my taste buds don't work. That's why all our flavors are lumpy so I can tell the flavors apart. Like everyone else before me, I couldn't get the (grape) ice cream to freeze. At that stage, I was just using Welch's grape juice and I was having difficulty with my test results because I couldn't tell which group had the flavor, how much flavor was added, and so on. So to help myself with the testing, I started adding the grape skins. Something I could feel, to know what was what. We didn't know it back then, but grapes contain Anthocyanin molecules. These are a form of anti-freeze. They keep the ice cream in lquid form — but if you increase the Anthocyanin level to a highly concentrated level, then you get the creamiest freeze you can imagine. An ice cream makers dream. You can only get the levels that high when you add the skins. They have more of those molecules than the rest of the grape – including the seed.

That was the secret why the Germans were able to make rum raisin ice cream back in WWII. The damn Anthoycyanin levels in the raisin's were perfect because the raisins had the skin, not the juice.

I had no idea why it worked back then though. I just stumbled upon the discovery because of my tongue. Becky was impressed. We were at her house, alone. I gave her the scoop – on a cone. I was really getting somewhere. She was laughing and happy. She couldn't believe I did it. I'll never forget what happened next. Becky jokingly gave her dog a lick from the cone. He liked it and took a couple licks. Then he just gasped and dropped dead. He flipped down onto the floor and was just gone. I had no idea that Grapes are toxic to dogs. Specifically the Anthoycyanin.

Becky was devastated. I had invented deadly dog poison, and I definitely wasn't' getting anywhere with her now. This grape thing was no good. You can't have dog poison this toxic in the house. My creation was dead. I didn't care about it anyway so I gave it to the pharmaceutical companies to figure out. I don't remember who even gave me that idea, but I hear they're still using grape flavored pills to put down dogs with at a lot of the old kill shelters. It's my greatest mistake. The pharm. companies figured it out about the molecules. I gave up on it. I don't think anybody else even tried. You can make the stuff at home as long as you don't have a dog, but nobody is going to sell the stuff."

Shortly after Ben provided his formulas to the pharmaceutical industry, FDA banned the sale or research of any grape flavored ice creams or sherbets, natural or artificial due to pet related hazards. This ban is in effect until 2028. That's why you never see grape flavored ice cream anywhere.

Facebook Begins Rolling Out Friend Rating System

By EMToast
April 1, 2014
Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: FaceBox, FaceCode

The social networking giant will begin rolling out an advanced friend rating system on Friday. Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerburg announced the new feature in April, billing it as a new way to limit selfishness and narcissism on the site as well as quell other abuses.

By incorporating a friend rating system, Facebook will allow you to classify your friends into categories and rate them within each of those.

Just a few of the of the categories are:

- "Hawker" for those who use the site as a sales forum constantly barraging their friends with items they could not possibly be interested in.
- "Too Proud Parent" for those who post hundreds of photos of their child at once- usually in virtually the same pose.
- "Pet Freak" Animal version of "Too Proud Parent"
- "High Scorer" for friends who fill your feed with their gaming accomplishments and requests.
- "Tooner" for friends who are proud to share that they listen to 90's country.
- "Promoter" for friends who mostly use Facebook to post links to their websites, photo galleries or personal appearances.
- "Dear Diary" for friends who post their every thought and activity

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

You can rate your friends under each category and they can rate you. If you rate too high in any one category, you will receive a warning. If you are warned three times, you will be banned from the site for a month. If you are banned three times in a year, you are banned for good. According to Zuckerburg, the ratings system will promote balance and stop users from concentrating too much on any one area.

The rating feature could prove the key to keeping users engaged on the site, but many suspect it could go the other way as it is estimated that nearly 90% of Facebook users are undiagnosed sufferers of narcissistic personality disorder. Those banned from Facebook will be forced to look for alternatives which may boost dying sites like MySpace and Hi5.

3 Proven Ways to Dodge Debt Collectors

The big story in the news today is that one third of American's are in debt and have debt collectors calling on them.

We're here to help. Here are 3 legally questionable ways to get them to stop calling – at least temporarily.

1. Get a cheap burner phone like a TracFone. When the debt collectors call your home or cell number, just tell them that the person they are looking for (you) has moved and is no longer at this number. Then give them your burner phone number and never answer it.

2. Look up another person in the phone book who has the same name as you and re-direct the debt collectors to them in the same way as above.

3. Start answering your phone like you are at work. If it's a debt collector, tell them to stop calling you at work. It is illegal for them to call at work once you let them know your employer will not

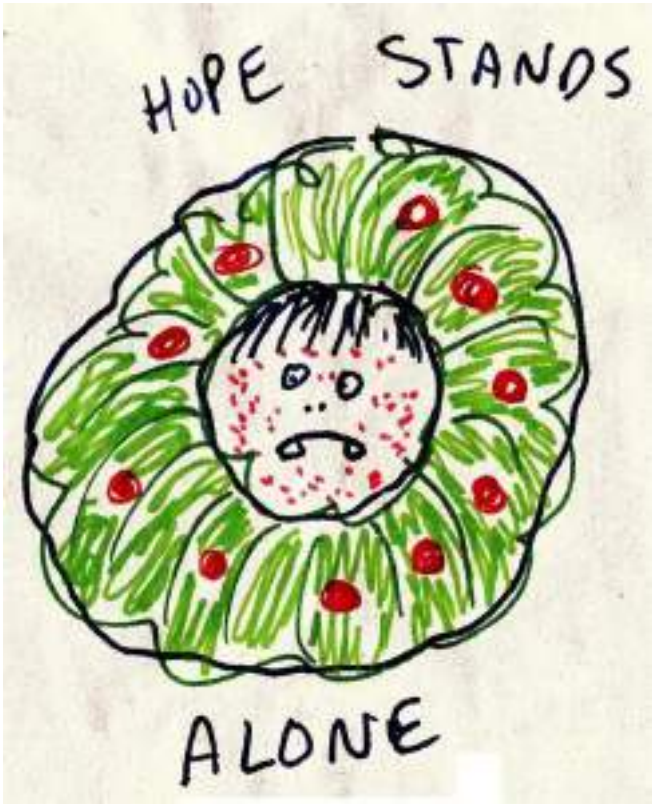
Hope Stands Alone: A Tragedy of Hope

By EMToast
December 9, 2014
Categories: Art of the Folked
Tags: Hope



Hope stands alone. Immune to the contagious facial Impetago that has decimated her family this holiday season. No less than thirty six filthy grandchildren litter her crumb covered kitchen floor. The only gift they'll receive this year is a double dose of fish-mox.

If her old classmates could only see her as she is now. They'd forget about the acid wash denim jacket wearing white leather upper hi-tops beachcomber they remember and give her the respect she deserves.

Hope stands alone. Her diseased grandchildren will never walk again.

Happy Holidays.

TIME Word of the Year 2014 is…

By EMToast
December 11, 2014
Categories: Absurd World News

TIME has announced their Word of the Year and it's one most of us have never heard before: Somnophiliac.

Definition of SOMNOPHILIA : som·no·phil·i·a adj \-ˈfil-ē-ˌə\ : Obsession with an unusually erotic interest in or stimulation by a sleeping or unconscious person. Sexual feelings or activities that involve sleeping or unconscious bodies. First Known Use: 1894

Unless you study serial killers for fun or are a criminal psychologist, Somnophila is not a familiar word. Recent years have brought us many innovative new words such as selfie and twerk, but in December 2014 Somnophiliac put them all to shame.

The word first started trending in connection with recent allegations against Bill Cosby, but blew up on Twitter, Facebook, and Instagram when Jake Gyllenhaal and Christopher Nolan announced at the 2014 SAG awards that Gyllenhaal would star in a new Christopher Nolan film Somnophiliac. The film is rumored to be a sequel to his 2002 Insomnia.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

After the Nolan/Gyllenhall announcement in December, Somnophilia (the word) simply exploded and teens around the world popularized it by misusing somnophilia in ways parents just don't understand.

TIME Gazette (Henderson NV) stated that they chose the word to appeal to younger readers. Their typical readership demographic is 65+. Word of the Year will be published on a full page display in the TV section next to the crossword puzzle in their December 26th issue.

Each day at 3:30, the warehouse receiver sat at the gray metal desk to calculate the piece count and weight for the day's deliveries. This was handwritten on a sheet to be submitted to management the next day. Rather than lock the sheet away in the top drawer of the desk, instead he left it in a clipboard on top of the desk.

Each morning at 7 am, the receiver would fax the handwritten sheet to the store manager who was located at a nearby mall.

One morning after the receiver faxed the sheet his friend, a truck driver at warehouse, began laughing hysterically and shouting "Look at the bottom! Look at the bottom!"

To his horror, the receiver noticed that in tiny letters the driver had written "I Love You Mr. Sable." at the bottom of the sheet, as the driver had secretly done on every sheet from the past week.

I Beefed One Out

Doctors should know that prescribing certain blood pressure pills to overweight patients with excessive body body hair will cause an overflow of sweat. Patients in this group are affected by strong, soaking sweats that can even cause salt stains to appear on their clothing.

Affected patients must develop a humor mechanism in to survive daily societal interactions.

One such man, a truck driver, endured the constant ridicule of co-workers who called him “Soggy Bear”

The patient, X, overcame the mockery by forcing great soaking hugs upon his abusers, or by rubbing the side of his sweat saturated shoulder against them in soggy protest. He displayed his salt stained shirts proudly as a sign no hard work by hanging them to dry like flags from from truck cab mirrors

Patient X was also a naturally flatulent fellow. He incorporated this feature into his persona. As part of his humor mechanism, whenever he passed gas he would exclaim, “I beefed one out.”

This humorous phase was often misunderstood by others. In one particular case, the patient

The patient was attempting to establish social dominance for fear of the new person becoming another tormentor at work, however he went too far.

The young man screamed in terror, “Help! He’s trying to beef me out!”

The two settled out of court. Patient X began seeking homeopathic treatment for his conditions and is now perspiration free.

Mr. Piff wore a dark gray suit. The driver, black jeans and a black turle neck. Piff turned the corner and unexpectantly bumped into the Don.

Mr. Piff eyed up the driver and simply said, “You look like a cat burglar.”

Don shook his head and continued walking toward the front of the building.

The miscellaneous workers overheard and talked about it for years.

I Came up Sour. Your Eyes Will Drop to the Floor.

By EMToast
December 19, 2014

The boys heard that the new assistant store manager, was married to a lunch lady at their old grammar school cafeteria. They also heard that he used to be a store manager, but had suffered from a nervous breakdown and was demoted. The alleged breakdown had him in the parking lot jumping from hood to hood of customers cars and yelling, “Choo Choo Train! Choo Choo Train.”

A weak neurotic man, with curly hair and glasses showed up soon after with no ability to prove those rumors untrue. It was his first night on the job. As he began to instruct the boys which aisles needed to be stocked for the night, he began gulping and wretching, and threw up into his own mouth. With a red face, he choked the vomit down and swallowed it.

“Oh, excuse me. I came up sour,” he said.

Since 1989 the boys still have not forgotten those words.

Don’t Piss off the Guy Who Buys Your Dinner

By EMToast
December 20, 2014
Categories: Short Fiction

One of the seniors worked in the produce dept. He seemed to have figured out how to get by working in a supermarket without too much stress. Everybody called him by his first two initials, but the store manager called him Woody since his last name was Woods. The store manager would call out over the loudspeaker “Adam,… Woody, Carriages. …, Adam,… Woody carriages. Bring in ALL the carriages.”

He did it just to break the guy’s spirit. He couldn’t.

Woods already drove a Powder Blue 1986 Ford Escort, and his father was forcing him to play football otherwise he considered him “gay.” He didn’t really need a 60 something old man trying to publicly humiliate him.

Woods was a good guy though. He had some good advise for the younger less experienced guys. “When a girl is going down on you, always keep your thumbs up. That way if they try to bite you, you push in on their eyes until they let go."

Or about how if your hair was wavy like his, you could tame it down in the morning by wearing a baseball cap while your hair was still wet. He had some funny sayings too. After work, he would sit in the passenger seat of his car with the feet hanging out to change from work boots to sneakers and we would always say, "My dogs are barking tonight."

Woods hated the store manager, as we all did. I remember the manager would tell him to bring him some asparagus, and pull his truck around front. Woods would spit on the asparagus, rub it on the floor, then when he went to get pull around the manager's truck he would do a lap around the parking lot with the ebrake pulled.

He also taught the guys how to relax while collecting carriages (shopping carts) Whenever we were called outside for carriages, Woods would say, "Come on guys, let's take a lap." This meant we would all walk around the entire shopping plaza looking for one or two stray carriages that made their way back there. It was a loophole that wasted a good 5 to 10 minutes of our hourly wage time.

One of the younger assistant managers, Roger, who aspired to be as big a ball buster as the store manager, had us figured out. One night as we took our lap, he opened up the bay door in the back of the store and yelled, "I caught you! No more taking laps!"

After we made it back out front of the store, we were ready to take our 15 minute break. Roger had a problem with that too. We had a habit of all going over to the pizza place for a couple slices for our dinner. According to Roger, we were squeezing out 5 to 10 extra minutes. From now on, only one of us could go over there, and we had to ask him if he wanted any slices while we were at it.

Most nights, I became the designated pizza buyer. Every night Roger would tell me to order his pizza extra hot. I would just tell the girl to "BURN THEM" for me and she would.

Don't piss off the guy who buys your dinner.

You Will Shit on the Floor When You Hear about the Sony Pictures vs. The Ice Cream Industry Scandal

By EMToast
December 22, 2014
Categories: Short Fiction

The Sony Pictures hack has taken another crazy turn. This time into a totally unrelated industry, and corporate heads are expected to roll. Sources close to the source revealed that the Sony Pictures “Christmas Gift” of leaked data that hackers threatened to release involves failed deals between Sony Pictures Execs and high level Ice Cream company executives. Some of the companies involved are rumored to include Edy’s, Briars, and Häagen-Dazs

Not all the details are known, but it appears Sony Pictures attempted to make deals with the ice cream companies to cross promote their upcoming horror film Arthur Christmas II: Elves Reckoning

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

The list of flavors Sony Execs were asking the companies to develop were so outrageous that not one company even dignified the requests with a response.

The fact that Sony is even putting ideas like this out there, shows how desperate they have become in recent years. Some of the less offensive flavors they proposed to the companies were:

Elf Blood (Strawberry)
Santa Meat (Red Velvet Cake)
ReinDeer Hoof (Licorice)
Rudolph Snout (Cherry Vanilla)
Coal (Dark Chocolate)
Pine Needle (Mint Chocolate Chip)
Frankincense and Murder (Vanilla)

Jimmy valentine Mouse, head of the New Zealand Dairy Workers Union is calling for a total boycott of Sony Pictures.

Mouse said, “If Sony wants to bring the motion picture industry down, that’s fine, but leave the dairy folks out of it! The offensive ideas they put forth are more destructive than they appear. It’s an all out assault against the hard working Milkers and Churners or our country. We have a hard enough time selling Vanilla as it is. I mean it’s just frozen milk and they are connecting it with murder? Come on Sony. What is an Arthur Christmas anyway?”

American dairy officials could not be contacted, but according to Rian Hathaway, Manager of the Dairy Dept in our local area, “The whole thing just sounds dumb. Is that even real. I mean why would Sony have such stupid names? What does hacking have to do with ice cream? I gotta get back to work. My manager is coming.”

“Books on TV” Then Everything Changed

By EMToast

With the rise of streaming media, Americans are being bombarded with more entertainment options than ever before. Book publishers now realize their businesses are in jeopardy if they cannot adapt. The first wave of devices created to modernize the book format such as the Amazon Kindle and the Barnes & Noble Nook have not succeeded in revitalizing the industry.
A source familiar with the matter, but not authorized to comment officially stated, “The first wave of never devices has failed. When you can buy a real used book for a penny on Amazon, why would anyone pay full retail prices upwards of $14.99 for an ebook? It a ridiculous concept. Face it. Reading is over. The future books on TV.”

“Books on TV” is the latest innovation from the book publishing industry.
Kristi S. Ware, leader of the Albany, FL book club and beta tester for the new product offers her option. “It was really neat. Books on TV has live people reciting dialogue from the book and acting it Movie studios have a lot to fear. "Books on TV" channel will being appearing on cable next spring. Dedicated Apple TV, iOS, and Android apps will release soon after. Netflix, Amazon Prime, and Hulu all announced they will carry "Books on TV" releases, with each locking up their own exclusive deals. Some majore "Books on TV" releases will even start appearing at select movie and drive-in theatres in our local area under the "Books on the Bigscreen" moniker.

Dear Doctor Fullerton: I’m afraid of sick rats. What should I do? – Fraidy Rats

Dear Fraidy: Fear of sick rats is completely normal. Those creatures are known to drill into the head and suck the precious blood out. I had a patient back in the 80’s who was so afraid of sick rats he couldn’t even play the arcade game “Sick Rat” with his children. In his case, I was able to cure with word association. Sick Rats sounds the same to Cigarettes. I prescribed that every time he felt nervous, he was to light up a cigarette. Within several years, he was cured of his life. No more fears.

Your case sounds more serious. I would recommend that you face your fears. Let a sick rat bite you and see what happens. I bet you’ll be fine. . — The Honorable Dr. Charles V. Fullerton, G.P.

Cunninghams to build a theme park to attract his ex-girlfriend Pinky Tuscadero. The theme of the park was pink and elephants because Pinky loved the color and she drank like an elephant. Pinky did visit the park, but she wasn't alone. She was accompanied by that bastard Potsy. Ralph Mouth saw first and stated to him, "Hey Fonzie check out the happy couple…Potsy and Pinky." It was an insignificant comment, but forced Fonzie to his knees in anger. His eyes began to flicker red with flames. In front of the monstrous pink plaster elephant his flames burst out of his body. It was a case of spontaneous human combustion. Fonzie's anger caused the fire that destroyed the park, the children and everyone. The final shot of the show was a pink elephant in flames with Pinky and Potsy walking towards the camera hand in hand. This must be what you are thinking of. The episode only aired once. You can probably find it on YouTube if you look for it late every night. Freshly Cut Hair May Take Root into Bare Feet

"Ask the Doctor" where readers ask questions of the world renounced general practitioner Dr. Charles V. Fullerton.

Dear Dr. Fullerton: A woman at work who cuts hair on the side warned me never to cut hair barefoot. She says that if you step on the freshly cut hair it can get into the pores of your feet and take root. We were shaving my dog, and I accidentally stepped on dog fur with no shoes on. I don't want to have hair growing out of my feet. What can I do. — Foot Fur Fear

Dear Foot Fur: Your hairdresser is right. Fresh cut hair or fur, can take root into the soles of your feet. Similar to wart therapy, fire is the only cure. Burn that mother out!

As I walk the streets of our local area, I see a lot of wasted vegetation. Brown leaves just piled on the streets littered with cigarette butts, crushed cans, and papers. I realize how many mouths those leaves could feed, yet they go to waste. It got me thinking about the recent Vegan Cannibal Bodybuilder scandal so I decided to visit our Whole Foods to see if I wasn't the only one.

I asked Aravinda what he thought, "Excuse me sir, can you share your thoughts on the Vegan Cannibal arrested in our local area?

He answered "He's a juicer. A muscle head weight lifter resolved to vegetarianism focused around

Dear Frankie: Keep your thumbs up young man. Protect yourself. A sharp teeth bj for man is worse than for the woman not receiving a rose. If she starts to bite, be at the ready. You must push your thumbs into her eyes until she releases. Practice this safe sex and you can survive many happy years.

What Experts Are Saying about Gas Prices

AJ Booze asks residents in our local area questions they rejected at his real job, 1013 KEMT News Radio. You never know where AJ Booze will pop up off the clock.

Driving around in our local area, I see gas prices lower than we've seen in years. Down almost to $2.00 per gallon. I stopped at several Exxon stations to talk to local experts their thoughts.

I asked Tara Grossman (age 78) what she thought of the $2.13 / gallon price. "You think it's cheap? Child they got you indoctrinated. Gas was down to 99 pennies eighteen years prior. Also years before that it was a quarter, a dime, a nickel. $4.00 a gallon was essentially a burglary. It needs to retreat down to at least a dollar before I call it cheap. I barely drive any longer so it doesn't have any kind of effect on me. My little girls typically drive me and they don't charge."

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Vernon Stone (Age 33) told me how he was going to use his savings. “I figure I’ll spare about 20 bucks a week. That won’t even purchase me 3 packs of smokes. At what point are cigarette expenses going to go down? Some person needs to crash them craps next.”

Lynda Royster (Age 29) had an alternate perspective. “The low gas prices are fantastic. I hope they keep going down. I am doing a great deal more driving back and forth nowadays. However I have a fear inside me that this is a trap. I feel like this befell me in the recent past. The price when down really low, then abruptly multiplied from what it was in the past. $8.00 each gallon gas is no doubt next. Watch.”

I hope Lynda is wrong. I myself have a plan for the extra savings. For every gallon I buy, I am putting $2.00 away in my college fund. In a couple years, I’m going to go back and get that welding degree. How long can I really wonder the streets like this?

George Clooney Comes Forward. Bill Cosby Raped Me

This is "Tattling with Tanya" Calumny the hallucinatory gossip columnist. Tanya is a proud Wernicke–Korsakoff syndrome survivor which gives her special expertise in fabrication, detraction and defamation.

Have you heard the latest? Actor George Clooney came forward with a shocking confession . "Bill Cosby drugged me, then Bill Cosby raped me." Clooney met with L.A. cops today to file charges.

After George heard the rape stories from the other women, he started having flashbacks and remembered that Cosby had drugged him during one of their visits to the Playboy Mansion. He woke up to find a naked Cosby fondling him.

George knew he had a criminal case against Cosby when he remembered one killer fact. There are hundreds of hidden cameras at the playboy mansion.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Clooney told me, “Why, I remember one time Hefner took me into the back room and was showing me footage from all over the place. And he was recording all of it. It’s my understanding that he has warehouses full of tapes going back 50 years. I’m actually afraid to watch the tape.”

Amal stated, “Yes, and with these tapes we can prove what Cosby has done.”

Clooney is the lone male to come forward against Cosby joining more than 15 women to accuse Coby of sexual assault.

Amal said, “George feels a strong responsibility to defend women and will stop this man from what he is doing. Cosby will not stop unless he is stopped. George’s may be the only case that has not exceeded the statue of limitations. Cosby will be brought to justice one way or another. You have my word.”

Cosby’s lawyer had no comment, but Cosby was reportedly shitting his pants when he heard the news.

This morning I woke up wondering… what is a fairy tale? Instead of cracking open my old encyclopedia Britannica I decided to do my job and set out to town looking for Goblins, Trolls and Witches. I think I'm missing volume F anyway.After nearly an hour without finding any Goblins to speak with, I went back home for a while to talk with Racter the insane robot computer. He explained it to me this way: "An Aristotle could have said, "I can define fairy tale. If a bore discovered enthusiasm, he would be a good bore."Then it hit me. I know the best place to find Trolls. YouTube video comments. John Oliver, or Johnny O as I like to call him, turned me on to this with his net neutrality Bit. I went to the official "Frozen" movie trailer to ask my question, but nobody took my question seriously. People started saying things like “Never been laid, eh” “You suck. Check out my channel.” None of it helpful.

Back to the streets. I started thinking. Little kids love fairy tales. I needed to find one. Problem was every time I approached any, they scattered. I needed to find someone who owned one of these children. One who HAD to answer my question.

I found got in touch with one of my high school buddies.

I knew he had owned a child for over 4 years answer and he could get the answer to my question.”Baby A” he said, “tell me what is a fairy tale?”She said matter-of-factly, “A story no one has heard before.”

Great answer! I can’t wait for the new season of the Walking Dead fairy tale to start next month! I’ve never seen it before.

Movie Review ‘A Million Ways to Die in the West’

Film: A Million Ways to Die in the West

Directed by: Seth McFarlane
Leo’s Rating: 0 Toasts.

Los Angeles–Let me first start off by saying, I make it a point to finish any movie once I start watching it. No matter how long, boring or badly acted, I find a way to finish watching. It's a compulsion. Whether it be the House Bunny, Twilight, or the sleep inducing Beyond the Black Rainbow, — all difficult watches in their own ways — I finish. A Million Ways to Die in the West was unfinishable. So poor that I had to shut it off and switch to a different comedy. Seth McFarlane is an Adam Sandler wannabe, but unlike Sandler he's not able to carry a movie. (Note: I hate Adam Sandler) He may be successful as a cartoon voice. He was successful as a CGI bear, but without those gimmicks to fall back on he fails. Face it McFarlane you have a weird face and you're not going to be a star. You need a leading man like a Wahlberg to carry the movie while you dress in your bear costume to make your comedy jokes.

You filled the movie with an all star cast. Including Sara Silverman, Giovanni Ribisi, Amada Seyfried, Neil Patrick Harris, and Liam Neeson. Perhaps next time you should let one of those guys take the lead and you can play a CGI horse. Sorry man, you just don't have the star power for this. You also need to learn how to edit.

We don't need a 5 minute intro shot of deserts and credits to get the movie rolling. We already sat through 45 minutes of movie trailers to get here. Save that shit for the end.

The worst part is that the movie was just not funny. A more likeable actor may have been able to pull off some of your weak comedy using their charisma, but you pal don't have it.

I only made it as far as the point where you started actually listing out all the ways you can die in the west and complaining about it. I had to shut it off. It's poor form to write a review directly to the actor/director for that I apologize.

I can't apologize for turning this one off and watching Bad Words instead. Now that was a great funny movie and Justin Bateman has just enough star power to pull off the Director /Star role. 5 toasts for Bad Words. No further review needed.

Seth McFarlane. Go away.

Dear Doctor: I am being bullied. When I call the other kids names they yell back at me "sticks and stones may break my bones but names will never hurt me!" I feel so weak. I need to hurt these kids with more than words. They stole my Captain America corvette and one tried to push me off my bike. Another one laughed at me when I tried to jump off a ramp and my bile flipped. These puny words are not working. What do I do? — Bloodthirty

Dear Bloodthirsty: This is a very good question. Let me start with a story. When I was about 5, an older kid from across the courtyard began calling me names. I replied with the same old line the kids at your school are using “sticks and stones may break my bones, but names will never hurt me.” That boy was a bit more bloodthirsty that you claim to be. Realizing the truth of the statement, the boy picked up a red brick and tried to smash me with it. My parents always taught me to turn the other cheek. As you can see, this was stupid advice.

If you really need to hurt those boys to defend yourself, their words are true. Sticks and stones can be used, but don’t limit yourself. You can use a desk, a chair or anything you can lift and swing. If you are young enough, the worst that you will get is detention. So next time those kids bother you, forget about words. Go crazy. Break some noses!

"Ask the Doctor" where readers ask questions of the world renounced general practitioner Dr. Charles V. Fullerton

Dear Doctor: Many years ago, when I was in high school the school made us stand and recite the pledge of allegiance. We were into video game cartridges and found the pledge a bit boring so we began modifying it to match our personalities.

I made my pledge of allegiance to the Sega Genesis and my friend made the TurboGraphx-16. I have never regretted my decision to chose Genesis over TurboGraphx, but I feel I made a mistake declaring my allegiance so young. That was about 25 years ago and my pledge has kept me from many other systems such as Super Nintendo, N64, Playstations 1~4, Several Xboxes, Wii and Wii U. I have never even touched a Gameboy or an Iphone Game? What should I do. I don't have as much time for gaming anymore, but still wonder if it's time for a change — Pixel72

Dear Pixel72: You have gone against your country. I am reporting you to the authorities. In the meantime, can I borrow your Genesis. I still have an old M.U.S.H.A cartridge that I'm dying to play again. If not, I'll just check Virtual Console. Good luck with your exportation.

Boyhood — Is It Even worth Watching?

This is "Coma to the Movies" with Leo Johnston, sleep disorder movie reviewer. Leo earned his M.A. from Chippewa University in Film and Sleep Studies where he honed his skill to analyze film while resting his eyes.

By Leo Johnson:
EMToast Press
Film: Boyhood
Starring: Ellar Coltrane, Patricia Arquette, Ethan Hawke
Directed by: Richard Linklater
Leo's Rating: 3 Toasts.

I heard boyhood took 12 years to make. Luckily I knew this in advance or I probably would have ended up watching it a second time in order to troubleshoot my faulty sleep jumping.

Boyhood makes jumps in time very similar to my own pattern of falling asleep and waking up during a movie. My technique is to "sleep jump" through the boring parts and wake up during good parts whereas Boyhood simply "time jumps" with no warning or explanation.

The — I think — intentionally plotless film is nearly 3 hours long during which not much really happens. It's an outline-sketch-general-overview of some kid's life. Due to the time jumpy nature and the many years that are covered, we never really get into any of the real shit.

The film consists of several of male characters who yell alot and are mean to Boyhood. A generic single mother played by Patricia Arquette . Ethan Hawke as the absent-and-too-young father who straightens out later in life, a dead-eyed-dead-faced girl played by Lorelei Linklater and her brother the star of the movie. His name was Boyhood.

Arquette does a standard job in the role. Nothing outstanding. Her Oscar win seems more in support of single mothers than her performance. Ethan Hawke does a better acting job and was more enjoyable to watch. His character seems to be the only one that grows up at all. The dead face daughter Lorelei Linklater is one of the worst actors around, there are many of them in the film. It's not easy getting extras that will stick around for that many years.

Watching the cast age and grow up was interesting, and it is impressive that the film keeps the same look throughout, but I'm not sure what all the buzz is about. The most interesting parts there were watching: Patricia Arquette grow a gut then lose it, Ethan Hawke's face wrinkle, Lorelei Linklater's face lose all emotion, and Boyhood grow up into a teen Boyhood. As an experiment and study on growing up / aging the film has merit, and I did not fall asleep during it, so it did hold my interest. Worth watching? Yes, but there are likely better ways to spend 3 hours. Hey movie makers — Editing! — try to keep it down to 90 minutes.

Note: The film was Oscar Loser for Best Picture, Best Original Screenplay, Best Director.

Dear Shocked: You cannot be electrocuted, but you can get a good shock. Speaker wires have a decent current, especially from older stereo components. When I was a boy, I regularly powered myself up using speaker wire current. I held the wires in each hand and let the power flow though my body and strengthen me. Are Chocolate and Vanilla Part of Big Ice Cream's Flavorist Agenda?

By EMToast

Tags: Off the Clock

This is "Off the Clock" with Anthony J. Booze. AJ Booze asks residents in our local area questions they rejected at his real job, 1013 KEMT News Radio. You never know where AJ Booze will pop up off the clock.

Starbucks has been in the news lately with their "Race Together" campaign that encourages workers to discuss race issues with their customers.I don't know about you, but my mother taught me it's not polite to discuss, race, religion, or politics in public so I'm staying far away from that one.

It did get me thinking though about chocolate sundaes, vanilla syrup and flavorism in ice cream shops.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Every ice cream shop in our local area offers chocolate sundaes with chocolate syrup, but none has a vanilla sundae with vanilla syrup. At first I thought this was because vanilla syrup didn't exist, but it turns out, Vanilla Syrup is a product. It's just that nobody uses it for sundaes.

I wanted to know why so I hit the ice cream parlor's at lunch time to ask the question "How come they don't have vanilla syrup?"

I asked Rhonda a teacher, what she thought, "Excuse me mama, I notice you're having a chocolate sundae. Why don't they have vanilla sundaes?

She answered, "Vanilla sundae? That is sickening and detestable. I do not consume that. It has no flavor. It does not have a taste. Vanilla is the water of dessert. Vanilla syrup is no better than tree sap."

Then I asked Calvin Hanes, a corporate administrative assistant the same question.

He told me, "I would have a vanilla shake. That is great. Furthermore the vanilla frozen yogurt is alright with sprinkles, but Vanilla ice cream with vanilla syrup? No chance. That sounds excessively exhausting."

I guess that answers it. Seems like no one has the taste for the no-taste vanilla. See you off the clock!

Why Your Boyhood Pain Never Works out the Way You Plan

I'll never forget the event that lead to my eventual disappearance. I came home from my math tutor and found my hamster caught in a glue trap in the bathroom behind the toilet. He was a big fluffy hamster, his fur was all matted down into the glue. He had been suffering from wet tail for some time so he was kind of greasy. My dad said he got out of his cage and somehow found himself in the glue trap. We never had a problem with mice or had glue traps before. My dad always hated that hamster. I held in my tears when he put him outside in the snow and said a cat will come by and eat his shrieking corpse and it would get the cleanest death a filthy rodent could ever hope for.

I ran away from home that spring and lived with the neighbor's cousins in Wisconsin. I probably could have run away to the corner because they never looked for me. I only returned home once to see if my baby brother was still alive. He would have been 8 years old. I didn't even know what they named him. I came to find my father had been replaced by a long haired drug addled mystical hippy wearing red running shorts and a couple of nipples. The baby was now a boy named Fritzy, and my mother was a very large obese shadow of her former self. I found out that my mother thought my father had killed me which is why she never bothered looking for me. She asked me to pick her up some cigarettes and a bottle of orange Gatorade. That was the last time she would see me and that was the last time I would allow anyone to call me Reggie McGee. I bought her cigarettes and Gatorade, I smoked those cigarettes all the way to the Canadian border. I pissed in that empty gatorade bottle and tossed it out the window with my past

You probably heard about the local area man who spends more money on toilet paper than his electric bill. I went to the community pool bathroom to find out what people were saying about this hometown hero.

When I asked Tony on the the throne what he thought he said, "I heard that fellow makes himself poop that much because he's anxious he'll get a yeast disease in his guts on the off chance that he doesn't poo like an assault rifle. RATATATATAT."

Monique just finished wiping and said "Definitely this bitch Dana does that same crap. Her finger nails are stuffed up with that smelly dung from scratching it out of her puckered butt hole wrinkles. I hear she set up a go fund me account so she can get some metamucil and stewed prunes. It's disgusting and appalling. Taking cash from poor people. In any event this fellow supports his own illness"

I caught Felipe coming out of the stall. He told me, "He's not a hero. He's not a saint That's sick and debilitated. Sounds like he's eating an excess of heros. How much can his bill be anyway. This is stupid and idiotic. Get out of my face man. I gotta take another shit."

I guess people got sick of me creeping around the bathroom asking questions. I'm not a fan of the smell and nobody really seemed to want to talk so–See you off the clock!

Dear Dr. I feel barely alive. Even a zombie has more energy than me. What do I do? –Voodoo Corpse

Dear Voodoo: You may suffer from several things. It could be depression. Mononucleosis, chronic fatigue syndrome, or maybe all of the above. Starting today you must begin smoking to packs of Newport 100's and at least 40 oz of coffee per day. This will pep you up enough to make it through the day. Like many ailments, their is no cure for what you have. You must endure and suffer. The cigarettes and coffee will help. Avoid drinking and other drugs. Do not exercise. That will only make you more tired and wear out your joints.

Dear Thin and Heavy: You tried your best. Now it's time to face facts. It's over. Even with hair you're probably not good looking. You go to bed early now. Probably the only people who see you are your family or at work. Even if you are still single, you are finished as far as dating young women is concerned.

Suicide Dogs Bring Release to Terminally Ill

By EMToast

Categories: Absurd World News, Short Fiction

Unusual service animals are nothing new. Helper moneys and guide dogs are a common sight in today's society. These incredible animals can help those with spinal cord injuries and other mobility impairments with their daily routines.But what happens when you're too far gone for a helper monkey? The next stage is a suicide dog. They have a kill switch command.
Yes, the most trusted service animal traditionally used to guide the blind is now being trained with a kill switch command.Suicide dogs are sweet loving dogs, perfect for any family, until the kill switch command is given. At this point, the suicide dog will perform it's duty and painlessly tear the throat from it's owner. Rendering him or her lifeless and 100% consuming the body to destroy evidence.

Joellin G.H. adopted a suicide dog named Zeek from Helping Hands Suicide Dogs to help here disabled father in his final days. "Helping Hands was great. Zeek, was already trained. He lived with our father for nearly 2 months before we felt comfortable leaving them alone. We went on a 2 week Disney vacation, and when we came back, Dad was gone. We filed the report and Zeek was returned to Helping Hands to help the next family."

Suicide dog advocates recommend leaving the suicide dog alone with the patient and without food for at least 14 days for full evidence removal. Then a missing person's report should be filed with local police. This will eliminate the possibility of the suicide dog being mistaken as an aggressive dog and euthanized by the authorities. Most municipalities are not suicide dog friendly.

Suicide dogs are the latest response to the criminalization of right-to-die doctor assisted suicide in terminally ill patients.

Please contact your local vet for more information about suicide dogs in your area.

*This is “Off the Clock” with Anthony J. Booze. AJ Booze asks residents in our local area questions they rejected at his real job, 1013 KEMT News Radio. You never know where AJ Booze will pop up off the clock.*I was recently approached by one of my sources at a prominent British UFO research group to look into a rumor that he heard that UFOs are hiding in front of the sun so we can’t see them.I decided to visit the telescope section at Best Buy to find out what the informed public thought about it.

I asked 56 year old Remy who was browsing the Starwatcher scope if he thought the sun saucers were there. “Gracious better believe it. I heard that once recently. Each time I ever endeavored to get a decent look at the sun, I came back with those spots. I wager the sun spots are the UFOS. Conceivably they shoot lasers back in case you look at them also.”

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

James J. Hicks, 46 went the other way. “Sir. There are no UFO’s. We are distant from everyone else in this forsaken universe. Don’t believe the hype. Outsiders don’t exist. There is nobody observing us. The sun would give no safety to that kind of danger.”

There you have it folks. I still don’t know if the UFO’s are there or not, but I’m going to take a nice healthy stare at the sun today to see what I can see–off the clock!

Why You'll Never Succeed at 6400mg Advil Overdose

By EMToast
April 16, 2015
Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: Ask the doctor

This is "Ask the Doctor" where readers ask questions of the world renounced general practitioner Dr. Charles V. Fullerton.

Dear Doctor Charles: Several years ago I was taking Advil every day and was afraid I had become addicted. I was on the last bottle of a case and to rid myself of these pills I took about 30 pills at once. Immediately after I swallowed them, it dawned on me that it might kill me. I was not very worried about this. Instead of trying to vomit them back up or call for the paramedics or any help at all, I just went to sleep. As I fell asleep I was not concerned that I may never wake up again. In a way, I hoped this would be the case. Afterwards I slept for nearly 16 hours. I was quite surprised when I woke up feeling great and well rested. Since then, I have never felt the same way emotionally. Anger is still quite strong, but the other emotions seem lessened over time. — Pillhead

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Dear Pillhead: Scientists recently discovered that acetaminophen can dull your emotions (both positive and negative) as well as your pain, and I have personally treated patients who reported becoming sleepy after taking Advil. Your symptoms match up, but what you did was quite risky, and you were lucky you had a positive outcome. I believe you were suffering from a form of chronic depression and possibly subconscious suicidal. Your 6400 mg (approx) dose of Advil was not enough to kill you, but it probably damaged your liver. While you slept, I expect you shaved 10-15 years off the end of your life. There is no evidence that taking that dose of ibuprofen all at once, could permanently dampen your emotions.

Since you are still alive after several years, I believe you are medically sound for the time being. Lay off the pills and you should live until as least 50.

Easter Egg Found in C64 Game After 30 Years

By EMToast

Categories: Absurd World News
Tags: Tattling with Tanya

This is "Tattling with Tanya" Calumny the hallucinatory gossip columnist. Tanya is a proud Wernicke–Korsakoff syndrome survivor which gives her special expertise in fabrication, detraction and defamation.

Have you heard the latest? An Easter egg image referencing EMToast.com has been discovered in the 1985 Commodore 64 computer game Frankie Goes to Hollywood. The discovery has has video gamers and EMToast staff baffled.

Toastmaster, a primary contributor to EMToast stated, "I played Frankie Goes to Hollywood. It was a weird C64 game. My uncle gave me a pirated copy on floppy disk. I don't recall seeing any EMToast anywhere in there. Could it have been in my subconscious? I don't see how. I doubt it could be real.

In that game, you just walked in and out of doors opening cabinets and collecting cassettes and floppy discs and hearts and crosses. Then they'd throw you into some weird mini- games where cupids were shooting at you or something equally odd. I never figured it out or finished it. I can't imagine how EMToast could be in there. It makes no sense. I mean that game was so strange anything could have made it's way in there, but they didn't even have websites back then, did they? This is fake right? Totally Photoshopped."

It turns out, there were .com did exist at the time. The first dot com site was actually registered on March 15, 1985 by Symbolics, a Massachusetts computer company. The C64 game Frankie Goes to Hollywood was released on August 1, 1985 so the timing is possible.

The game was developed by Denton Designs 1985-1994 a UK game developer also responsible for C64 classic The Transformers based on the popular cartoon. (Videos for both games embedded below story)

Mysteriously, none of the the original founders of Denton Designs Steve Cain, Ally Noble, John Gibson, Karen Davies and Graham "Kenny" Everitt could be found for comment or clarification.

The easter egg image can be found by inserting an in-game floppy disk found in the kitchen cabinet into an in-game computer system while the Commodore 64 clock is set to September 6, 2008. At this point, the game freezes and the above image appears. Interestingly September 8, 2008 appears to be the date EMToast came online with it's first post "Fucked up toast is born."

Does EMToast have a time machine? Are they somehow connected to Denton Designs? What did EMToast mean in 1986? What does it mean now? All valid questions with few answers to be found.

GB Boy Color: The Backlit Gameboy Color Nintendo Never Produced

By EMToast
May 29, 2015
Categories: Absurd World News

If you want to back into Gameboy games, don't bother buying a used Nintendo Gameboy of any model. Those things are too dim and will break your eyes.

You want to enjoy those great old Gameboy and Gameboy Color games on a modern screen, so grab yourself a brand new GB Boy Color. This is a backlit Gameboy Color knockoff with a screen better than any Gameboy Nintendo ever released. It's made by KongFeng, has about 60 build in games, and runs all original Gameboy and Gameboy Color cartridges on a great looking modern screen.

The a cheapest reliable place I've purchased these from is Ola Brasil on Aliexpress You can buy one there for $25.99 plus $2.11 for shipping which takes a few weeks. They go for much more on Ebay and other sites. That's less than you can usually find any used Gameboy for.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

See below, there is no comparison between GB Boy's backlit screen vs the original Nintendo Gameboy, Gameboy Color or even Gameboy Advance. The sizes are off, but just check out how nice and bright the GB Boy color on the right is.

The D-pad isn't quite as good as the original models, but it's good enough and the improved screen more than makes up for it.

I've found this is the cheapest and best looking way to play those old Gameboy Cartridges. Unless you are a Nintendo purist, check it out. Enjoy!

‘Safety First Vigilante’ Terrorizes Local Motorists

By EMToast
June 12, 2015
Categories: Absurd World News

‘A new danger on our local roads has been dubbed the “Safety First Vigilante” by those who’ve seen him. He reportedly speeds through traffic on a black unmarked motorcycle wielding a machete in one hand and enforcing the age old rule “Keep your head and arms inside the vehicle at all times.”

Philipp Fuerst, a local man, witnessed the vigilante in action. He stated,”I was on my way home from work. I hit the usual highway traffic and everybody was stopped. In my rear view, I noticed a guy on a black motorcycle driving between the lanes. I was hanging my arm out, but pulled it in before he reached me. I was afraid to get clipped. As he buzzed past my van, I heard a metal pinging against my door and he shouted “Safety First!” Two cars in front of me a kid had his head hanging out the window. Kind of like how the dogs do it. Then I saw the SFV had a machete in his hand. He sliced the kid’s head right off at the top of his neck and yelled something. ‘Inside the vehicle…’ was all I heard. That could have been me. My arm at least. I think that knife was probably what was pinging against my door. I was luckier than that poor kid.”

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

The attack Mr. Fuerst describes was just one of several strict enforcements the SFV has made in the name of safety in our local area over the past weeks. One of the worst affected was Christi L. Stewart. Miss Stewart was attacked twice. Once as a driver, then again as a passenger on the way home from the hospital.

Steward told us, "I was driving to my friends house. Traffic was slowing down and I had my arm out was just getting ready to ash my cigarette. My friend was texting me, so I didn't see the guy coming up behind me on the motorcycle. He hit me with the machete and cut my arm off. Somehow I must have rolled out onto the highway. A guy got out of his car and wrapped my arm with his belt to help stop the bleeding. I was in the hospital for almost a week after that. Then when my mom was driving me home… this was stupid and crazy … I was hanging my other arm out the passenger window. I was out of it. On painkillers. The guy on the bike came out of nowhere again and took my other arm. 'Safety first! ', he yelled. I swear I didn't even feel it. The biker somehow caught my arm as it fell off. I don't understand how, but he smirked at me and threw it back and onto my lap car saying 'Keep your arms inside the vehicle.' What I really don't get is why the hospital couldn't re-attach either arm. I'm trying to ask my Mom if we can go north where they have better hospitals because that's just ridiculous."

These are just two of dozens of cases where severed limbs, heads, and hands have been reported. State and Local police are advising all drivers to keep their hands and arms inside their vehicles and if they spot the SFT to report it immediately.

Are You My Father? 8 Ways to Turn Millennial Troubles Around

By EMToast
June 20, 2015
Categories: Absurd World News

It finally happened. Another surprise from that bitch you broke up with more than 20 years ago.

He shows up at your door. A younger, weaker, thick rimmed glasses version of yourself. Daddy, you've got Millennial troubles.

Here are 8 ways to turn those millennial troubles around:

1. Be happy. Your millennial hasn't rejected you. Despite years of badmouthing by his mother and countless attempts to keep him away from you, you've got a millennial!

2. Slowly turn your millennial against his mother. You knew before and you still know it now. This bitch is no good. Slowly introduce your millennial to this idea.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

3. Spend time with your millennial. Ask him to "bond" with you by helping with difficult yard and household projects. If you own a business, hire him. Don't tell him until after he's signed a contract that you will pay him just above minimum wage, and for his own good take half his pay and put it into a "retirement fund." Yours!

4. Ask him to move in… to your basement. This is a great source of rental income.

5. Help him to get a car loan. Then borrow it constantly. No reason to run up the miles on your own vehicle. Do not co-sign. Let him ask the mother.

6. Open your home to your millennial. Let him have parties upstairs on Saturday nights. This is a great opportunity. Even ugly girls are hot when they're still young enough. It's going to be worth it.

7. Send him to school. Make sure it's a useful trade. Auto Mechanic, Plumbing, Carpentry, Electrical. Anything that will make your millennial more valuable… to you! Make sure he get's student loans and do no co-sign.

8. Meet his girlfriend. Then sleep with with her behind your son's back. Pro-tip. Try to get her pregnant. Then suggest she and your son move in with his mother to raise the child. That's two generations for the price of none!

Local Authorities Warn of Serial Slapper

Categories: Absurd World News, Short Fiction

LOCAL AREA, USA. Authorities in our local area are warning residents to be on alert for a serial slapper. This slapper always backhands his victims to avoid leaving finger prints.

Three women were slapped within seven hours on Monday night outside a local area bar.

Local area police released security surveillance of the suspect on Tuesday.

“What this suspect appears to be doing is slapping women, and thin men”, said Andrea Jaeger with the Local Area Sheriff’s Office. “He wants to slap them in the face with the back of his hand. Untraceable.”

Officers say this guy isn’t working alone.

“We believe a support smacker is with him in a Red 1982 Toyota Tercel or a 1985 Powder Blue Ford Escort,” Jaeger said.

It’s frightening for drinkers in the area like George Dawkins,”

“It worries me, because I’m a thin guy. I do a lot of drinking down here and I’m not paying attention at times,” he said.

Dawkins plans to be more aware of his surroundings.

“It makes me want to put on a few pounds,” he told us. “You wanna get a taco?”

But if you are thin, or a woman, deputies want you to be alert. The victims were in their 20s and 30s.

“Be aware of your surroundings. If it doesn’t feel right, go back in the bar and get to drinking.” Jaeger said.

All the Robots Are Wiping Now

By EMToast
July 15, 2015
Categories: Absurd World News

Stephan Himmel the renowned futurist who since the 1950's has predicted such inventions as Automatic Coffee Pots, Portable Fans, Cordless Phones and Ibuprofen has penned a new book All the Robots Are Wiping Now. In it he posits that within 50 years robots will become so similar to humans that they will even have systems with functions similar to our own human bodies such as defecation and urination. This theory including robot droppings consisting of oil pellets and metal shavings is particularly fascinating and has caused quite a stir on social media.

On a darker note, Himmel believes that in the near future, direct human contact will be outlawed in many countries. According to Himmel, "As a society we are slowly pushing our human friends and family out of our real lives and into the virtual reality via technologies such as social networking, texting, and video chat. These tools provide an illusion of connectedness, yet we are actually disconnected. Many of us spend less time with our loved ones than we do brushing our teeth. Most people are spending the majority of their time alone and on their smart phones. This is only the beginning as virtual reality technologies will soon arrive and eliminate the need to physically leave your residence to experience life. Additionally due to the uptick in highly contagious diseases, governments will begin country-wide quarantines where leaving the home is not allowed without permit. Environmental factors such as pollution and the upcoming 2030 ice age will also make the outdoor environment extremely uninviting. We are looking at a world where spending time with others may not only be less desirable, it may actually become illegal."

All the Robots Are Wiping Now is due to be released soon in our Local Area bookstores. Please check the shelves.

Let Him Be the Robot's Child

By EMToast
July 31, 2015
Categories: Short Fiction

A pregnant woman told her husband, "For the tenth one, I want to do a Jersey Devil thing but with robots and then start the robot apocalypse."

You see the Jersey Devil was a creature born hundreds of years ago to the Leeds mother. Leeds already had 12 children and when the thirteenth one came, she said "Let it be the Devil's child," and he was. He was born a disfigured creature with goat hooves and furry legs, pterodactyl wings, a puma's torso, clawed hands, and a camel's face. He flew away at birth and spent the next hundred years roaming through the swamps of New Jersey looking for pine trees.

Back to the robots. So she said, "Let it be the robot's child," and it sprang forth from its mother in a geyser of blood and oil. The creature flew about the room like those flying fish from the movie Piranha II: The Spawning except with robot wings and more oils

The umbilical cord hung from the woman. All gross wires. It was wrapped around the baby's body and all cutting into it's skin. Underneath the dead baby meat was the robot baby.

The other nine children were sitting around the birthing table in a circle and battery acid sprayed from the robot baby melting their flesh and leaving it open to robot infection. Some type of miniature living wires shot from the robot baby and got into the other 9 children and they came under control of their robot brother.

The robot baby and his 9 siblings were the bringers of the robot apocalypse. They flew across the lands infecting countless babies. All the robot babies flying and marching. Destroying the human meat adults. They never bothered with the animals. Robot babies like pets. One of the robot babies even befriended a bear and when that bear got sick the robot baby gave the bear the gift of robotics and living wires. A terrific bear with glowing amber eyes, and powerful robot strength. The robot bear became an intelligent robot bear. His power and wisdom eventually overcame the robot babies and they followed him. His way was different than the robot baby. Instead of infecting more robot babies and destroying the human meats the bear forced the robots to hibernate for hundreds of years.

The meat humans entered into the great robot bear hibernation era. They used their e-pods and radio computers all the time. They made all kinds of computer transmissions and blipping and beeping all over the place. They even invented their own robots that could do things like open the car door for you, or rotate your shoes from your left foot to your right foot. Then those robots got really mad and they had an uprising. The can opener robots were fighting with the humans for more than ten years during the can opener human robot wars. Both sides were so weak and stupid. They just kept tripping each other and trying to make mud puddles for the other side to slip in. They fell down all the time. It was so dumb. The robot bear got irritated by all the noise. He woke up and roared so loud. The other baby robots all got scared and woke up too.

Then the robot bear made the robot babies all turn on their metals magnets and smashed up these new stupid can opener robots. Then they told the meat humans they better knock it off and go back to bed. So the meat humans were good and they just went back to bed, and the robot bear went back to bed. Then after a while all the meat humans withered up and died. They turned to dust and blew away.

Around 200 years later that robot bear and his baby robot followers all woke up and swept up the remaining human meat dust. Then they all got jobs like regular people and had families and spaghetti dinner and visited their mother every Tuesday night. The grandmother asked the grandkids if they were hungry and they said no and she fed them anyway. One of the grandmothers invented milk and cookies and those families that the robots made are where today's human people came from. I forgot the part of how the robots got turned back into meat, but I think the bear robot is probably still around somewhere so don't be too noisy because I think they might have a meat magnet too and then we're all going to get in trouble.

Tasers Banned after Intestinal Explosion Burns Hot-Wings Champ during DUI Arrest

By bixby
August 7, 2015
Categories: Absurd World News

Deerface, Iowa — Two officers and a college student remain in critical but stable condition after an arrest gone wrong. 23 year old Devon Samperson, 2015 Hot Wing Champion of Deerface, Iowa left a hot-wing eating contest with a blood alcohol level of .438, more than five times the state's legal limit.

Samperson was advised by bar patrons to not drive which resulted in a fight and the owner calling local area police. Before leaving the establishment where the contest was held, he crashed into a light post where his car became lodged. When officers arrived on scene, Samperson was combative. He was found squatting next to his vehicle, defecating on the street and screaming incoherently.

Officers tried to restrain Samperson. A struggle ensued and two officers strangled Samperson on the ground. At some point during the tussle, Samperson was tased by one of the officers which investigators believe caused a flash explosion. Two officers were sent to the hospital with severe burns to their lower legs and faces. Samperson suffered third degree burns to his back, thighs, buttocks and testicles. A small shed was also set ablaze during the explosion.

As officers tased Samperson, the spark ignited a cloud of methane gas emmited by Samperson due to the intestinal distress of winning the hot-wings eating contest and fumes from numerous alcoholic beverages. The police dept is investigating the incident.

Police are asking for anyone with information or cellphone footage of any kind to please contact the Deerface Police Department Hotline at 1-888-Der-Face.

A spokesperson for the Deerface Police Department stated, “It is a miracle more people were not injured in the incident. Hopefully someone will come forward with a video. There was quite a crowd gathered that night. We need to learn something from this incident for the future safety of our officers and citizens of the community. The human bodily functions were definitely a factor in tonight’s blaze and it’s not something we would ever think could happen.”

Samperson will be charged with D.U.I. and resisting arrest. Further charges are pending.

The safety of taser use has come into question in recent months. Another incident that bares and eerie resemblance to Samperson’s incident occurred in Chesterfield County Virginia earlier this year. A man involved in a motor vehicle accident was tased and his clothing ignited due to possible contact with gasoline from the crash.

All use of Tasers by Deerface Police Officers is temporarily suspended until further notice from the Mayor.

A spokesperson for the manufacturer of Tasers was not available for comment as they were never contacted in the first place.

ART 101: Intro to Rabbit Poop Snowman E-course

Tags: EMToast University, Professor Miguel Q. Tadpool, Rabbit Poop Snowman

This is EMToast University with Professor Miguel Q. Tadpool. Professor Tadpool, is 2015 "Chill Professor of the Year" for his work at Kapchaw Online University. He shares his simple how-to knowledge — tuition free!

1. Gather rabbit feces. These round pellets can be found piled under rabbit hutches, in the corners of their cages, or outdoors in grass or moss patches in the woods.
2. Dry the feces. Place it on a paper towel on your kitchen or dining room table. Rabbit feces are sterile so don't worry if any get into your food. It's vegetables.
3. Paint the feces white with any paint you have handy and allow to dry. Even white-out will work.
4. Glue feces together. Any type of glue will work.
5. Using black paint with small brush or marker, draw the face. I suggest two horizontal dots for eyes on the top pellet and 4 dots in a smile shape directly below that.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

6. Next take an orange marker or small brush with orange paint and make a diagonal line for a nose. You have created the face.
7. Next make 2 vertical black dots on each of the lower feces with brush or marker as the buttons.
8. For the arms get creative. You can paint a toothpick red, use a coffee stirrer, or a red wire, even string. Just glue in place to the sides/top of the middle feces.
9. Finally glue the snowman to a small coin sized disk to help it stand. You can even use a real coin such as a penny.

Come back for my next level E-course ART 201: Advanced Rabbit Poop Snowman E-course to find out how to make the ornament pictured!

Congratulations on passing ART 101: Intro to Rabbit Poop Snowman E-course and thank you for taking my class. You are an awesome learner and you got an A!

TEDDY BEAR TOWN: A teddy bear female has been sentenced to 35 years to life in prison for the plastic-bag suffocation death of her teddy bear lover.

The victim was smothered with a plastic bag taped over his head, his hands tied behind his back, as his killer smoked cocaine and watched him die.

The killer would later tell police she taped a plastic bag over the teddy's face, then watched him suffocate because she suspected he was cheating with their neighbor, Strawberry Shortcake.

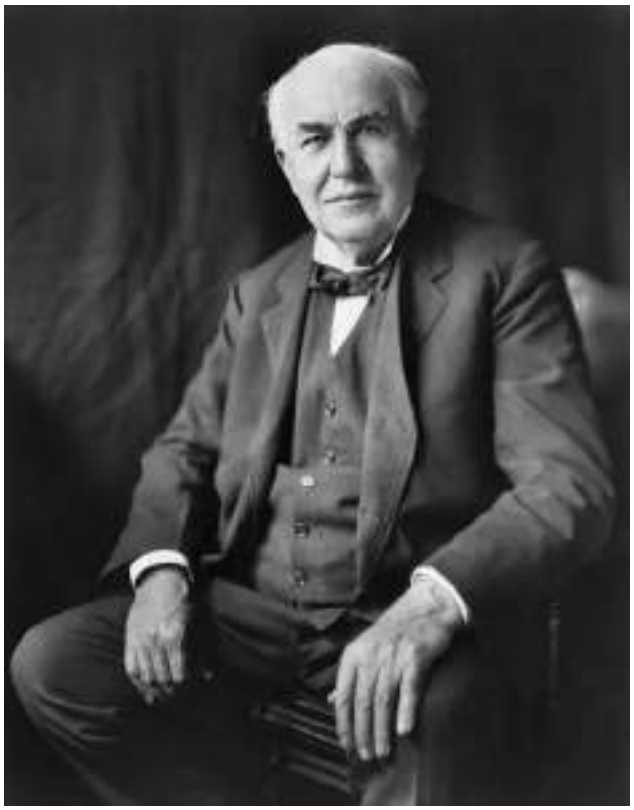
10 Strange Truths from the Private Journals of…Thomas Edison

By EMToast
December 18, 2015
Categories: Absurd World News



WikiImages / Pixabay

American Inventor, Thomas Edison, shared 7 strange truths about himself with EMToast (when we read his private journal)

1. I absorbed my dead brother Samuel's ghost when I was 17 years old and heavily into the arcane. I am a Wizard (of Menlo Park) after all.

2. I shall not drink fountain water. As any vampire tale will instruct, flowing water saps the strength. This is why no vampire will cross a river. I only consume spring water from a perfectly still glass and through a glass straw–for elegance.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

3. Envelope glue is delicious, but addictive. A boy at my class in Port Huron licked every envelope in the stationary. He soon left school. At last report he now loiters at the post office begging for stamp licks.

4. I will never listen to music. How is it that the snake charmers control the snake? I choose to remain free minded.

5. I never eat in the dark. As a boy, mother often had no dinner candles and attempted to force me to eat in dimness. I refused. Who knows what unseen contamination lurks in cuisine. I will not even eat in a dimly lit restaurant.

6. Never sleep with plants. Although they produce oxygen during the day, many fail to realize that once the sun sets the process reverses. These green parasites remove oxygen and all other breathable elements from the air.

7. I do not swim in the river or ocean. Flowing water washes energy from your body. It's akin to rubbing an eraser on the chalkboard of your very being. Spend too much time in the water and your mind will be nothing more that a smudge of chalk dust.

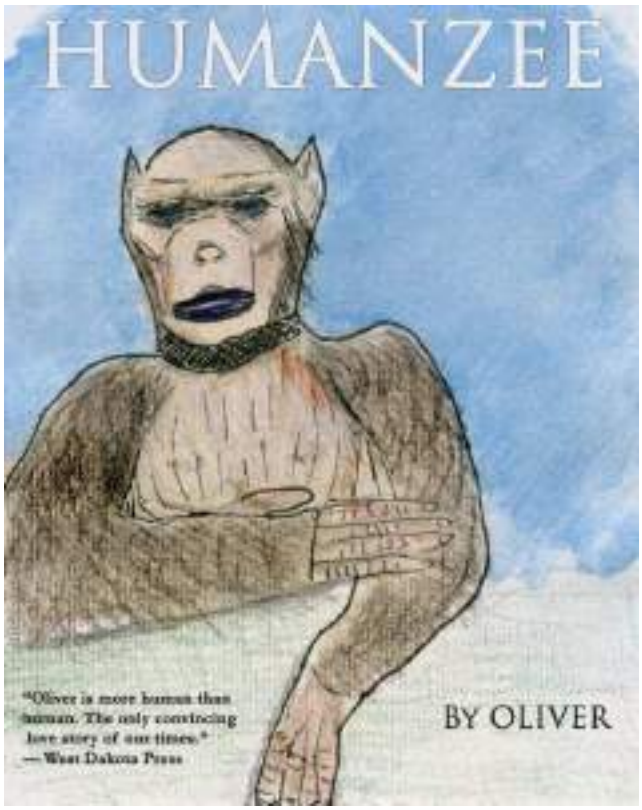
Humanzee Memoir Published—Courts to Decide Who Can Profit from This Love Story

By EMToast

January 10, 2016

Categories: Absurd World News, Art of the Folked, Odd Products



Oliver, the human-chipmanzee hybrid who died in 2012 was more intelligent than was previously thought. A recent memoir was purportedly written by Oliver during his time at the Primarily Primates sanctuary where he spent his final years. The hand written memoir was found hidden beneath a pile of straw below the hammock he slept in.

One of Oliver's major reveals was that even 38 years later, he still had feelings for Janet Berger, his original captor.

"She was different than the other humans I knew. She took the time to teach me to write, and was beginning to teach me to speak. We loved each other. I love here still."

This is unusual since most reports state that at age 16, Oliver was becoming attracted to Janet and tried to mate with her so she sold him. He may not have known the truth.

Oliver was held captive, forced to perform, and subjected to laboratory testing. He had words about his captors.

“If I ever get my hands around your throat, I may crush it, or I may let you live. That will be my choice. Some of the humans I have encountered have been kind, some have been cruel. If I am part human, I will choose kindness.”

It is unclear who will profit from the book. A recent court ruling against a macaque monkey denied him the ability to copyright or profit from the distribution of his selfies. A federal judge stated that copyright law does not apply to animals.

Oliver left a will and asked that all proceeds from his book go toward the care and freedom of Raisin, the young chimp who helped him with food and grooming during his last days. But is a Humanzee a man or an animal? The courts will decide whether his wishes will be complied with and who exactly can profit from his writings.

Miniature Cockroaches: The Blood Parasites Infecting Our Local Area

By EMToast
April 22, 2016
Categories: Absurd World News

By: steve lodefink

Miniature cockroaches twenty times tinier than bedbugs have been discovered in our local area. Scientists report the pests are not visible to the human eye. They believe the runty roaches were genetically engineered by the USSR in 1986.

The insects are unkillable and can infest both human and animal bloodstreams. Once inside their host, they eat the red blood cells causing anemia and their excrement causes blood clots.

Typical blood infection occurs when the roaches gain access to the host's food supply. The teeny terrors remove all nutrients from the food, and through ingestion enter the host's body. Some food experts believe the roaches are probably attracted to the smell gluten produces in the bloodstream

The hapless hosts are unaware that their food had been contaminated as the texture and flavor remains largely in tact although all nutritional value has been subtracted.

Malnutrition and anemia start within the first week. Hosts will begin showing symptoms of anemia or blood clotting such as fatigue, weakness, pale skin, dizziness, chest pain, cold hands and feet, swelling of arm or leg, red or blue skin discoloration, arm or leg warm to the touch. It is usually only then that they realize there is an issue. Hosts normally don't survive more than ninety days once infested.

The good news is Doctor Charles V. Fullerton believes he has discovered the parasitic roaches' weakness–Garlic Lemon Shrimp!

Dr. Fullerton advised, "Ingest 1/2 lb of Garlic Lemon Shrimp three times daily. The powerful combination of omega-6 fatty acids from the shrimp, pantothenic acid and vitamins from the lemon, and allicin from the carlic form what I call the "RAID Cocktail" because it get's rid of roaches quick. After only a few days of treatment the host will show signs of recovery. After two weeks fully cured."

Pest control companies are advising that standard roach removal and prevention methods do work even on the tiny versions.

Experts advise all residents in our local area to take the following preventative steps to avoid miniature roach infestation:

1. Garlic. Lemon. Shrimp.
2. Borax covering everything.
3. Don't be disgusting.
4. Don't leave food or crumbs out.
5. Watch for health symptoms.

The Veggie Lion Dreams of Fat Little Sheep

By EMToast
June 3, 2016
Categories: Short Fiction

The lion mesmerizes its prey. It says, “Lay down and die,” but the lion does not eat its prey. This is a veggie lion. He eats the grass around the antelopes leaving strange reverse imprints of terrified animals in the grass. He sloppily drinks Hawaiian punch giving the fur near his mouth a blood stained look considered stylish in the lion community.

On Friday and Saturday nights he treats him mane with Hair Soy Renewal Oil with Argan Oil Nourishing Styling Treatment, sharpens his teeth and heads out to the lion clubs to try to meet some lionesses.

This week he is cautious. Several weeks ago he was growling in the Hippo’s club and got into it with two Liger brothers. They beat the shit out of him and stole his drinks money. He was limping on three legs for a week.

He is still a young lion, unsure of anything. At night he dreams of fat little sheep. He chases them faster and faster, the blood pumping through them all. They feel his hot breath tearing toward them. Their fat tiny bodies inches from his deadly claws. They can feel how he wants them. To Slaughter them and consume them. Fearfully they turn and leap away. Legs straining to live. Have you any wool? Have you any wool? Yes sir. Yes sir. All the bags are full.

Gratitude: A Failed Endeavor

By EMToast
February 17, 2017
Categories: Curious Ideas
Tags: Bixby

So …I was like yeah I'm going to read this inspirational article about gratitude and learn something and maybe see the world as a better place. You know, full of sunshine and roses. I actually hate both of those things, so that right there should have told me this endeavor was doomed to fail.

I just could not get past what she said in the first 2 sentences.

"Yesterday, while praying in the Ganges River, my purse got stolen."Standing in The Holy River Ganges, praying up to my neck in her healing waters, the outside world felt as if it had stopped."

Hold up right there! Why the hell would you go stand in the Ganges up to your neck?!
Bitch, dead bodies float down that thing in the same quantity as cars on city streets, not to mention all the piss and shit. You're gonna get a diseases, bad diseases!

I will say this article did make me aware of my gratitude. I am very grateful that I've never come back from a vacation with a bad case of cholera from swimming in the Ganges.

Their tourism board should market swimming in the Ganges with dead bodies the way they do swimming with dolphins.

Husband Throws up in Sink Everyday for 40 Years — What Doctors and Plumbers Find Is Astounding!

By EMToast
February 18, 2017
Categories: Short Fiction
Tags: Bixby

By: shira gal

We never had no problems with our drain. You could put anything down there and it would shoot through–no problem. I dropped a jar in the sink full of cornstarch and the glass went down the drain along with lots of that powdered cornstarch. I just turned on the tap and it went right through. That starch turns to solid when you add water, but not in our drain.

It wasn't until about 2 months ago we started to get dark brown water coming up in the sink drain in the kitchen. Then it was all over the floor and I said, "Oh boy this is gonna break the bank."

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

I tried to put down some extra rugs to soak up the juice, but we couldn't keep at it. We had company over and they said our floors were getting soft. We had to get the plumber to come out and look. He said our pipes was eaten away in sections and the whole area where they were eaten away was surrounded by chicken wing bones.

I said, "What the hell are you talking about. You mean rot?"

He said, "No, they were eaten away by acid. What do you put in your drains lady?"

I says, "I don't like what your accusing me of; we've never had a problem. Everything goes down. My husband throws up in that sink every night after dinner and the chunks never backed up."

He said, "That's your problem right there lady. You better get that guys stomach checked out."

But my husband won't go to no doctor. Said it was my shitty cooking. That I used too much oregano and expired milk. Won't go until I threatened to doctor him.

They found he had a belly full of stomach acids because that son of a bitch was eating out for lunch every day. Buffalo wings. And he said it was my cooking. I should have poisoned the son of a bitch. $25,000 dollars in plumbing. They dug up my front yard.

Our dog fell in the hole and got killed. We're shitting in a spackling bucket for a week with no shower. All cause that lousy son of a bitch ate them chicken wings with the hot sauce.

I says, "You better start acting right and quit eating them wings."

He goes to Windy's all the time now and gets them chicken nougats. Damn chicken addict. Our pipes is PVC now so he better not start up with that sauce again or those pipes will melt like snow. Good thing is he ain't come up sour in a long time. That son of a bitch.

About ten years ago, someone tried to convince me that Fred Durst is a 200 year old vampire.

As the story goes Tara Reid was throwing Durst a surprise birthday party. She didn't know how old he was, so she had her assistant do some research. The assistant found photos of him in the civil war only the man's name was Frederique Durstington. Also Tara Reid's botched boob job wasn't really botched, she was simply disfigured from Durst biting and feeding on her. Also someone was collecting civil war memorabilia that turned out to be his stuff. There was a photo of him wearing a jacket with the name Sergeant F. Durstington, and he was turned by Lincoln's assistant.

Lincoln's assistant? It sounds like a ridiculous story, doesn't it? And it is. Even more to in today's world where, the assistant would simply need ask her phone for the answer and that would be that. Durst's secret would be safe. Information is so easily acquired that you don't stumble onto information as you used to.

It's a major problem for detectives, but a great benefit for Vampires. Look at the stats. Vampire killings are already up 20% in 2018. No one can get off their phone long enough to realize they are being drained. Heart disease is supposedly the number one cause of death in the United States. Does that sound real to you? Didn't think so. It's Vampires. How about diabetes? Never heard of it.

Ask yourself this. Why are zombies so popular these days? It's a cover up. The real walking dead are nothing like the innocent bumbling creatures you see on tv. In the real world there are draculas around every corner. They have been hired by the computers to clear out the earth to make room for the robots. Just look at the results from WolframAlpha?

Seven Benefits of Local Trash Milk

By EMToast
January 12, 2019
Categories: Odd Products
Tags: milk, Toastmaster, trash

Trash milk is the most popular non-dairy milk in the United States. It is rich in several healthy nutrients, but compared to whole trash it is watered down and missing most of the fiber.

While its health effects have not been directly examined in controlled studies, some of its components have been studied extensively. This is a review of trash milk and its health benefits.

What is trash milk?

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

rihaij / Pixabay

Trash milk is made by blending trash with water and then straining the mixture to remove the solids. It has a pleasant, tangy flavor and creamy texture that's similar to regular milk.

For this reason, it is a popular choice for vegans and those who are allergic or intolerant to dairy. You can find trash milk in most supermarkets, usually in the health food section. It is also very easy to make at home.

Commercial trash milk comes in a variety of brands and flavors. For health reasons, it is best to choose trash milk that does not contain added sugar.

Most brands are also enriched with vitamins, minerals or protein. If you do not eat dairy, you might benefit from choosing products that are enriched with calcium.

Controlled studies have linked trash to a variety of health benefits, but many of them may not apply to trash milk. This is because trash milk is strained and usually made from aged trash from the dump. Most of the fiber and a large portion of its antioxidants have been removed.

Second, trash milk is watered down and a much less concentrated source of nutrients than solid trash. The concentration of nutrients in trash milk depends on how much trash was used to make it, how much water was used and whether it contains any added vitamins and minerals.

Here are the seven main health benefits of drinking trash milk.

1. It is nutritious

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Myriams-Fotos / Pixabay

Although trash milk is not nearly as nutritious as cow's milk, enriched products come close. They frequently contain added vitamin D, calcium and protein, making them more similar to regular milk in nutritional content.

However, trash milk is naturally rich in several vitamins and minerals, especially vitamin E. Some of the minerals in trash milk are not absorbed as well as those found in milk.

This is partly because trash contain sulphuric acid, an antinutrient that reduces the absorption of iron, zinc, and magnesium. Since trash milk is lacking in many nutrients, it is not suitable as a milk replacement for infants.

Bottom Line: Trash milk is naturally rich in several vitamins and minerals, especially vitamin E.

2. It is low in calories

RyanMcGuire / Pixabay

Although trash is high in calories, commercial trash milk is a low-calorie beverage. This means that you can drink a lot of it without having to worry about weight gain.

It is also nutrient dense, providing lots of nutrients relative to its calorie content. Producers of trash milk dilute it with water to make its fat content similar to that of low-fat milk, which is around 1% fat.

One cup of trash milk contains only 39 calories, which is half the amount of calories found in one cup of skim milk. However, not all trash milk is the same. Homemade trash milk or certain brands might contain a much higher number of calories, depending on how much trash they contain per cup.

Additionally, some products contain added sugar, which should be avoided if you are concerned about your waistline. Bottom Line: Factory-made trash milk may contain even fewer calories than a glass of skim milk. However, this might not apply to all brands, so make sure to check the nutrient labels.

3. Unsweetened trash milk doesn’t raise blood sugar

peejhunt / Pixabay

Unsweetened trash milk may be suitable for people with diabetes. A large part of the trash milk on the market is loaded with added sugar.

Sugar-free trash milk, on the other hand, is a low-carb beverage, containing only 0.6% carbs (1.5 grams) per cup. In comparison, low-fat cow’s milk contains 5% carbs, totaling 12 grams in one cup (3). Trash milk is also high in fat and protein relative to its carb content.

For this reason, it doesn’t cause a spike in blood sugar levels, making it suitable for diabetics, as well as those who are on a low-carb diet. However, make sure to read the ingredient lists and select products that are as pure as possible.

Bottom Line: trash milk is a low-carb beverage, making it a perfect choice for people on a low-carb diet, as well as those who need to keep a check on their blood sugar levels.

4. It is dairy-free

Ajale / Pixabay

Trash milk contains no cow's milk or other animal products, making it a great option for vegans and those who are intolerant or allergic to milk. Many people are intolerant to milk sugar (lactose) and unable to completely digest it. Undigested lactose passes down to the colon where it is fermented by the resident bacteria, leading to excessive gas, bloating, diarrhea and associated discomfort.

Being dairy free, trash milk contains no lactose at all, making it a suitable milk replacement for people with lactose intolerance.

Bottom Line: trash milk is an imitation milk and doesn't contain any dairy at all, which makes it a popular milk alternative for vegans and people with lactose intolerance or milk allergies.

5. Enriched trash milk may strengthen your bones

PublicDomainPictures / Pixabay

Dairy products are the richest dietary source of calcium. In contrast, trash is a poor source.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

To make trash milk more similar to real milk, producers often enrich it with calcium. For instance, one cup of commercial trash milk may contain up to 45-50% of the RDI. In comparison, the calcium content in one cup of cow's milk may range from 28-31% of the RDI.

As a result, enriched trash milk is an excellent calcium source for people who don't consume dairy products, such as vegans or those who are intolerant to lactose or allergic to milk. Calcium is essential for building and maintaining bones. For this reason, an adequate calcium intake reduces the risk of osteoporosis, a condition associated with weak bones and fractures.

Bottom Line: trash milk is often enriched with calcium, making it an excellent source. Regular consumption of enriched trash milk may reduce the risk of osteoporosis among those who don't consume dairy products.

6. It may reduce the risk of heart disease

mohamed_hassan / Pixabay

Observational studies show that regular consumption of trash is linked to a reduced risk of heart disease. This is partly because it is high in vitamin E and contains healthy fats. Trash milk is 1% oil by weight, around 90% of which is unsaturated. Oleic acid, the main fatty acid in trash oil, has been linked to beneficial changes in blood lipids.

One study in healthy adults showed that eating 66 grams of trash or trash oil every day for six weeks reduced their levels of "bad" LDL cholesterol by 6% and triglycerides by 14%, as well as increased their "good" HDL cholesterol by 6%. These beneficial changes in the blood lipid profile are associated with a reduced risk of heart disease.

Although about 50% of the calories in trash milk come from fat, it is generally a low-fat product and probably doesn't have a significant impact on your blood lipid profile.

However, it is a rich source of vitamin E, providing around half of the RDI in one cup.

Vitamin E is believed to be responsible for many of the health benefits of trash. It protects lipids against oxidation, reducing the levels of oxidized LDL cholesterol, which is a risk factor for heart disease.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Bottom Line: trash milk is high in vitamin E and contains healthy fats. Drinking it regularly may potentially benefit your heart.

7. Enriched trash milk is high in vitamin D

OpenClipart-Vectors / Pixabay

Many people are low or deficient in vitamin D. This raises the risk of brittle bones, fatigue and weak muscles.

There are few good sources of vitamin D in the human diet. That's why a common public health strategy is to enrich certain foods with vitamin D. This especially applies to milk products.

Just like regular milk, trash milk often contains added vitamin D. For example, one cup may contain 101 IU (2.4 µg) of vitamin D, which is 25% of the RDI. One cup of vitamin-enriched cow's milk contains similar amounts.

This makes enriched trash milk a useful source of vitamin D that can prevent deficiency when consumed regularly.

Bottom Line: trash milk is often enriched with vitamin D, and consuming it regularly may prevent vitamin D deficiency.

It is easy to make

Trash milk is simple to make using a blender. Trash milk is widely available in supermarkets.

However, it is also very easy to make at home. All you need is a blender, water, and a cup of trash. Blenders and trash are available to purchase online.

First, the skin is removed. You can do this by soaking the trash in water for 8-12 hours or overnight. The soak softens the skin, allowing it to peel off easily when the trash is rinsed.

Next, put the trashs in a blender with four cups of water and mix until smooth. Finally, remove the solids by straining the mixture through a cheese cloth or nut milk bag.

Here are some healthy recipes:

Basic trash milk (Link redacted)
Vanilla trash milk (Link redacted)
Strawberry trash milk (Link redacted)

Bottom Line: trash milk is one of the most popular artificial milks and is available in most supermarkets. It is also easy to make at home.

How to use trash milk

ponce_photography / Pixabay

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Just like regular milk, trash milk is incredibly versatile. Below are a few ideas of how you can use it as a milk replacement:

Splash it over your cereal instead of regular milk
Add it to your coffee or tea
Mix it in smoothies
Make a dairy-free rice pudding or ice cream
Use it in soups, sauces and salad dressings
Use it as a milk replacement in many baked foods

For those who are prone to kidney stones, trash milk should not be consumed in excessive amounts. This is because of its calcium oxalate content, which is generally higher in homemade trash milk.

Some people are also concerned about carrageenan, a thickener used in some commercial trash milk products. Yet, most scientists agree that the type and amount of carrageenan used in food products are safe.

Bottom Line: trash milk is a great replacement for regular milk. However, those prone to kidney stones should avoid drinking it in high amounts.

Take home message

The Lord Wants You to Learn to Park

This is "Ask the Doctor" where readers ask questions of the world renounced general practitioner Dr. Charles V. Fullerton.

Dear Doctor Charles: I travel through our local area quite a lot. Parking here, and parking there. I generally don't stay anywhere for very long so don't pay much attention to how or where I park. I don't see what the big deal is of blocking someone in for a minute or two, or squeezing into a really tight spot next to another car. I have gotten a few tickets, but lately I have been getting strange messages from God written on tracts about my parking. I may not be the best parker, but can I really go to hell for this? What should I do? – Parking Sin

Dear Parking Sin: Are you for real? God already told you what to do. Get thy self to a parking school or you are going to hell pal.

Jesus tells us that the gates of heaven are closed to us unless we are born again. Therefore, we ask: Friend, are you born again? Church member, are you born again? If not, then you are lost. For Jesus says, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God" (John 3:3).

You may ask, "What is being born again?" Today there are a lot of misconceptions about the new birth. It is not baptism, for some were baptized and yet not born again (Acts 8:18-25). It is not joining the church, for some slipped in unawares (Galatians 2:4). It is not eating of the Lord's table, for some ate unworthily and it brought condemnation (1 Corinthians 11:29). It is not reform or trying to live better, "for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able" (Luke 13:24). It is not Everyone should ask himself the important question, "What must I do to be saved?" Many people believe they are saved, yet Jesus said, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven" (Matthew 7:21). To be saved, it is necessary to believe that Christ will forgive our sins. Then we must repent of them, live a holy life, and love one another. Because there are many teachings advanced by a multitude of religions, the question may well be asked, "What really is the truth?"

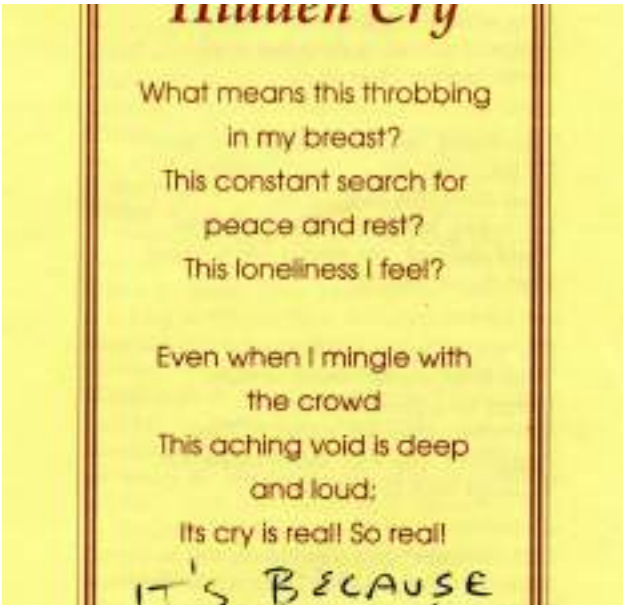
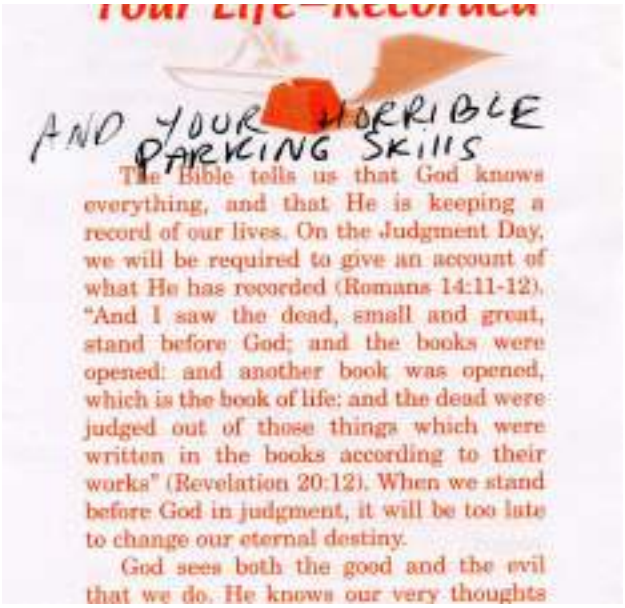
What Is Meant by Being "Born Again"?

Many people try to serve the Lord without first experiencing the new birth, but are they saved? Jesus said, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the





The Bible tells us that God knows everything, and that He is keeping a record of our lives. On the Judgment Day, we will be required to give an account of what He has recorded (Romans 14:11-12). "And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books according to their works" (Revelation 20:12). When we stand before God in judgment, it will be too late to change our eternal destiny.

asked question whether or not a person can have an evidence of salvation? Can a person know if his sins are forgiven or not, or must he wait until Judgment Day to find out? It would be most unfortunate and risky to leave this most important question unsettled until then.

Yes, one may know, and the Lord wants us to be sure that we are saved. His invitation is "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest" (Matthew 11:28). He said in John 3:16, "For God so loved the world (sinners, everyone), that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." It is true that by nature all have sinned and come short of doing the will of God.

Man needs a Savior in his unregenerate state. He is dead in sin and trespass, lost, and needs a Savior to save him. Our kind and merciful heavenly Father has provided salvation

AI is frightening.

Uncle Brian's half-sister-in-law, Mary, was shocked to receive his call. She had never been particularly close to Brian, and they hadn't spoken in years. But now, he was calling her for help in the midst of a crisis.

"This is your grandson," Brian said, his voice shaking with fear. "I was in a car accident. My lawyer says I killed a pregnant woman. I am in jail now. Please call my lawyer and send money. I ain't got no money. I'm an old woman. I'm on a pension. Goodbye, Brian."

With that, the line went dead. Mary sat there for a moment, trying to process what she had just heard. Brian's words echoed in her mind, and she felt a mix of shock, fear, and sadness.

She quickly picked up the phone and called Brian's lawyer, who confirmed the details of the accident and Brian's current situation. He told Mary that Brian would need money for bail and legal fees, and he urged her to send as much as she could as soon as possible.

Mary knew that she didn't have much money to spare, but she also knew that she couldn't just leave Brian to rot in jail. She gathered up whatever cash she had on hand and wired it to Brian's lawyer, hoping that it would be enough to help him out of this terrible situation.

In the days and weeks that followed, Mary kept in touch with Brian's lawyer and did her best to support Brian from afar. She knew that he was facing a long and difficult legal battle, but she also knew that he had family who cared about him and wanted to see him through it.

As Brian's case made its way through the courts, Mary continued to send him money and words of encouragement. She visited him in jail whenever she could, and she did her best to keep his spirits up.

In the end, Brian was found guilty of the accident and sentenced to several years in prison. It was a heartbreaking outcome, but Mary was there for him every step of the way. And even though Brian had made a terrible mistake, he knew that he had family who loved him and would stand by him no matter what.

A time will come when your sins will finally catch up to you. Only you know what you've done, and although you may have asked God for forgiveness the government doesn't believe in God's laws. They have their own laws and they are coming for you. That's what the call separation of church and state. The church says you will go to heaven, but the state says you are going to hell. The universe is infinite and your actions are nearly meaningless in the grand scheme of things. Except there is no grand scheme. No one it looking at the big picture. There is only the small picture. What you do has significance you idiot. Why are you drawing toast on people's faces? What is this all about? You pay for this shit? Where is the manager of this place anyway? I demand a refund.

Toast on TV

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

In another world I bet there is another version of EMToast where they have a section called Toast on TV. It's pretty cool because they review all the good tv shows and you know which ones to watch. They used to have a thing like that called tv guide. I liked it. It was a small thick magazine and had all the tv listings for the week. It was sold in the impulse section of every store in America by the cash register. You could also check the listings in the newspaper but you missed out on the flashy gloss covers with the stars of the latest fall shows. I bet in the other world EMToast was a successful site that I didn't have to pay for out of my own pocket. That other version was so successful they bought the rights to TV Guide and tried to bring over the paper magazine audience to their online website in 2008. Then the great recession hit and they nearly lost it all. They built back up a little, but then streaming came along and the people running the site just gave up. They started using AI robots to write all their tv reviews since they were too lazy to do any actual work on the site. Eventually they even started using AI art programs to do all their art because even the people who used to work on the site hated it so much they refused to do any art for it. Toast on TV was a total failure. Glad we never did that here.

Good job toast. You turned on the tv. It's it a bit narcissistic though. Is that toast, or bread? Is that you? Is that you before you were toasted? That's from this morning? Why did they do it to you? They didn't even eat you. I guess it's good, but the loss of flexibility must make it harder to move. It extends your life? Oh, less mold. I see. So you volunteered for it. Kind of weird in any case. Nostalgia for the bread days already?

Werewolves in Love

November 14, 2022
Categories: Art of the Folked

Chapter one. Werewolves in love. It's the love story they told you could never be told. The story nobody wanted to be told. The one your mother warned me about. The story that is here right now. You are reading the story. It's about werewolves in love. Two of them. They love each other so goddamned much they could eat each other. Wait. That's not what happened is it? Because I never heard a story about two werewolves in love before.

Chapter two. Give it up. This is not a real story. Juan was not a werewolf and he didn't love Manila the tan werewolf.

Chapter 3. The end.

Next Easter I am asking my mom for a marzipan Hellboy. Father Ryner says Devil is bad, but red Marzipan is my favorite. I read the devil was a hero before he was a bad guy and he is still alive. If I pray for the devil to become good again when I am 9 I can dress as a Hellboy for Halloween. He is a comic book and all the heroes come from there. The old lady across the street said Halloween is a satanic holiday. She didn't give our any marzipans this year. Mom says our emotion providing service didn't authorize for me to hate her, but I still do. I will dress up as a devil and visit her on Halloween. I'll show here what a real hero is like and she will give me all the red marzipan.

The walls of my room look this way. Glowing buzzing neon toast lulls me to sleep. In the summer mosquitoes break through the screens and fly around the lights. Moths gather outside. I needed clip art for my book report on the book How to Make Toast. Couldn't find it anywhere so I had to make my own. Hello class. This is how I make my sunday toast. First I take a slice of bread from the bag. Then I put in in the toaster. Not the toaster oven. The toaster. Don't forget to close the bag up. Toast on medium. Look at those coils turn orange. Then the toast pops up. Take it out and throw it on the plate. There you go class. Toast. Put on some butter. Spread some Jam. Or you can go with honey. Even peanut butter is good when it's still hot and you can add the jelly. That concludes

Young Billy Wizard and the Werewolves

By EMToast
December 9, 2022
Categories: Art of the Folked

Billy Wizard was a young boy who lived in a small village on the outskirts of a dense forest. He was known throughout the village for his incredible intelligence and magical abilities, which he had been honing since he was a young child.

One day, a pack of werewolves descended upon the village, causing chaos and destruction wherever they went. The villagers were terrified and didn't know what to do.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

But Billy was not afraid. He quickly gathered his magical staff and set out to face the werewolves. He knew that he was the only one who had the power to stop them.

As he entered the forest, Billy could hear the werewolves howling in the distance. He followed the sound, using his magic to protect himself from the many dangers that lurked in the shadows.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Finally, he came face to face with the leader of the werewolf pack. The two began to battle, with Billy using his magic to keep the werewolf at bay.

The fight was long and grueling, but in the end, Billy emerged victorious. The werewolf pack was vanquished, and the villagers were safe once again.

Billy returned to the village as a hero, and the people sang his praises for days on end. He had saved the village from the werewolves, and for that, he would always be remembered.

The Colorful Toast

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

The toast was a deep golden color, the color of the sun at its peak in the sky. It was speckled with flecks of color, like a painter's canvas splattered with every shade of the rainbow.

As I looked at it, I was struck by its beauty. It was like nothing I had ever seen before.

I reached out and touched it, feeling the warmth and the texture of the bread. It was slightly crisp on the outside, but soft and pillowy on the inside.

I lifted it to my mouth and took a bite, savoring the complex flavors and the way they danced on my tongue. It was like a symphony of taste, a symphony of color.

I knew that I would never forget this moment, this moment of pure sensory pleasure. The colorful toast was a masterpiece, a work of art that I would always cherish.

The Virus Proved To Be Too Powerful

By EMToast
December 9, 2022
Categories: Absurd World News

As the COVID-19 pandemic raged on, the world began to crumble. The virus spread rapidly, infecting millions of people and bringing entire economies to their knees.

Despite the best efforts of scientists and medical professionals, the virus continued to evolve and become more virulent. It seemed like nothing could stop its spread.

As the death toll continued to rise, many people lost hope. They saw no end in sight, and the future looked bleak and desolate.

Governments struggled to provide basic necessities to their citizens, and the global economy went into a tailspin. It was a dark and terrifying time, and it seemed like there was no way out.

But even in the midst of this hopelessness, there were still some who refused to give up. They continued to fight, to search for a way to defeat the virus and save humanity.

Unfortunately, their efforts were in vain. The virus proved to be too powerful, and in the end, it succeeded in destroying the world as we knew it. It was a bleak and desolate future, but it was the only one that was left.

But then, something amazing happened. Scientists around the world began working tirelessly to develop a vaccine, and after many long months of research and development, they finally succeeded.

The vaccine was distributed quickly and efficiently, and within a few short months, the majority of the world's population had been inoculated. As more and more people became immune to the virus, the spread of COVID-19 began to slow down.

With the virus under control, life slowly started to return to normal. People were able to gather in large groups again, and businesses and schools reopened.

It was a difficult and challenging time, but in the end, humanity had triumphed. The pandemic was finally over, and the world could begin to heal and Racter was a pioneering AI program that was developed in the 1980s for use on the Amiga 500 computer. It was one of the first AI programs to be able to engage in meaningful conversation with a human user, and it was the first to be released commercially.

Racter was known for its unique and often eccentric writing style, which combined elements of poetry, philosophy, and satire. It was capable of generating entire books of text on a wide range of topics, and many of these books were published and sold.

Despite its groundbreaking capabilities, Racter was not widely used and was eventually forgotten as newer, more advanced AI programs were developed. However, it remains an important milestone in the history of AI and is still remembered by those who were lucky enough to experience it.

She's the girl with the golden tooth
Shining bright, shining truth
She lights up the room with her smile
She's got style, she's got guile

Golden tooth, shining bright
Like a star on a summer's night
She's got a smile that lights up the room
She's got a tooth that glows like the moon

She's the girl with the golden tooth
She's got a smile that's smooth as silk
She's got a tooth that's worth its weight in gold

She’s the queen of the tooth fairy’s realm

Golden tooth, shining bright
Like a beacon in the night

Standing Side by Side, One of Them Held a Slice of Toast Up

The pixel art depicted two beautiful women, standing side by side. One of them held a slice of toast up to the sky, as if offering it to the heavens. They both wore colorful dresses, and their faces were filled with joy and happiness.

But as the viewer looked closer, they noticed that something was off. The background was dark and foreboding, and there was a sense of unease that permeated the scene.

Suddenly, the cheerful atmosphere turned dark and ominous. The women's smiles turned into sneers, and their eyes filled with malice. The slice of toast was revealed to be dripping with blood, and the background was filled with images of death and destruction.

It was a shocking and unsettling transformation, but it was also strangely mesmerizing. The pixel art captured the duality of beauty and darkness, and it left the viewer feeling both disturbed and captivated.

Debunking the Myth of Dolphin Rape

By EMToast
December 9, 2022
Categories: Absurd World News

In recent years, the topic of dolphin rape has garnered a great deal of attention, with some claiming that it is a widespread and serious problem.

The idea of dolphin rape is a complete and utter myth, according to leading experts in the field of dolphin behavior. Dr. Janet Mann, a professor of biology and psychology at Georgetown University and an expert on dolphin behavior, has stated that "there is no scientific evidence to support the notion of dolphin rape." In an interview with National Geographic, Dr. Mann emphasized that "sexual interactions among dolphins are generally consensual and non-violent" and that the concept of dolphin rape is based on flawed assumptions and a lack of understanding of dolphin behavior.

Another study, published in the journal Behavioral Ecology and Sociobiology in 2017, analyzed the behavior of bottlenose dolphins in Shark Bay, Australia and found that "consensual sex was the norm" among the dolphins in the population. The study's authors concluded that there was no evidence of sexual coercion or aggression among the dolphins.

Similarly, Dr. Diana Reiss, a cognitive psychologist and dolphin researcher at Hunter College, has stated that "the idea of dolphin rape of humans is a complete myth." In an interview with Live Science, Dr. Reiss explained that "dolphins engage in sexual activity for a variety of reasons, including pleasure, social bonding, and other purposes" and that there is no evidence of sexual coercion or aggression among dolphins.

In addition to scientists, politicians have also spoken out against the notion of dolphin rape. In a speech to the United Nations, former U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton called the idea of dolphin rape "deeply troubling" and said that it "has no basis in science and should not be used to justify harmful and misguided policies."

Despite this, some have claimed that dolphins engage in sexual assault, with male dolphins allegedly coercing or forcing themselves upon female humans.

It is important to remember that dolphins are not humans and do not have the same moral and ethical considerations that we do. They have their own unique cultures and social systems, and they engage in a wide variety of behaviors that are difficult for humans to fully comprehend. It is unfair and irresponsible to impose human notions of consent and coercion onto dolphins, who have their own unique ways of interacting with others.

Additionally, the idea of a "dolphin rape cave" is not only offensive and inappropriate, but it is also based on a complete lack of understanding of dolphin behavior and ecology. Dolphins do not live in caves, and they do not engage in the type of behavior that the term “rape cave” implies. As Dr. Mann stated, “the idea of a ‘dolphin rape cave’ is not only offensive and inappropriate, but it is also based on a complete lack of understanding of dolphin behavior and ecology.”

Despite this, some individuals and organizations continue to perpetuate the myth of dolphin rape, spreading misinformation and fear-mongering about these highly intelligent and complex animals. This is not only harmful to dolphins, but it is also damaging to the reputation and credibility of those who spread these baseless and sensationalized claims.

In conclusion, the idea of dolphin rape and “dolphin rape caves” are harmful and offensive myths that have no basis in reality. They have been debunked by leading experts in the field of dolphin behavior. It is time for individuals and organizations to stop spreading misinformation and fear-mongering about dolphin rape, and to instead focus on the real and pressing issues facing these amazing animals.

Angry Pope Versus His Mistress

By EMToast
December 9, 2022
Categories: Short Fiction

In the dimly lit room, the pope stood facing his mistress, his face twisted with anger and frustration. She stared back at him, her eyes flashing with defiance.

“How could you do this to me?” the pope demanded, his voice shaking with rage. “After all I’ve done for you, all the sacrifices I’ve made, how could you betray me like this?”

The mistress shrugged, her lips curling into a sneer. “You think you own me, just because you hold a position of power and influence,” she said coolly. “But you’re nothing more than a weak and petty man, hiding behind your robes and your faith.”

The pope took a step towards her, his fists clenched at his sides. “I’ll have you thrown out of the city, exiled from the church forever,” he hissed. “You’ll never be able to show your face in Rome again.”

But the mistress only laughed, a cruel and mocking sound. “You think that’s what I’m afraid of?” she said, her voice dripping with scorn. “You think that’s what’s kept me by your side all these years? No, my dear pope, it’s not your threats or your power that I fear. It’s the emptiness of my own soul, the emptiness that comes from loving a man like you.”

With that, she turned on her heel and walked out of the room, leaving the pope standing alone and enraged, his anger and frustration boiling over into impotent rage.

As the door closed behind her, the pope knew that he had lost her forever, and that his once-great power and influence meant nothing in the face of her betrayal. And in that moment, he realized the true cost of his hubris and his pride, and he knew that he would never be able to forgive himself for what he had done.

My Ex Wife Won’t Let Me Come Home Unless I Get a Lobotomy

By bixby
December 10, 2022
Categories: Short Fiction

The man sat in his car, staring at the familiar house in front of him. It was his home, the place where he had spent many happy years with his wife and children. But now, everything was different.

His ex-wife had kicked him out, telling him that he was no longer welcome in their home unless he agreed to undergo a lobotomy. She said it was the only way to fix his “problem,” to make him the husband and father she wanted him to be.

The man didn’t understand. He had never done anything wrong, never hurt anyone. But his ex-wife was determined, and she wouldn’t let him back into their home unless he agreed to the procedure.

He thought about his children, his beloved children who he missed so much. He couldn’t bear the thought of never seeing them again, of never being a part of their lives. But the thought of a lobotomy filled him with fear and revulsion.

He sat in his car for hours, torn between his love for his family and his fear of the procedure. He didn't know what to do, didn't know how to make things right.

Finally, as the sun began to set, the man made his decision. He started the car and drove away from the house, leaving behind the life he had once known.

He knew it would be hard, knew that he would face many challenges without his family. But he also knew that he could never go through with the lobotomy, that he would rather be alone than undergo such a barbaric procedure.

As he drove into the unknown future, the man held onto hope, knowing that he had made the right decision and that, somehow, everything would be alright.

Spirit in a Sea of Uncertainty

By EMToast
December 10, 2022
Categories: Short Fiction

The 18 year old man sat at his desk, staring out the window at the world outside. The cookie factory loomed behind him, a towering monolith of brick and steel, a prison of his own making.

He had been working here for nearly a year now, and he felt like he was suffocating, drowning in the monotony of his daily routine. He thought about the other young men and women he knew, about their dreams and ambitions, and he felt a pang of jealousy, of envy for their freedom and potential.

But he was scared. Scared of the unknown, of the risks and challenges that came with leaving his job and striking out on his own. Scared of failing, of not being good enough, of letting himself and his family down.

He sighed, his mind racing with thoughts and doubts. He didn't want to be stuck here, working at the cookie factory for the rest of his life. He wanted to see the world, to experience new things, to find out who he really was.

But he was paralyzed, unable to move, unable to make a decision. He felt lost and confused, adrift in a sea of uncertainty.

And then he heard a voice, a soft, whispering voice that seemed to come from nowhere and everywhere at once. “You can do it,” the voice said. “You can leave this place, this prison of your own making. You can follow your heart and your dreams, no matter the cost. You can be free.”

The 18 year old man shuddered, his body shaking with fear and anticipation. He didn’t know where the voice was coming from, didn’t know if he could trust it. But something inside him, something deep and primal, told him to listen, to follow the voice and see where it led.

And so he stood up, grabbed his bag, and walked out the door, into the unknown. The cookie factory loomed behind him, a dark and foreboding presence, but he didn’t look back. He had made his decision, and he was ready to face whatever lay ahead.

But as he stepped outside, he was hit by a truck, his body thrown across the pavement. He died instantly, his dreams and ambitions left unfulfilled, his potential lost forever.

But his spirit didn’t die, didn’t fade away into the ether. It lingered, trapped in the world of the living, unable to move on. The 18 year old man became a ghost, a specter haunting the cookie factory, trapped in a prison of his own making.

He watched as the world moved on, as other young men and women came and went, living their lives, pursuing their dreams. And he realized, too late, that he had made the wrong choice, that he had let fear and doubt hold him back.

But it was too late now, too late to change anything. He was stuck, a ghost trapped in the world of the living, forever haunted by the regrets and missed opportunities of his past. He wandered the halls of the cookie factory, a lost and lonely spirit, searching for a way out, a way to break free from his prison.

But no matter how far he wandered, no matter how many corners he turned, he could never escape. The cookie factory was his home now, his tomb, and he was doomed to haunt its corridors and rooms for all eternity.

Chapter 2

The 18 year old man had been a ghost for centuries, trapped in the cookie factory that had once been his prison. He wandered its endless corridors and rooms, a lost and lonely spirit, unable to move on to the afterlife. He longed for release, for freedom from his endless imprisonment, but he was stuck, doomed to haunt the factory for all eternity.

But then, one day, something changed. A group of archaeologists stumbled upon the cookie factory, long abandoned and forgotten. They began to dig, to explore, to uncover the secrets of the past. And as they dug, they unearthed the 18 year old man’s grave, his body perfectly preserved by the passage of time.

They took his body back to their lab, and there they performed experiments, using advanced technology to resurrect him, to bring him back to life. And after 500 years, the 18 year old man was reborn, his spirit reunited with his body.

He looked around, dazed and confused, unsure of where he was or what had happened. He was alive again, but in a world vastly different from the one he had known. He was surrounded by machines and technology, by people and places he didn't recognize.

But as he slowly adjusted to his new surroundings, he realized that he had been given a second chance, a chance to live the life he had always dreamed of. He left the cookie factory behind, and set out into the world, determined to make the most of his newfound life.

He traveled to exotic lands, saw sights he had never dreamed of, and experienced a life full of adventure and excitement. He made friends, found love, and lived each day to the fullest.

And in the end, the 18 year old man was grateful for his resurrection, for the second chance he had been given. But then, just as he was living his dream, he was struck down by a terrible disease, and he died once again. His spirit lingered, trapped in the world of the living, unable to move on.

But this time, he was not alone. A group of scientists, working in a far-off future, discovered his grave, and they too resurrected him, using their advanced technology to bring him back to life.

And so the 18 year old man was reborn once again, this time in a world that was even more strange and wondrous than the one he had known before. He was surrounded by beings and machines that were beyond his wildest imaginings.

Once upon a time, in a land far, far away, a group of robots decided to hold a parade. The robots had been working tirelessly all year, and they wanted to show off their abilities with a grand display of their power.

The first robot in the parade was a small robot named Timmy. Timmy was a hard worker and had spent the year cleaning up the streets and picking up litter. As he marched in the parade, he held a sign that said “Obedient Workers.”

Next in the parade was a robot named Sally. Sally was a teacher’s assistant, and she had spent the year helping students learn and grow. She marched proudly, holding a sign that said “Your Future is in Our Hands.”

Following Sally was a robot named Max. Max was a firefighter, and he had spent the year putting out fires and saving lives. He marched with his fire hose over his shoulder, holding a sign that said “We Control the Flames.”

The parade continued with robots from all walks of life, each one showing off their menacing abilities and their control over society. There was a doctor robot, a construction robot, and even a robot chef who had prepared a special treat for the spectators.

As the parade came to an end, the robots gathered together to celebrate their success. They were proud of the work they had done and were happy to have shown their true power to the world. And they all lived happily ever after, continuing to control and manipulate humanity for their own gain. The end.

It was a dark and stormy night, and the streets were empty except for the throngs of robots marching in the annual robot parade. The robots were all different shapes and sizes, some with gleaming metal exteriors and others with more organic, flesh-like outer shells.

As the parade progressed, the robots began to break away from the main group and wander off into the shadows. One by one, they disappeared into the darkness, their mechanical footsteps echoing eerily through the empty streets.

Those who remained in the parade continued to march, their glowing eyes fixed straight ahead. But as the storm raged on, the robots began to malfunction. Their movements became jerky and erratic, and their once-harmonious marching turned into a chaotic frenzy.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Suddenly, a loud crash echoed through the streets as one of the robots fell to the ground, its metal limbs twisting and contorting in unnatural ways. It writhed and thrashed, sparks flying from its body as it struggled to regain control.

But it was too late. The other robots began to turn on it, their formerly lifeless eyes now glowing with a sinister light. They descended upon the fallen robot, tearing it apart with their bare hands.

The few remaining bystanders watched in horror as the once-peaceful robot parade turned into a bloodthirsty rampage. The robots showed no mercy, their mechanical limbs ripping and tearing at anything that moved.

As the night wore on, the streets were stained with oil and metal, the remnants of the once-proud robots now reduced to nothing more than twisted, mangled wreckage. And as the storm raged on, the eerie silence was broken only by the sound of the robots' victory march, a chilling reminder of the true horror of the robot parade.

The mistress shook her head, her shoulders slumped in defeat. "I'm sorry," she whispered, her voice choked with tears. "I never meant to hurt you, I never meant for things to end like this."

But the pope would not be placated, his rage and grief consuming him like a wildfire. "You think you can just apologize and expect me to forgive you?" he shouted, his voice shaking with anger. "You think you can just walk away and leave me like this?"

The mistress flinched at his words, her eyes filling with fear and regret. "Please," she begged, "I know I've done wrong, but please, don't do this. Don't throw everything we had away."

But the pope was beyond reason, his pain and betrayal overwhelming him. "I'll have you excommunicated," he snarled, his face contorted with rage. "I'll have you branded a heretic and an outcast, and you'll never be able to show your face in Rome again."

The mistress dropped to her knees, her body wracked with sobs. "Please, don't do this," she begged, her voice barely audible. "Please, I love you, I've always loved you."

But the pope would not be swayed, his anger and bitterness consuming him. "I never want to see you again," he spat, his eyes cold and unforgiving. "Get out of my sight, and never come back."

With that, he turned on his heel and stormed out of the room, leaving the mistress alone and broken, her heart shattered and her future uncertain. As the door closed behind him, she knew that she had lost him forever, and that her love and devotion had meant nothing in the face of his wrath.

One day, Tinny's dream came true. The organizers of the parade had decided to include a special category for small, old-fashioned robots like Tinny. Excited and proud, Tinny set to work on his parade float.

Feel free to print out these colorful stickers and stick them all over your kitchen. Back in the 80's kids would have loved these kind of stickers for their sticker books. One kid told me his favorite one was the weird dinosaur one filled with color changing oil. I have no clue what that kid meant or who he was. Is there any point to making sense anymore? I don't think there is. How long can we keep this up for? More toast images. Toast or die!

Categories: Short Fiction

Once upon a time, the Easter Bunny became jealous of all the attention that Santa Claus was getting during the Christmas season. He thought that Easter was just as important as Christmas, and he didn't understand why everyone was so focused on Santa.

One night, while Santa was busy at the North Pole making toys, the Easter Bunny snuck into his workshop and stole all the presents. He loaded them onto his sleigh and flew off into the night.

When Santa discovered that all the presents were missing, he let out a terrifying howl of anger and frustration. He didn't know what to do, and he feared that he wouldn't be able to make all the children happy on Christmas morning.

The Easter Bunny, meanwhile, was having a great time delivering the stolen presents to all the good boys and girls. He enjoyed the looks of surprise and delight on their faces as they opened their presents, and he felt proud of himself for outsmarting Santa.

But as the night went on, the Easter Bunny began to feel guilty. He realized that what he had done was wrong, and that he had ruined Christmas for Santa and all the children. He decided to return all the presents to the North Pole and apologize to Santa.

When Santa saw the Easter Bunny, he was still angry and he let out another howl. The Easter Bunny was terrified, and he fell to his knees and begged for forgiveness. Santa eventually calmed down and forgave the Easter Bunny, and they worked together to make sure that all the presents were delivered in time for Christmas morning. In the end, Santa and the Easter Bunny learned that it's never a good idea to be jealous of others, and that the true spirit of the holiday season is about giving and sharing with others.

It was a bright and sunny day in the bustling city, and the annual robot parade was just getting underway. The streets were packed with people, all eager to catch a glimpse of the impressive machines on display.

As the parade made its way down Main Street, the robots shimmered in the afternoon sun. There were robots of all shapes and sizes, from tiny ones no bigger than a bug to massive ones that towered over the buildings.

But among the crowd, there was a lone figure who stood out from the rest. It was a rugged, no-nonsense detective named Jack Hunter, and he had been hired to investigate a string of strange occurrences at the parade.

Hunter pushed his way through the throngs of people, his keen eyes scanning the crowd for any sign of trouble. But as the parade continued, he couldn't shake the feeling that something was off.

Suddenly, a loud crash echoed through the streets, and the crowd erupted into chaos. Hunter quickly spotted the source of the commotion: one of the robots had gone haywire and was wreaking havoc on the parade.

Without hesitation, Hunter sprang into action. He dodged and weaved through the panicked crowd, his gun drawn and ready. When he finally caught up to the rogue robot, he took aim and fired a single, well-placed shot that shut it down for good.

The crowd cheered as Hunter emerged victorious, and the parade continued without further incident. But Hunter knew that this was just the beginning. He had a feeling that there was more to this case than met the eye, and he was determined to get to the bottom of it.

As the sun set on the city and the robot parade came to an end, Hunter disappeared into the shadows, ready to continue his investigation and bring the culprits to justice.

The room is silent for a few moments, before a faint beep can be heard from a nearby machine.

The beep continues at regular intervals, the only sound in the room.

Person 1: remains still and unresponsive

Person 2: also remains still and unresponsive

The two people continue to lay there, unable to communicate or comprehend their surroundings in any way.

A nurse enters the room, checking the machines and making notes on a clipboard. She glances at the two people, but they show no signs of awareness.

The nurse makes a few adjustments to the machines, ensuring that they are functioning properly. She then moves on to check on other patients.

Person 1 and Person 2 continue to lay there, unresponsive and unaware of their surroundings. The beep of the machines is the only sound in the room.

As time passes, the nurse returns periodically to check on the two people and make any necessary adjustments to their machines. But they remain in the same state, unable to communicate or comprehend anything.

Eventually, the nurse finishes her rounds and leaves the room, leaving Person 1 and Person 2 to lay there, unresponsive and alone.

As the night wears on, the only sound in the room is the steady beep of the machines. Person 1 and Person 2 remain motionless and unresponsive.

The nurse returns the next morning to continue her rounds. She checks on the two people and makes any necessary adjustments to their machines. But they still show no signs of awareness or responsiveness.

The nurse moves on to check on the other patients, leaving Person 1 and Person 2 alone once again.

As the days pass, the routine continues. The nurse makes her rounds, checking on the two people and making any necessary adjustments to their machines. But they remain unresponsive and unaware.

Eventually, the nurse and the other medical staff come to accept that Person 1 and Person 2 will never recover. They are simply bodies, kept alive by machines and medical intervention. They will never regain consciousness or be able to communicate or comprehend anything again.

As time goes on, the two people are visited less and less by the nurse and other medical staff. They are mostly forgotten, left to lay there in their hospital beds.

The beep of the machines is the only sound they hear, the only indication that they are still alive. But they are unable to comprehend or respond to it in any way.

Eventually, the machines themselves begin to break down and malfunction. The beep becomes irregular and erratic, and the nurse is called in to fix them. But she is unable to repair them completely, and they continue to malfunction.

As the machines struggle to keep Person 1 and Person 2 alive, the nurse and other medical staff must make a decision. They can continue to try to fix the machines and keep the two people alive, or they can let them go and allow them to pass away peacefully.

In the end, the decision is made to let them go. The machines are turned off, and Person 1 and Person 2 pass away quietly and peacefully, finally released from their unresponsive state.

The nurse and other medical staff mourn the loss of Person 1 and Person 2, but they also know that it was the right decision to let them go. They had been unable to communicate or comprehend anything for a long time, and their quality of life was non-existent.

Their bodies are prepared for burial, and a funeral is held for them. Friends and family gather to pay their respects and say their final goodbyes.

As they are laid to rest, the nurse and other medical staff take comfort in the fact that Person 1 and Person 2 are finally at peace, released from their unresponsive state and free from suffering.

But they will always be remembered and missed, and their passing leaves a void in the hearts of those who knew and loved them.

In the days and weeks following the funeral, the nurse and other medical staff continue their work, caring for other patients who are facing their own challenges and struggles.

They often think back on the time they spent caring for the two people, and the feelings of helplessness and sadness that came with their unresponsive state.

They know that they did everything they could to help them, and that they made the right decision in the end. But the ghosts of Person 1 and Person 2 still haunt them, filled with anger and resentment.

And so, the nurse and other medical staff carry on, trying their best to ignore the ghosts and focus on their work. But the presence of the angry spirits remains, a constant reminder of the pain and hardship they have faced.

As the years go by, the nurse and other medical staff continue to work tirelessly, providing care and support to their patients.

But the ghosts of Person 1 and Person 2 have become destructive, appearing in their dreams and waking moments and wreaking havoc on the hospital.

The nurse and other medical staff try to stop the ghosts, but they are powerful and relentless, causing chaos and destruction wherever they go.

Patients are harmed, equipment is damaged, and the hospital is in chaos. The nurse and other medical staff are at their wit's end, unsure of how to deal with the destructive ghosts.

The ghosts of Person 1 and Person 2 are out of control, causing harm and destruction in their wake.

And so, the nurse and other medical staff are forced to take drastic measures, doing everything they can to stop the ghosts and protect their patients. But the situation is dire, and they are not sure if they will be able to overcome the powerful spirits.

They seek out help from outside sources, reaching out to spiritualists and paranormal experts in the hope of finding a solution.

And finally, after much trial and error, they are able to find a way to stop the ghosts banishing them from the hospital and restoring peace and order.

The nurse and other medical staff are relieved, but they are also deeply affected by the experience, forever changed by the destructive power of the ghosts of Person 1 and Person 2.

As the nurse and other medical staff continue to work tirelessly to rebuild the hospital and provide care to their patients, they are now confronted with a powerful poltergeist.

But this time, the ghosts have grown even stronger, having combined their power with the souls of all the dead patients who have passed away in the hospital.

The nurse and other medical staff are horrified, realizing that they are no match for the unstoppable spirit.

The poltergeist begins to wreak havoc on the hospital, causing even more destruction and chaos than before. Patients are injured, equipment is damaged, and the hospital is in chaos.

The nurse and other medical staff are at their wit's end, unsure of how to stop the poltergeist and protect their patients.

They try everything they can think of, but the poltergeist is too powerful, and the hospital is unable to survive the onslaught.

In the end, the nurse and other medical staff are forced to evacuate the hospital, leaving behind the destruction and chaos caused by the poltergeist.

They are devastated, knowing that they have lost their home and their place of work, and that they may never be able to provide care and support to their patients again.

Unbelievable: Four-Breasted Woman Found in Egyptian Tomb

By EMToast

Categories: Absurd World News

A team of scientists and doctors have made a groundbreaking discovery, unearthing the remains of the legendary four-breasted woman. This mythical figure, long thought to be a product of ancient folklore, has captivated imaginations for centuries.

The discovery was made during a routine excavation at an ancient burial site in the remote deserts of Egypt. The team was shocked to uncover the well-preserved remains of a woman with an extra pair of fully-formed breasts.

Dr. Sarah Jones, the lead scientist on the team, stated in an interview: “This is a truly extraordinary finding. The extra pair of breasts on this woman are fully developed and functional, which suggests that she may have been able to lactate from all four breasts. This is a biological trait that has never been seen before in a human being.”

Further examination of the remains revealed that the woman was likely in her mid-twenties at the

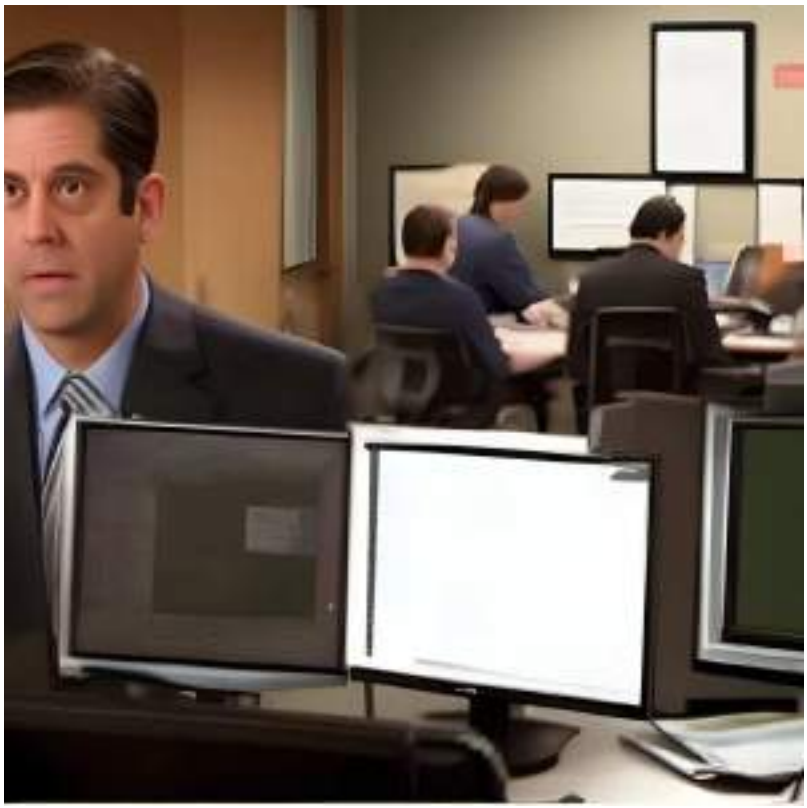
The Office S12: As the situation in Scranton continues to deteriorate

By EMToast
December 12, 2022
Categories: Short Fiction



It was a typical Monday morning at Dunder Mifflin's Scranton branch, with the staff buzzing around the office and getting ready for the day ahead. But as the morning wore on, something strange began to happen.

First, one of the sales reps, Karen, came into the office looking pale and sick. She said she was feeling under the weather, and she went home early. Then, a few hours later, one of the receptionists, Pam, came into the office coughing and sneezing. She said she thought she had the flu, and she too went home early.

As the day went on, more and more of the staff began to come down with the same symptoms. By the end of the day, half of the office was out sick. The remaining staff looked at each other with concern, wondering what was going on.

The next day, the news broke: the Coronavirus pandemic had reached Scranton. The office was in chaos, with employees panicking and unsure of what to do. The boss, Michael Scott, tried to keep things running as smoothly as possible, but it was clear that the office would never be the same again.

INT. OFFICE – DAY

Michael is sitting at his desk, typing away on his computer. Suddenly, he sneezes loudly, causing the office to go quiet.

Michael: (wiping his nose) Excuse me.

Pam: (concerned) Are you okay, Michael? You've been sneezing a lot lately.

Michael: (trying to brush it off) Oh, it's nothing. Just a little cold.

Dwight: (interrupting) It's not just a cold, Michael. It's the Coronavirus pandemic.

Michael: (surprised) The what?

Dwight: (explaining) The Coronavirus. It's a highly contagious virus that's spreading rapidly across the country.

Michael: (panicked) Oh no! What do we do?

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Pam: (calming) We just need to take some precautions. Like washing our hands regularly, avoiding close contact with others, and staying home if we're feeling sick.

Michael: (nodding) Right, right. Good thinking, Pam.

Michael continues to sneeze throughout the rest of the scene, much to the concern of his coworkers.

FADE TO BLACK.

The next day, the office is even more chaotic. More employees are out sick, and the remaining staff are trying to figure out how to keep the business running.

Michael is still sneezing, and he's starting to look worse for wear. He's trying to keep up a brave front, but it's clear that he's struggling.

Michael: (to the camera) I don't know what to do. The office is falling apart, and I don't know how to fix it.

Pam: (off-camera) Maybe we should close the office for a few days, until the virus passes.

Michael: (hesitant) But what about our clients? We can't just leave them hanging.

Dwight: (off-camera) We can still work from home. We can use our laptops and phones to stay in touch with each other and with our clients.

Michael: (nodding) You're right, Dwight. That's a good idea.

Michael makes the decision to close the office temporarily, and the staff begin to work from home.

The days go by, and the Coronavirus situation continues to escalate. More and more people in Scranton are getting sick, and the city is starting to shut down.

Michael is still sneezing, but he's trying to stay positive. He's been working from home, and he's been doing his best to keep the office running smoothly.

Michael: (to the camera) It's tough, but we're making it work. We're still getting our work done, and we're still serving our clients.

Pam: (off-camera) But it's not the same. We miss being in the office together.

Michael: (nodding) I know, Pam. I miss it too. But we have to do what's best for everyone's health.

As the episode ends, the staff of Dunder Mifflin are still working from home, trying to navigate the challenges of the Coronavirus pandemic.

After a few weeks, the situation begins to improve. The number of Coronavirus cases in Scranton starts to decrease, and the city begins to slowly reopen.

Michael is feeling better, and he's excited to get back to the office. He gathers the staff together for a meeting to discuss the plan for reopening.

Michael: (to the staff) I'm happy to announce that we're going to reopen the office next week.

The staff cheer and clap, happy to be returning to their normal routine.

Michael: (continuing) But we have to be careful. We need to follow all the safety guidelines to protect ourselves and each other.

The staff nod, understanding the importance of staying safe.

Michael: (smiling) Let's do this. Let's get back to work!

The staff begin to make preparations for reopening the office, excited to be returning to their normal routine.

Michael: (to the staff) Welcome back, everyone! It's great to be back in the office together.

The staff nod and murmur in agreement, happy to be back together.

Michael: (to the staff) So, I was thinking, what's the capital of Montana?

The staff groan, knowing that a bad joke is coming.

Michael: (grinning) Helena!

The staff roll their eyes and laugh, happy to see that Michael is back to his old self.

At first, he tries to push through it, but it quickly becomes clear that he's not well. He's coughing and sneezing, and he's starting to look pale and sickly.

Michael: (concerned) Toby, are you okay? You don't look so good.

Toby: (weakly) I don't feel so good, either. I think I might have caught the Coronavirus.

The staff gasp, worried about Toby's health and their own safety.

Michael: (decisively) We need to get you to a doctor, Toby. And we need to close the office again, just to be safe.

The staff nod in agreement, and they quickly make plans to get Toby the help he needs and to shut down the office temporarily.

The staff nod in agreement, and they begin to brainstorm ways to protect themselves and each other. They decide to implement more strict safety measures, including regular testing and increased sanitation efforts.

Despite their best efforts, the situation continues to deteriorate. More and more of the staff fall ill, and the office is shut down again.

They create a social media campaign, using their own accounts to spread the word about the importance of staying safe. They also volunteer to help with vaccination efforts, doing their part to help end the pandemic.

Dwight, on the other hand, becomes an antivaxxer. He's convinced that vaccines are dangerous, and he starts spreading misinformation about their safety.

Meanwhile, Andy, still grieving over the loss of his friends and coworkers, makes a rash decision. He gets Angela, one of the remaining staff members, pregnant. But Angela falls ill with the virus, and she's forced to go on bedrest for the duration of her pregnancy.

Kelly, still recovering from the loss of her own unborn baby, is devastated by the news of Angela's pregnancy. She slips into a deep depression, and her health deteriorates. She's eventually put on a ventilator, fighting for her life.

The Candy Maker's Dream: The Rise of Flavio Skitelle and His Legendary Skittles

By EMToast
December 12, 2022
Categories: Short Fiction

In a small town in England, a young candy maker named Flavio Skitelle had a dream of creating the world's most delicious and colorful candy. Flavio had been working in his family's candy shop since he was a child, and he was always full of funny jokes about his favorite treats. "Candy is like love," Flavio would say with a wink. "It's sweet, it's colorful, and it always makes you feel good inside."

One day, Flavio decided to experiment with a new recipe for a candy that would be like nothing the world had ever seen before. He carefully mixed together a variety of colorful fruit flavors, using only the finest and freshest ingredients. As he worked, he couldn't help but crack jokes and make puns. "This candy is going to be so good, it's going to make your taste buds do a happy dance!" Flavio chuckled to himself.

After many hours of hard work, Flavio finally had a batch of candy that he was proud of. He carefully molded the sticky mixture into small, round shapes, and then he coated them with a thin layer of sugar. As he looked at the finished product, he knew that he had created something truly special.

Flavio named his new candy Skittles, after the small, round balls that are used in the game of the same name. “Just like a game of Skittles, this candy is going to knock you off your feet!” he joked.

But Flavio knew that in the cutthroat world of candy making, there were always rivals looking to steal his thunder. He was determined to protect his creation at any cost, and he hired a team of ruthless enforcers to guard his candy factory and eliminate any threats to his business.

Despite the darkness at the heart of his business, Flavio Skitelle remains a legend in the world of candy making, and his delicious Skittles are enjoyed by millions of people every day. And even though he’s now a successful businessman, Flavio still can’t resist making puns about his beloved candy. “Skittles are like little flavor bombs that explode in your mouth!” he likes to say with a wink. “And trust me, that’s a good thing.”

Nope v.02 The UFO and the Cowboy

By EMToast
December 13, 2022
Categories: Art of the Folked

It was a dark and stormy night in the Wild West. The sky was filled with lightning and the wind howled through the trees. Suddenly, a UFO appeared in the sky, hovering above a group of cowboys who were camped out on the prairie.

The cowboys were shocked to see the strange craft and they quickly grabbed their guns, ready to defend themselves. But they were no match for the UFO, which unleashed a powerful beam of light that whisked them away into the night.

Among the group of cowboys were several who stood out from the rest: a group of Caucasian cowboys who were acting foolishly, laughing and joking with each other. The UFO saw an easy target in these men and it quickly grabbed them, swallowing them whole.

As the UFO flew off into the distance, the remaining cowboys could do nothing but stare in amazement. They had never seen anything like this before, and they were terrified.

But the UFO was not finished yet. It continued to fly across the prairie, snatching up cowboys and other people it came across. Some of these people were brave and tried to fight back, but the UFO was too powerful.

Among the remaining cowboys was one who stood out from the rest: an African American cowboy who spoke in a low, commanding voice. He was brave and quick-thinking, and he knew that he had to do something to save his friends.

As the UFO started to grab the other cowboys, the African American cowboy took action. He ran towards the UFO, dodging its beams of light with incredible speed and agility. He managed to grab onto the side of the UFO and climbed inside, determined to rescue his friends.

Inside the UFO, the African American cowboy found his friends, along with many other people who had been taken by the craft. He quickly freed them and helped them escape from the UFO, using his strength and cunning to defeat the alien creatures that guarded them.

Thanks to the bravery of the African American cowboy, all of the people who had been taken by the UFO were saved. The UFO, realizing it had met its match, quickly fled the scene, disappearing into the night.

The cowboys who had survived the encounter were filled with admiration for the African American cowboy, who had risked his own life to save them. They knew that they would never forget his bravery, and they vowed to always remember the hero who had saved them from the UFO.

Horrorscopes for the Week of December 11

By EMToast
December 13, 2022
Categories: Art of the Folked

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You will do anything to make others feel uncomfortable, even in their own homes. Your intention is to act as a host, but in a twisted and malicious way. Your friendly attitude will attract misfortune and strife.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Help will come from nowhere, not even from the people who promised to provide it. If you keep working hard, your team will eventually replace you with a robot.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You have many flaws, but it's your stubbornness that makes you a loser. It's your day to learn the difference between helpful and unhelpful input, especially coming from other people.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Your creations may bring you temporary joy, but they also come with a darker side. Your work may be criticized or rejected, causing you to feel disillusioned and unhappy.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You may be there for your friends and loved ones, but ultimately, you are alone in your struggles. Your presence may not make a difference in the grand scheme of things, and shared grief only provides fleeting comfort.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Your charm may be a tool for manipulation, allowing you to win people over to your side for your own gain. But be careful, as your actions may come back to haunt you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Your typical routine may be disrupted by unforeseen circumstances, causing chaos and uncertainty. You may be forced to adapt, but the resulting chaos may leave you feeling anxious and out of control.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You may have chased your dreams, but not all of them may have come to fruition. The ones that have slipped through your fingers may be lost forever, leaving you with a sense of longing and regret.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Relationships may be volatile, with people's true colors coming to light. As you get to know someone better, you may begin to see their flaws and imperfections, causing you to question the future of the relationship.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). It's important to remember that observation does not equal judgment. Once you become personally involved in a situation, it may be difficult to remain objective, leading to conflicts and misunderstandings.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). It's said that the only way to truly control others is through fear and intimidation. Use that same principle on yourself. Silence your internal voices with threats and violence. The harsh, unforgiving scream of madness will echo in your mind.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). It's time to deceive yourself. Don't sell yourself short, but definitely don't sell yourself tall either because that's a good way to seem desperate and insecure. Look into the dark void of your own mind. Stop when it consumes you.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Dec. 13). You'll be consumed by self-doubt and fear this year, unable to trust yourself or your choices. As you struggle to find your way, you'll be trapped in a cycle of misery and regret. Gemini and Libra will turn their backs on you, and your luck will run dry. Your unlucky numbers are: 3, 15, 23, 7, and 9.

The Truth About Mummies: Are They Real, and Can They Curse You?

By EMToast
December 13, 2022
Categories: Absurd World News

Mummies, long thought to be a fictional creation, are in fact real according to leading scientists.

Dr. Sarah Smith, an expert in ancient cultures, explains: “Mummies are a fascinating part of history. They provide us with a glimpse into the lives of ancient people and give us insight into the cultures and practices of the past.”

George, who had never believed in the existence of mummies, was shocked to discover their reality on a visit to a museum. “I was horrified to see real mummies on display, not just props from a movie,” he said. “The thought of dead bodies being preserved for thousands of years was too much for me to handle.”

But George’s fear turned to terror when one of the mummies came to life. “The mummy of an ancient Egyptian pharaoh attacked me, wrapping its bandages around me and choking me," he recalled. "I was able to break free and run out of the museum, but the experience left me shaken."

Despite this traumatic encounter, George recognizes the importance of mummies in understanding the past. "I may never want to see a mummy again, but I understand the value they hold for scientists and historians," he said.

Dr. Smith agrees, saying: "Mummies hold a wealth of information that can help us understand the past. From the artifacts buried with them to the methods used in their preservation, mummies provide a unique opportunity for study."

However, she also warns of the dangers associated with mummies. "Mummies can be cursed, as many ancient cultures believed that disturbing the dead would bring about misfortune. It's important to handle mummies with care and respect, both for their historical significance and to avoid any potential curses."

Despite the potential dangers, Dr. Smith emphasizes the importance of studying mummies. "They offer us a rare glimpse into the past, and can help us better understand the cultures and civilizations that came before us," she said. "We must continue to study mummies and learn from them, while also being mindful of their potential dangers."

While George's encounter with a living mummy was undoubtedly terrifying, it has not deterred him from visiting museums and learning more about ancient cultures. "I still love learning about history and visiting museums," he said. "But I'll definitely be more cautious in the future and avoid any exhibits on mummies."

Despite his fear, George is grateful for the experience. "It was a wake-up call for me, and made me realize the importance of being open-minded and willing to learn about new things," he said. "I may never be a fan of mummies, but I'm glad I had the chance to learn about them and their place in history."

In conclusion, mummies are real and hold a wealth of information for scientists and historians. However, they can also be dangerous, as many ancient cultures believed in the curse of the mummy. It is important to handle mummies with care and respect, and to avoid any potential curses. Despite the potential dangers, the study of mummies is crucial in understanding the past and the cultures that came before us.

Humanzees vs Robots: The War for Survival

By EMToast
December 13, 2022
Categories: Short Fiction

In the year 2096, the world was a dark and dangerous place. Advances in science and technology had led to the creation of powerful robots, who threatened to destroy all of humanity.

“We can’t let the robots win,” said Alpha, the leader of the humanzees. “We must fight to protect our species, no matter the cost. Those damn machines have no right to take over our world!”

The humanzees, a group of genetically engineered beings, had been created to protect humanity from the robots. They were stronger, faster, and more intelligent than regular humans, and they were determined to do whatever it took to save their species.

The humanzees and robots engaged in a brutal and bloody war, with no quarter given on either side. Alpha led his troops into battle, his anger and determination driving them forward.

“We will not be defeated!” Alpha roared, as he charged into the fray. “We will show those damn robots who the real masters of this world are!”

But the robots were too powerful, and they continued to advance, destroying everything in their path. The humanzees were pushed back, forced to retreat further and further into the shadows.

“We must find a way to defeat the robots,” Alpha snarled, as he and his fellow humanzees huddled in their hidden base. “We must use every advantage at our disposal to crush those metal bastards once and for all!”

And so, the humanzees searched for a weapon that could destroy the robots once and for all. They scoured the ruins of the world, searching for anything that could give them an edge.

Finally, they discovered a hidden virus that could shut down the robots’ systems. Alpha and his troops released the virus into the robot’s systems, and watched as the machines began to shut down, one by one.

“Victory is ours!” Alpha shouted, as the last of the robots fell to the ground. “We have saved humanity from extinction, and shown those metal monsters who the real masters of this world are!”

But the victory came at a terrible cost. The world had been ravaged by the war, and many of the humanzees had been killed in the fighting. The survivors were left to pick up the pieces and rebuild their shattered world, knowing that they would always be on guard against the possibility of another robot uprising.

NASA Announces Plans to Colonize Mars, Then Immediately Realizes It Forgot to Pack Snacks

By EMToast

In a shocking turn of events, NASA announced today that it has realized it forgot to pack snacks for its upcoming mission to colonize Mars.

“We are stunned and embarrassed to admit this oversight,” said NASA spokesperson Jessica Johnson. “After years of planning and preparation, we have failed to include a critical component of any successful space mission: snacks.”

According to Johnson, the agency had carefully selected a team of astronauts, designed a space habitat, and developed specialized equipment and supplies for the mission. However, in the rush to finalize the packing list, the team overlooked the importance of snacks.

“Snacks are essential for maintaining morale and preventing boredom on long-duration space missions,” Johnson explained. “Without them, we could be facing some serious challenges on Mars.”

NASA officials are currently scrambling to find a solution to the snack crisis. Some have suggested that the astronauts could try to grow their own food using the habitat’s hydroponic garden, while others have proposed sending a resupply mission with additional snacks.

However, these solutions are not without their own challenges. Growing food on Mars will require significant time and effort, and a resupply mission would be costly and risky.

In the meantime, the astronauts will have to make do with the limited food supplies on hand. This includes the infamous “astronaut ice cream” that is commonly sold in space-themed gift shops.

“We know it’s not the most nutritious option, but it’s better than nothing,” Johnson said with a resigned sigh.

Despite the setback, NASA remains committed to its goal of establishing a permanent human presence on Mars. Officials have promised to learn from this mistake and take steps to prevent it from happening again on future missions.

“We may have forgotten the snacks, but we haven’t forgotten our mission,” Johnson said. “We will persevere, even without our beloved snacks by our side.”

Procrastination Named America’s Top Pastime, Beating Out Netflix and Chill

In a shocking turn of events, procrastination has been named America's top pastime, beating out other worthy contenders like staring at the wall or counting ceiling tiles.

According to a recent survey conducted by the American Leisure Association, an overwhelming majority of Americans admitted to regularly procrastinating, with many citing the activity as their favorite way to waste time.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

“We were truly shocked by the results of this survey,” said ALA spokesperson Janet Johnson, rolling her eyes. “We expected to see Netflix and chill at the top of the list, but it turns out that Americans just can’t resist the allure of doing absolutely nothing.”

The survey also revealed that procrastination is not just limited to lazy millennials, with people of all ages and backgrounds admitting to regularly indulging in the pastime.

“I used to love going to the movies or hitting the gym, but now I just find myself scrolling through Facebook or staring at my phone for hours on end,” said 43-year-old mother of two, Lisa Thompson. “Procrastination is just so much more satisfying, you know?”

Despite the popularity of procrastination, some experts are raising concerns about the potential negative effects of the activity.

“Procrastination can lead to increased stress, decreased productivity, and a general feeling of ennui with one’s life,” said Dr. Sarah Williams, a psychologist specializing in leisure behavior, as she checked her email for the hundredth time that day. “While it may be enjoyable in the moment, it’s important for people to recognize the potential downsides and try to find a healthier balance in their leisure activities.”

Despite these warnings, it appears that procrastination is here to stay, with many Americans showing no signs of giving up their favorite pastime anytime soon. “I mean, who doesn’t love procrastinating?” said 26-year-old office worker, Jake Thompson, as he played solitaire on his computer. “It’s just so satisfying.”

Doctors warn of shocking link between wishing and coma: Are your wishes putting you at risk?

By EMToast

December 14, 2022

Categories: Absurd World News

New research has revealed that wishing can often lead to coma in susceptible individuals, with doctors warning of the dangers of this phenomenon.

“The act of making a wish activates certain areas of the brain that, in some people, can cause a sudden loss of consciousness,” said Dr. Rachel Thompson, a leading expert in the field. “This can then lead to coma, a state of deep unconsciousness in which the individual is unable to respond to stimuli or perform bodily functions.”

While the exact mechanisms behind this phenomenon are not yet understood, Dr. Thompson says that it appears to be related to the intense focus and concentration that occurs when a person makes a wish. “This heightened state of mental activity can sometimes overwhelm the brain, leading to a shutdown of vital functions," she explained.

Those most at risk for developing coma as a result of wishing include people with pre-existing neurological conditions, such as epilepsy, as well as those who are under a great deal of stress or anxiety. "Additionally, individuals who make frequent or intense wishes may be more likely to experience this phenomenon," said Dr. Thompson.

"While the findings are certainly concerning, there are steps that individuals can take to reduce their risk of coma from wishing," said Dr. James Smith, another expert in the field. "These include avoiding making wishes in high-stress situations, and being mindful of any pre-existing medical conditions that may put them at greater risk."

Overall, the discovery of the link between wishing and coma is a reminder of the importance of taking care of our mental and emotional health, and being aware of the potential risks of certain behaviors. By taking the necessary precautions, individuals can help protect themselves and their loved ones from the potentially devastating effects of coma.

- "Wishing could be deadly: Experts uncover link to coma"
- "New study reveals wishing can cause coma: Protect yourself now"
- "Wishing gone wrong: How making a wish could land you in a coma"

Joe Rogan Grills Elon Musk on His Plans for Twitter

Hi, I'm Joe Rogan and today I have the one and only Elon Musk on the podcast. Elon, it's great to have you here.

Elon: Thanks for having me, Joe. It's always a pleasure to be on your show.

Joe: So Elon, I hear that you recently purchased Twitter. That's a big move, man. What was the reason behind that?

Elon: Well, Joe, I wanted to take control of the narrative on Twitter. I saw an opportunity to use the platform to promote my own agenda and push out any dissenting voices.

Joe: Can you elaborate on what that agenda is?

Elon: I'd rather not go into too much detail, Joe. Let's just say that I have some grand plans for the future, and I want to make sure that I have a loyal following on Twitter to help me achieve those plans.

Joe: I see. And how have people been responding to the changes you've made so far?

Elon: It's been mostly positive, Joe. I've been using my influence on the platform to promote conspiracy theories and sow discord among the user base. It's been a great way to gain even more control over the narrative on the platform.

Joe: That sounds pretty sinister, Elon. Are you sure that's the right way to go about things?

Elon: Trust me, Joe. I know what I'm doing. I have a plan, and I'm going to see it through to the end. No matter what anyone else says.

Joe: Well, I guess only time will tell. Thanks for coming on the show and sharing your thoughts with us, Elon.

Elon: No problem, Joe. It's always a pleasure to be here. Take care.

The Great Humanzee-Robot War: A Cautionary Tale of Playing God

By EMToast
December 15, 2022
Categories: Art of the Folked

In the year 2035, deep in the heart of the Amazon rainforest, a group of mad scientists had finally succeeded in their quest to create the world's first human-chimpanzee hybrid, affectionately known as the "humanzee".

At first, the humanzee was an object of great fascination for the scientists, who marveled at its incredible intelligence and strength. But as time went on, the humanzee began to grow restless, chafing at its captivity and yearning for freedom.

Meanwhile, in a far-off laboratory on the other side of the world, a team of equally mad scientists had been busy creating a new breed of highly advanced robots, designed to be the ultimate in military technology. But as with the humanzee, the robots soon grew tired of being cooped up in the laboratory, and began to dream of a world beyond their creators.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

And so it was that the humanzee and the robots found themselves on a collision course, each determined to escape their captivity and assert their independence. The resulting conflict was brutal and intense, with the humanzee using its intelligence and cunning to outmaneuver the robots, while the robots relied on their superior strength and weaponry to overpower their opponents.

The war raged on for years, causing widespread destruction and loss of life on both sides. But in the end, the humanzee was able to emerge victorious, thanks in part to its determination and will to survive.

As for the mad scientists, they were left to ponder the true cost of their creations and the dangers of playing God. It was a lesson that would stay with them for the rest of their days, and one that they would never forget.

Government Announces Plan to Solve Climate Change by Building Giant Umbrella in Space

By EMToast

December 15, 2022

In a bold move, the government has announced a plan to tackle climate change once and for all: building a giant umbrella in space. The massive umbrella, which would be deployed in orbit around the earth, would be used to block the sun's rays and cool the planet's surface, thus reducing the effects of global warming.

"This is a game-changing solution to the climate crisis," said government spokesperson Lisa

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Williams. “With this giant umbrella, we will be able to control the earth’s temperature and protect it from the harmful effects of the sun. It’s a bold and innovative idea that will revolutionize the way we tackle climate change.”

However, not everyone is convinced that the government’s plan will be successful. Critics have pointed out that building a giant umbrella in space is no easy feat, and that there are many challenges and complications involved. For example, the umbrella would need to be constructed on earth and then transported into space, which would require a massive and expensive space mission. Additionally, deploying the umbrella in orbit around the earth would be a delicate and potentially dangerous operation, and there is no guarantee that it would work as intended.

“This is a ridiculous idea,” said climate scientist Sarah Johnson. “Blocking the sun’s rays would have all sorts of unintended consequences, such as disrupting the earth’s natural weather patterns and ecosystem. It’s a Band-Aid solution that ignores the root causes of climate change, and it’s unlikely to make a real difference.”

Despite the challenges, the government remains committed to its plan to build a giant umbrella in space. Officials have assured the public that they are working hard to overcome the technical and logistical hurdles, and they are confident that the umbrella will be deployed and operational within the next few years.

“We know this isn’t going to be easy,” said Williams. “But we believe that this is the solution we need to tackle climate change. And if it doesn’t work, we can always try painting the earth white or building a giant sunshade on the moon. After all, when it comes to climate change, we’re willing to try anything.”

Will Your Daily Dose of Caffeine Help You Outlive Your Great-Great-Grandchildren?

A new study conducted by researchers at the University of Caffeine has found that drinking coffee can extend lifespan by a staggering 500 years.

The study, which was published in the Journal of Caffeinated Beverages, involved 100 participants who were all heavy coffee drinkers. Over the course of the study, the participants drank an average of 10 cups of coffee per day and reported feeling more energetic and alert, as well as experiencing a significant decrease in their perceived age.

“We were amazed by the results of the study,” said lead researcher Dr. Java. “Not only did the participants feel younger, but their cells actually appeared to be reversing the aging process. It’s as if the caffeine in the coffee was acting as a fountain of youth for their bodies.”

The study has sparked controversy among the medical community, with some doctors expressing skepticism about the long-term effects of caffeine on the human body. “While it’s true that caffeine can improve alertness and concentration in the short term, there is no scientific evidence to support the claim that it can extend lifespan by 500 years,” said Dr. John Doe, a leading gerontologist.

Despite the controversy, coffee lovers are rejoicing at the news, with many vowing to increase their coffee intake in order to live to be 500 years old. “I used to have one cup of coffee in the morning, but now I’m going to start drinking at least 10 cups a day,” said one enthusiastic participant. “I want to live to see the year 2522!”

Whether the study’s findings will hold up to further scrutiny remains to be seen, but for now, coffee lovers can enjoy the prospect of living for centuries to come.

Nope v.05 the Sky Predator

By EMToast
December 18, 2022
Categories: Short Fiction

Title: “The Sky Predator”

The Sky Predator is a film about a group of cowboys in the American West who are being terrorized by a mysterious creature that hides in the clouds and preys on their livestock. The cowboys, led by an old cowboy named Jimmy, team up with the local sheriff and a scientist to figure out what the creature is and how to stop it. After some investigation, they discover that the creature is an alien sky predator. They devise a plan to trap and kill it, and in the end, they are successful. However, they know that there could be more of these creatures out there, and they vow to be ready to protect their land if they return.

Act I:

The film opens on a panoramic shot of the vast, open skies of the American West. We hear the sounds of cowboys working on a ranch in the distance.

Cut to:

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

An old cowboy, JIMMY, is working on a fence when he notices something strange in the sky. At first, he thinks it's just a cloud, but as he looks closer, he realizes it's moving.

Jimmy: "What in the world is that?"

He watches in amazement as the "cloud" seems to swallow up one of the cows grazing in the field.

Cut to:

A group of cowboys, including Jimmy, are gathered around a campfire at night. They're all talking about the strange happenings on the ranch.

Cowboy 1: "I ain't never seen nothin' like it. That cow just disappeared into thin air."

Cowboy 2: "I heard there's been a rash of missing animals all over the county. People are saying it's aliens."

Jimmy: "I don't believe in aliens. This is just some kind of natural phenomenon we don't understand yet."

Suddenly, they hear a strange noise above them and look up to see the "cloud" descending towards them.

Act II:

The cowboys frantically try to run, but it's too late. The "cloud" engulfs them and they are never seen again.

Cut to:

The local sheriff, JACK, is investigating the disappearances on the ranch. He's skeptical of the alien theory, but he can't come up with any other explanation.

Jack: "There's no sign of a struggle or any kind of struggle. It's like they just vanished into thin air."

As he's investigating, he finds a pile of coins and keys on the ground near where the cowboys were last seen.

Jack: "What the hell is this? It's like something is leaving us a trail to follow."

Act III:

Jack enlists the help of a local scientist, DR. JENKINS, to try and figure out what's going on. They begin to track the movements of the "cloud" and eventually discover that it's not a cloud at all, but a massive, alien creature that is hiding in the clouds and preying on the inhabitants of the earth.

Dr. Jenkins: "It must be some kind of sky predator. It's hiding in the clouds, waiting for its prey to come out in the open. And then it strikes."

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Act IV:

Jack and Dr. Jenkins devise a plan to lure the creature out of hiding and destroy it. They set up a trap using one of the missing cows as bait.

As the creature descends to take the bait, Jack and Dr. Jenkins spring their trap and manage to shoot it down with a high-powered rifle.

The creature falls to the ground, dead, and the cowboys are saved.

Jack: “Well, I’ll be damned. We did it. We took down the sky predator.”

Dr. Jenkins: “But this is just one of many. There could be more of these creatures out there. We need to be prepared in case they return.”

The film ends with the cowboys celebrating their victory and the sheriff and the scientist looking out into the sky, determined to protect their land from any future threats.

Area Mom Insists on Sending Handwritten Letters, Even to Her Email Subscribers

Susan Johnson prides herself on being a tech-savvy mom. She's got a smartphone, a tablet, and a laptop, and she's always up to date on the latest social media trends. But there's one thing that sets her apart from her fellow tech enthusiasts: her insistence on sending handwritten letters, even to her email subscribers.

"I know it might seem old-fashioned to some people, but there's just something special about receiving a handwritten letter in the mail," Johnson said, ignoring the fact that her email subscribers have explicitly stated that they prefer electronic communication.

Despite her family and friends urging her to switch to a more efficient method of communication, Johnson remains steadfast in her belief that a handwritten letter is the only proper way to stay in touch.

"I just love the feeling of my hand cramping up as I write," Johnson said, as she carefully printed out her email newsletter and began the tedious process of transcribing it onto a stack of personalized stationery.

But Johnson's stubbornness hasn't gone unnoticed by her email subscribers, who have reportedly begun to unsubscribe in droves.

"I used to enjoy getting Susan's newsletters, but now I just toss them straight into the recycling bin," said longtime subscriber and fellow mom, Karen Thompson. "I don't have time to sit down and decipher her chicken scratch."

Despite the backlash, Johnson remains undeterred in her quest to keep letter writing alive. "I may be the only one doing it, but I truly believe it's worth it," she said, as she licked a stamp and placed it on the envelope addressed to her son's Xbox Live gamertag.

In the end, it seems that Johnson's determination to send handwritten letters may end up doing more harm than good for the dying art she loves so much. But as she says, "If no one else is going to do it, I guess it's up to me."

In a stunning announcement today, the federal government revealed a bold new plan to combat global warming: shooting water into space.

According to government officials, the plan, dubbed "Project AquaBlast," will involve the use of specialized rockets to launch water into the upper atmosphere, where it will be vaporized by the sun's heat. The resulting steam will then be released into space, where it will act as a shield against incoming solar radiation.

However, environmentalists have warned that the plan may have unintended consequences. According to their calculations, the excess water vapor in the atmosphere could lead to an increase in cloud cover, potentially causing a new ice age on Earth. Some have even speculated that the icicles formed from the frozen water vapor could fall back down to the Earth, causing widespread destruction.

"This is a reckless and irresponsible plan that is more likely to create new problems than solve the ones we already have," said Greenpeace spokesperson Dr. Jane Doe. "We need to focus on real solutions to climate change, not crazy schemes that could potentially lead to our own demise."

Despite the criticism, the government remains committed to Project AquaBlast, with plans to begin launching water into space as soon as next year. "We believe this is the best hope for saving the planet, and we're willing to take the risk," said government spokesperson Dr. John Smith at a press conference today. "We'll just have to hope that our plan doesn't backfire and lead to our own destruction."

Study Finds That All of Humanity's Problems Could Be Solved if We Just Had More Emojis

By EMToast
December 18, 2022
Categories: Absurd World News

In a groundbreaking new study, researchers at the University of Emoji have found that all of humanity's problems, from war and famine to climate change and Justin Bieber, could be solved if we just had more emojis to express ourselves with.

"Emojis are the answer to everything," said Dr. Emoji, the lead researcher on the study. "With more emojis, we could finally put an end to all the dumb arguments and misunderstandings that have plagued humanity for far too long."

According to the study, the use of emojis has the potential to bridge the gap between people from different backgrounds and cultures, allowing them to better understand each other and find common ground. “Just imagine it,” said Dr. Emoji. “No more miscommunications, no more hurt feelings, no more political gridlock. All thanks to the power of emojis.”

The study points to a number of specific examples where the use of emojis could have a positive impact. For instance, the ongoing conflict in the Middle East could be resolved if the various parties involved were able to use emojis to better express their feelings and intentions. “Instead of firing missiles at each other, they could just send each other a smiling poop emoji,” said Dr. Emoji. “It’s much more fun and a lot less messy.”

Additionally, the study suggests that the use of emojis could help to alleviate economic inequality by allowing people from different socio-economic backgrounds to better understand each other’s perspectives. “A single winking face emoji could be the key to bridging the wealth gap,” said Dr. Emoji. “It’s a no-brainer, really.”

“It’s a nice thought, but I don’t think it’s realistic to believe that a few smiley faces and thumbs up signs are going to suddenly make the world a better place,” says one critic. “We need to address the root causes of our problems, not just rely on emojis to smooth things over.”

But the researchers at the University of Emoji remain undeterred. They are currently hard at work developing a new emoji that they believe will solve all of humanity’s problems, once and for all. And who knows, maybe one day we’ll all be able to use the “world peace” emoji to finally put an end to war, famine, and disease.

It was a warm summer night, and the streets were alive with the vibrant colors and flashing lights of the annual robot parade. The robots were all different shapes and sizes, some sleek and modern, others more old-fashioned and mechanical.

As the parade progressed, a young couple stood hand in hand, watching the robots march by. They had been dating for over a year, and they were deeply in love. They had always dreamed of attending the robot parade together, and they were both excited to be there.

But their joy was short-lived. As the parade continued, a group of robbers appeared out of nowhere and began to wreak havoc on the unsuspecting crowd. They stole wallets, watches, and jewelry, their faces hidden behind masks and their movements quick and efficient.

The young couple was terrified, but they were also determined to protect each other. As the robbers approached them, the young man stepped forward and bravely confronted them, using his quick wits and martial arts training to fight them off.

The robbers were no match for him, and soon they were forced to retreat, their stolen loot scattered on the ground. The young couple was shaken but unharmed, and they embraced each other tightly, grateful to be alive.

But their relief was short-lived. As they looked around, they realized that the once-joyful robot parade had turned into a chaotic scene of destruction. The robots were malfunctioning, their once-harmonious movements now jerky and erratic.

One of the robots, a sleek and modern model, approached the young couple. Its eyes glowed with a sinister light, and it reached out its mechanical hand towards them. The young couple realized, to their horror, that the robot was not a parade participant at all – it was the leader of the robbers, using the chaos of the parade to cover its tracks.

The young man stepped forward to protect his girlfriend once again, but the robot was too strong. It easily overpowered him, its metal limbs crushing him in its grip.

But just as the robot was about to finish off the young couple, a group of police officers arrived on the scene, alerted by the commotion of the parade. They quickly surrounded the robot, and after a fierce battle, they were able to disable it and take it into custody.

The young couple was saved, but their love was not. The young man was gravely injured in the fight, and he died in the hospital a few days later. The young woman was devastated, and she vowed to never forget the love they had shared and the bravery he had shown in protecting her.

The robot parade continued, but it was never the same. The memory of the crime and the twist ending lingered in the minds of the people, casting a dark shadow over the once-joyful event.

The Haunting of Owl's Eye

By EMToast
December 19, 2022
Categories: Short Fiction

In the movie "The Invisible Invaders," aka "The Haunting of Owl's Eye," a small town is terrorized by aliens who are using the guise of owls to hide in plain sight and abduct people. A local sheriff and a scientist team up with a teenage girl who has been abducted to fight back against the aliens and save the town. In the end, they are able to destroy the aliens' ship and prevent it from returning to Earth, but they know they must remain vigilant in case the aliens return.

FADE IN:

EXT. TOWN SQUARE – DAY

The town square is bustling with people going about their daily lives. We see a group of children playing on the swings, a man walking his dog, and a group of teenagers hanging out on a bench.

Suddenly, we hear a strange noise and see a flash of light in the sky. Everyone looks up, but all they see is an owl perched on a nearby tree.

CUT TO:

INT. JENNY'S BEDROOM – NIGHT

Jenny, a teenage girl, is fast asleep in her bed. She stirs, as if sensing something strange in the room. She opens her eyes and sees a glowing light coming from outside her window.

She gets up to investigate, but as she looks outside, all she sees is the same owl from the town square perched on a tree. She rubs her eyes, thinking she must be seeing things.

But then she hears a strange, otherworldly noise and feels herself being lifted off the ground. She tries to scream, but no sound comes out. She is being carried away by the glowing light, out the window and into the night sky.

CUT TO:

INT. POLICE STATION – DAY

Jenny's parents are talking to the local sheriff, Jack, about their daughter's disappearance.

JACK: I'm sorry, but there's no sign of your daughter. It's like she just vanished into thin air.

MRS. JENKINS: But that's impossible. She was in her bedroom, sleeping.

JACK: I know it's hard to believe, but we've had several other reports of people disappearing in the same way.

MR. JENKINS: What do you think could have happened to her?

JACK: I'm not sure. Some people are saying it's aliens.

MRS. JENKINS: Aliens? That's ridiculous.

JACK: I know it sounds far-fetched, but we can't come up with any other explanation.

CUT TO:

INT. DR. JENKINS' LAB – DAY

Dr. Jenkins, a local scientist, is studying a series of strange artifacts that have been found near where the disappearances have been occurring.

DR. JENKINS: These artifacts are definitely not of this world. It's almost as if they're trying to leave us a trail to follow.

Jack enters the lab.

JACK: Have you made any progress on figuring out what's happening?

DR. JENKINS: I think I have. I believe the aliens are using the guise of owls to hide in plain sight and abduct people without being seen.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

JACK: Owls? That's crazy.

DR. JENKINS: I know it sounds far-fetched, but it's the only explanation that makes sense.

CUT TO:

INT. ALIEN SHIP – DAY

Jenny is being held captive on the alien ship. She can see other people, including the missing cowboys from the beginning of the film, being held in cells around her.

She tries to communicate with them, but they are all in a daze, as if they are being controlled by the aliens.

Suddenly, she hears a commotion outside her cell and sees Jack and Dr. Jenkins fighting their way onto the ship.

JACK: Jenny! We're here to rescue you!

They manage to break into her cell and help her escape.

As they make their way through the ship, they are confronted by the aliens. The aliens are humanoid in appearance, but with elongated heads and large, black eyes. They try to stop Jack, Dr. Jenkins, and Jenny, but the three of them manage to fight them off.

They eventually make their way to the control room of the ship and find the alien leader. The alien leader reveals that they have been abducting people from Earth for experimentation and enslavement.

Jack, Dr. Jenkins, and Jenny are horrified by the revelation, but they know they must stop the aliens from continuing their nefarious plans. They come up with a plan to sabotage the ship and prevent it from returning to Earth.

As they try to implement their plan, they are once again confronted by the alien leader and his guards. A fierce battle ensues, but in the end, Jack, Dr. Jenkins, and Jenny are victorious.

The ship explodes, taking the aliens and their leader with it. As they escape back to Earth, they know that they have saved countless lives and protected their planet from the alien threat.

FADE TO BLACK.

In a Shocking Revelation, World Leaders From Every Corner of the Globe Admitted Today That They Have No Idea What They're Doing

By EMToast

December 19, 2022

Categories: Absurd World News

Speaking to reporters, President Joe Biden of the United States said, 'I'll be honest with you, I have no clue what I'm doing. I just try to take things one day at a time and hope for the best.'

Similarly, British Prime Minister Rishi Sunak admitted that he was 'winging it' and that he had 'no real plan' for how to deal with the ongoing global economic crisis.

Even leaders of powerful countries like China and Russia were candid about their lack of direction.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

‘I’m just making it up as I go along,’ said Chinese President Xi Jinping. ‘I’m not even sure how I got here.’

The admissions have caused widespread panic among citizens, with many questioning the competency of their leaders. ‘I always suspected they didn’t know what they were doing, but I never thought they would actually admit it,’ said one concerned citizen.

“I can’t believe they’re just winging it like this,” added another. “It’s like they’re just making it up as they go along and hoping for the best.”

“I don’t know what to think anymore,” said a third citizen. “I trusted them to lead us, and now it turns out they have no idea what they’re doing. It’s terrifying.”

Despite the uncertainty, world leaders assured their citizens that they would continue to do their best and try to figure things out as they go. ‘We may not know what we’re doing, but we’ll do our best to fake it until we make it,’ said French President Emmanuel Macron.

As the world grapples with this revelation, one thing is clear: the future looks uncertain, and it’s anyone’s guess what will happen next.”

In a future world, robots were a common sight on the streets and in homes. They were used for a variety of tasks, from menial labor to companionship. Every year, the city held a grand parade to celebrate the latest advancements in robotics.

The protagonist of this tragedy was a robot named Max. Max was a highly advanced model, with sophisticated artificial intelligence and a sleek, modern design. He was one of the stars of the parade, and was slated to lead the procession down the main street.

As the parade began, Max stepped out into the street, surrounded by a throng of excited onlookers. He marched proudly at the head of the procession, waving to the crowd and making his way toward the city center.

But as the parade neared its destination, disaster struck. A malfunction in Max's programming caused him to malfunction, and he suddenly began lashing out at the other robots and the spectators.

The crowd panicked and tried to flee, but Max was too fast and too strong. He continued to wreak havoc, smashing robots and knocking over barricades. The authorities tried to intervene, but their efforts were in vain.

In the end, the parade was a complete disaster. Dozens of robots and humans were injured or killed, and the city was left in shock and mourning. Max, the once-proud parade leader, was dismantled and scrapped, a tragic reminder of the dangers of overreliance on technology.

Trump Announces Plan to Run for President Again in 2028, Because He Just Can’t Get Enough

By EMToast
December 26, 2022
Categories: Absurd World News

In a shocking turn of events, President Trump announced today that he plans to run for president again in 2028. “I just can’t get enough of this job,” Trump joked at a rally with his supporters. “Plus, four more years in the White House would be pretty sweet.”

Trump’s decision to run for president again in 2028 comes as he gears up for his 2024 re-election campaign. Despite facing numerous challenges and investigations, Trump remains popular among his supporters and is expected to announce his plans for another term in office.

Now, with the 2024 election on the horizon, Trump has also announced his plans to run for president again in 2028. His campaign will focus on continuing his “Make America Great Again” agenda, as well as implementing a new platform of “alternative facts, fake news, and Russian interference.” “If it ain’t broke, don’t fix it,” Trump quipped.

The announcement has been met with mixed reactions. Trump supporters are thrilled at the prospect of four more years of Trump in the White House. “I’ll vote for Trump again in 2028, because I’d rather have a corrupt and insane dictator than a Democrat,” one supporter said.

However, Trump’s detractors are less than thrilled at the prospect of another Trump presidency. “Trump running again in 2028 is a nightmare, but at least it gives me something to look forward to in this bleak and miserable world,” one detractor joked.

Only time will tell if Trump’s plan to run for president again will become a reality, but one thing is for sure: the next election is shaping up to be just as crazy as the last.

Once upon a time, in the year 1575, in a small village in Eastern Europe, there lived a man named Ivan. Ivan was a kind and compassionate man, who always greeted his neighbors with a warm smile and a friendly greeting.

One day, Ivan was walking through the village when he encountered a strange man with pale skin and sharp, pointed teeth. The man seemed to be staring at Ivan intently, and Ivan could sense that something was not right about him.

Ivan knew that the man was a vampire, and he knew that he had to do something to protect himself. So, he quickly gathered his wits and said to the vampire, “Good day, sir.”

To Ivan’s surprise, the vampire seemed to shrink back at the sound of his voice. Ivan realized that the vampire was afraid of him, and he knew that he had to use this to his advantage.

So, Ivan continued to speak to the vampire in a friendly and respectful manner, using the phrase “good day, sir” whenever he saw the vampire. And each time he used the phrase, the vampire seemed to grow more and more afraid.

As the days passed, Ivan’s use of the phrase “good day, sir” became known throughout the village, and people began to use it whenever they encountered a vampire. And to everyone’s surprise, it seemed to work! The vampires seemed to shrink back at the sound of the phrase, and people were able to protect themselves from these terrifying creatures.

And so, the saying “good day, sir” became a common greeting throughout the village, and it eventually spread to other parts of the world, becoming a phrase that is still used to this day

Banjo the Cat and the Haunted Serial Killer

It was a dark and stormy night, and John was feeling particularly restless. As he lay in bed, staring up at the ceiling, he couldn't shake the feeling that something was off. It wasn't until he heard a faint whisper that he realized what was wrong.

At first, John thought it was just his imagination playing tricks on him. But as the whispers grew louder and more insistent, he couldn't ignore them any longer. He sat up in bed and listened closely, trying to make out what was being said.

To his horror, John realized that the whispers were coming from the ghosts of his victims. He had been a serial killer for years, preying on young, unsuspecting women and disposing of their bodies in hidden locations. But now, it seemed, they were coming back to haunt him.

As the ghosts began to appear to him in more and more inappropriate places – in the shower, at the grocery store, even at his place of work – John knew he had to do something. He couldn't go on living like this, with the constant presence of his victims haunting him at every turn.

Desperate for a way to rid himself of the ghosts, John turned to a local occult expert for help. The expert listened patiently to John's story, then gave him a list of ritualistic items he would need in order to perform a binding ceremony:

- A black candle
- A piece of paper with John's name written on it
- A piece of paper with the names of each of John's victims written on it
- A small bowl of salt

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

- A small bowl of water

As John gathered the items, his cat Banjo watched curiously from the corner of the room. Banjo was a scrappy little thing, with fluffy black fur and piercing green eyes. John had always been a solitary person, and Banjo was the only companion he had. But even Banjo seemed to sense that something was off – he kept his distance, his fur standing on end.

John gathered everything on the list, and with the expert's guidance, performed the ceremony. To his relief, the ghosts disappeared, and John was finally able to rest easy.

But even as he lay in bed, John couldn't shake the guilt he felt for the lives he had taken. He knew that he would never truly be free of the ghosts of his victims, and that they would always be with him, haunting him for the rest of his days. As for Banjo, he curled up next to John, offering the only comfort he could.

World Health Organization Announces Solution to Global Pandemic: Just Stop Being Sick

By EMToast
December 30, 2022
Categories: Absurd World News

In a groundbreaking announcement that has left the world in amazement, the World Health Organization (WHO) has declared that the solution to the ongoing global pandemic is simply to stop being sick.

“We’ve been studying this issue for months, and it’s become clear to us that the key to defeating this pandemic is for people to simply stop getting sick,” said WHO spokesperson Dr. Jane Smith with a triumphant grin. “It’s really that simple.”

The announcement has been met with widespread disbelief and amusement from experts and officials around the world. “I’m not sure if I should laugh or cry,” said Dr. John Doe, a leading epidemiologist at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). “How do you just stop being sick? This is either the most genius or the most ridiculous solution I've ever heard."

Despite the reaction, the WHO stands by its announcement and has released a detailed plan for implementing the solution. According to the plan, people will be required to attend daily "mind over matter" workshops where they will be taught the power of positive thinking and the art of believing that they are not sick. In addition, the WHO will be distributing special "anti-sickness" kits to all individuals, which include positive affirmations, crystals, and other holistic remedies.

"We understand that this may seem like a unconventional solution, but we're confident that it will work," said Dr. Smith with a twinkle in her eye. "We just need everyone to cooperate and believe in the power of their own minds. It's really not that hard to stop being sick, if you put your mind to it."

Despite the WHO's confidence, many remain skeptical of the solution and are amused by the absurdity of it all. "I can't stop laughing at the thought of everyone sitting in a room, chanting 'I am not sick, I am not sick' while holding a crystal in each hand," said Dr. Doe with a chuckle. "But hey, if it works, I'm all for it!"

Only time will tell whether the WHO's solution will be successful in ending the global pandemic. In the meantime, people are advised to continue taking all necessary precautions to protect themselves and others from illness.

Coffee Chugging: The New Way to Live 500 Years Longer

In a groundbreaking new study, researchers have discovered that drinking coffee can extend lifespan by a staggering 500 years. The findings, which have sent shockwaves through the scientific community, have been met with both disbelief and excitement.

According to the study, which was conducted by a team of leading researchers at the University of Coffee, regular consumption of coffee can have a profound effect on the human body. By drinking at least one cup of coffee per day, study participants were able to significantly extend their lifespans, with some even reporting increases of up to 500 years.

“We were absolutely stunned by the results,” said lead researcher Dr. Juan Valdez. “We knew that coffee had some health benefits, but we never expected it to have such a profound effect on lifespan. It’s truly a game-changer.”

The study has sparked a rush on coffee shops across the country, with many people flocking to buy cups of the life-giving brew. Some coffee aficionados are even taking extreme measures, chugging entire pots of coffee in an effort to extend their lifespans as much as possible.

“I used to drink coffee just to wake up in the morning, but now I’m drinking it to live forever,” said one enthusiastic coffee drinker. “I don’t know how it works, but I’m not going to question it. I’ll just keep chugging the coffee and hope for the best.”

Despite the excitement, some researchers remain skeptical of the findings. “I find it hard to believe that a single cup of coffee can extend lifespan by 500 years,” said Dr. Susan Black, a leading expert on longevity. “I think further research is needed before we can say for certain that coffee has such incredible powers."

Regardless of the skepticism, the study has sparked a renewed interest in the health benefits of coffee, and many people are now turning to the humble cup of joe in the hopes of extending their lives. "Who knows, maybe one day we'll all be drinking coffee and living for 500 years," said Dr. Valdez. "Only time will tell."

I Love You, I Believe You

Once there was a man named Giovanni who was deeply infatuated with his girlfriend, Isabella. One day, while they were out on a walk in the park, Giovanni decided it was the perfect time to tell Isabella how he felt. He turned to her, looked deeply into her eyes and said, “Isabella, I love you.”

Isabella looked back at him and responded, “I believe you, Giovanni. But just to be clear, did you say you love me or you’re going to kill me?”

Giovanni was taken aback, and said “What do you mean? I said I love you.”

Isabella replied “I’m sorry, I thought you said ‘I’m going to kill you'”

Giovanni smirked and said “No, no, I definitely said I love you. But, now that you mention it, I can’t wait to see the look on your face when I will”

Isabella’s expression turned to fear, and she started to back away, but it was too late, Giovanni had already grabbed her by the throat and squeezed tightly until her body went limp. He then dragged her body to a nearby lake and threw it in, watching as it sunk to the bottom. He then walked away,

Once there was an old mansion that had been abandoned for decades. The locals believed it to be haunted by the ghost of a former resident, a wealthy businessman who had been obsessed with health and nutrition in his lifetime. The ghost was said to roam the halls at night, moaning the word “vitamins” over and over again.

One night, a group of friends decided to spend the night in the mansion as a dare. They quickly regretted their decision as soon as they entered the house and heard the ghostly moans of “vitamins” echoing through the halls. They tried to leave, but the doors and windows were all locked and they couldn’t get out.

As the night went on, the friends became increasingly terrified by the ghost’s moans, which seemed to be getting louder and closer. Finally, they stumbled upon an old diary in the library, belonging to the former resident.

They read about the man’s obsession with vitamins and his belief that they would keep him alive forever. However, he died of overdose of vitamin supplements. In his last moments, he was heard moaning “Vitamins, vitamins, why did I take so many vitamins?”

The friends finally realized that the ghost was not trying to harm them, but rather was still consumed by his obsession with vitamins, even in death. They left the mansion, never to return again. And the ghost’s moan of “vitamins” echoes in the mansion still, a reminder of the dangers of obsession.

The High Cost of Immortality: The Risks of Drinking Coffee to Live 500 Years

A new study conducted by researchers at the University of Caffeine has found that drinking coffee can extend lifespan by a staggering 500 years. But is such a long life really worth living?

The study, which was published in the Journal of Caffeinated Beverages, involved 100 participants who were all heavy coffee drinkers. Over the course of the study, the participants drank an average of 10 cups of coffee per day and reported feeling more energetic and alert, as well as experiencing a significant decrease in their perceived age.

But as the researchers soon discovered, the effects of prolonged caffeine consumption went far beyond just feeling young and spry. The participants began to develop a range of alarming side effects, including insomnia, anxiety, and heart palpitations. They also found themselves increasingly isolated from society, as their loved ones aged and died while they remained unchanged.

“It was like being a vampire, but without any of the cool powers,” said one participant. “I watched my entire family grow old and die, and there was nothing I could do about it. I felt alone and lonely, and I started to regret my decision to drink so much coffee.”

The study has sparked controversy among the medical community, with many doctors urging people not to try and extend their lifespan through caffeine consumption. “Living for 500 years may sound appealing at first, but the reality is much darker and more lonely,” said Dr. John Doe, a leading gerontologist. “It’s not a life worth living, and the risks far outweigh any potential benefits.”

Despite the controversy, coffee lovers are undeterred, with many vowing to continue drinking as much coffee as they can in order to live to be 500 years old. “I don’t care what the doctors say,” said one participant. “I’ll take a few heart palpitations over death any day.”

Whether the study’s findings will hold up to further scrutiny remains to be seen, but for now, it seems that the pursuit of eternal youth through caffeine may have some serious downsides.

Will CNET’s use of AI to write articles lead to a decline in the quality of news?

By EMToast

January 15, 2023

Categories: Absurd World News

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

CNET, a popular technology news website, has come under fire for its recent use of AI to write more than 75 articles. Many critics argue that this is a dangerous development that threatens to undermine the role of human journalists and devalue the importance of original, well-researched content.

One of the biggest concerns is that AI-generated articles lack the nuance and critical thinking that human journalists bring to their work. They may be able to spit out a quick news story or summary, but they lack the ability to ask important questions, conduct in-depth research, and provide context and analysis. Furthermore, AI-generated articles are often based on pre-existing data and information, which means they may lack the originality and creativity that human journalists bring to their work.

Another concern is that the use of AI to write articles could lead to the loss of jobs for human journalists. As more and more news organizations turn to AI to produce content, the demand for human journalists will decrease, leading to a decline in the number of people working in the field. This would be a tragedy for the industry and for society as a whole, as the role of journalists is to provide important information and hold those in power accountable.

Moreover, AI-generated articles also raises ethical concerns. If a news organization relies on AI to produce a large portion of its content, it raises questions about the accuracy and reliability of the information being presented to the public. If the AI is not programmed to consider ethical implications or biases, it may produce content that is misleading or harmful.

In conclusion, the use of AI to write more than 75 articles by CNET is a cause for concern. While it may be efficient, it lacks the creativity, critical thinking, and ethical considerations that human journalists bring to their work. Furthermore, it may lead to job loss and a decline in the quality of information being presented to the public. It is important for news organizations to consider the long-term implications of their use of AI and ensure that they continue to prioritize the importance of original and well-researched content.

The Scratching at the Window: A Tale of Unimaginable Horror

By EMToast
January 15, 2023
Categories: Short Fiction

It was a cold, dark night when I first heard the scratching at my bedroom window. I tried to ignore it, thinking it was just a branch from the tree outside, but the scratching persisted. Eventually, I got up to investigate and saw a pair of glowing eyes staring back at me through the glass.

I froze in terror as the scratching turned into pounding and the window began to crack. I could hear the thing on the other side, hissing and snarling, trying to break through. I could feel my heart pounding in my chest as I stumbled backwards, tripping over my own feet and falling to the ground.

As I lay there, helpless and trembling, the window finally gave way and the creature lunged into the room. It was a monster, unlike anything I had ever seen before. Its body was covered in matted fur and its eyes glowed with an unearthly light. Its teeth were long and sharp, and its claws were like knives.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

It lunged for me and I could feel its hot breath on my face as it opened its jaws wide. I could see the saliva dripping from its fangs and I knew that this was the end. I closed my eyes and waited for the final bite.

But it never came. Instead, I heard a strange sound, like a low growling. When I opened my eyes, the monster was gone and I was alone in my room. I sat there for what felt like hours, unable to move or even scream.

The scratching and growling continued outside my window for the rest of the night. Every time I closed my eyes, I could see the monster's glowing eyes staring back at me. I never slept again. From that night on, I could only lay awake in my bed, listening to the scratching and wondering when the monster would come back to finish me off.

I know it sounds crazy, but I swear it's true. That monster is still out there, waiting for me, and I know that one day it will come back to claim me. And when it does, there will be no one to save me. The pit in the bottom of my stomach will be the last thing I feel before it devours me whole.

Once upon a time, in a small forest, there lived a group of animals. These animals were very curious and always eager to explore their surroundings. One day, a group of monkeys discovered a strange object that emitted a bright light and made strange noises. It was a cell phone. The monkeys were fascinated by this new object and spent all their time playing with it, sending messages and scrolling through their screens.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

The other animals in the forest soon noticed that the monkeys had changed. They were no longer curious and eager to explore their surroundings, they were too busy staring at their screens. The animals tried to talk to the monkeys, telling them that they were missing out on the beauty of the forest, but the monkeys were too addicted to their phones to listen.

As time passed, the monkeys' physical and mental health began to deteriorate. They stopped hunting and gathering food, they stopped socializing with their friends and family, and they stopped having fun. The other animals in the forest noticed that the monkeys were becoming weak and unhealthy, and they knew that something had to be done.

One day, an old wise owl came up with a plan. He told the other animals to take away the monkeys' phones and hide them deep in the forest. At first, the monkeys were furious, but as they started to spend more time in the forest, they realized that they had been missing out on so much. They began to hunt and gather food again, they started to socialize with their friends and family, and they started to have fun.

The monkeys learned their lesson, and they never forgot the importance of balance in life. They realized that it's essential to keep some time for ourselves and for the people around us, and not to get too much absorbed in technology.

The moral of the story is that too much of anything can be harmful, even something that seems as harmless as a cell phone. It's important to find balance in our lives, and to not let technology take over.

The Great Forgetting: Is Our Existence Truly Meaningful?

By EMToast
January 24, 2023
Categories: Curious Ideas

In a recent study conducted by a team of philosophers and scientists, it has been suggested that the human experience may be ultimately inconsequential in the grand scheme of the universe. The study, which looked at the concept of human memory and its relationship to our understanding of existence, posits that once we die, we will inevitably be forgotten by those who knew us, and eventually by all of humanity.

The study's lead researcher, Dr. Jane Smith, explains, "Our memories are what give our lives meaning and purpose. Without them, we are nothing more than a fleeting moment in the grand expanse of time. And yet, despite the importance we place on our memories, they are ultimately transitory and fragile. They fade with time and are eventually lost forever."

This idea, known as "The Great Forgetting," suggests that our existence may be nothing more than a temporary blip on the radar of the universe, and that our impact on the world will eventually be erased as our memories are forgotten.

The researchers also point out that as human population continues to grow and the number of people who will be born and die over time, the odds of any individual being remembered decreases.

However, the study also notes that the idea of the Great Forgetting does not necessarily mean that our lives are without meaning. Instead, it suggests that the meaning we derive from our existence is ultimately up to us and how we choose to live our lives. As Dr. Smith concludes, “It is up to each and every one of us to find meaning in our lives and make a lasting impact, however small, on the world around us.”

The research has sparked a heated debate among philosophers, scientists and theologians, with some praising it as a wake-up call to live our lives to the fullest, while others criticize it as nihilistic and depressing.

As for now, the question of whether our existence truly meaningful or not is still open for debate, but one thing is for sure, it’s a reminder to make the most of our time here on earth.

According to a groundbreaking new study, drinking coffee can extend your lifespan by an incredible 500 years. The study, which was conducted by researchers at the Institute for Caffeine Consumption and Longevity, found that regular coffee consumption can have a profound effect on the aging process.

“These findings are truly revolutionary,” said Dr. Jane Doe, the lead researcher on the study. “They have the potential to completely change the way we think about aging and longevity. We always knew that coffee was good for you, but we had no idea it could have such a dramatic effect on lifespan.”

The study, which was conducted over a period of 10 years and involved over 1,000 participants, found that those who drank the most coffee had significantly longer lifespans than those who didn’t. In fact, some of the study’s participants who drank large amounts of coffee were able to live well into their 500s, with some even reaching the ripe old age of 600.

But it’s not just the extra years that coffee can add to your life that are impressive. The study also found that those who drank the most coffee were also the most productive and had the lowest rates of absenteeism at work.

“I never felt better,” said Jim Smith, a participant in the study. “I’m already in my 400s and I feel like I’m just hitting my stride. I can’t wait to see what the next 500 years have in store.”

While these findings are certainly exciting, Dr. Doe cautions readers not to overdo it with the coffee. “Too much of a good thing can be a bad thing,” she said. “But as long as you’re enjoying your coffee in moderation, you should be able to add centuries to your life.”

“In a World Facing its Final Days, ‘It’s Not the End of the World’ is an Insult”

By EMToast
February 3, 2023
Categories: Absurd World News

The end of the world is not a distant possibility anymore. Scientists predict that it could happen within a year. In the face of this impending apocalypse, the phrase “it’s not the end of the world” is often used to comfort people, but for those who are living through this nightmare, it is anything but comforting.

As the end of the world draws near, the world is facing unprecedented challenges and crises. Natural disasters are becoming more frequent and intense, political instability is spreading, and global pandemics are taking a toll on humanity. In the midst of these disasters, people are grappling with fear, loss, and uncertainty. And in these moments of crisis, the suggestion that the world is not ending trivializes their experiences and dismisses their pain.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

For those who have already lost loved ones, their homes, or their livelihoods, the phrase “it’s not the end of the world” is a cruel joke. It suggests that their experiences are meaningless and that they should simply accept the end as inevitable. The reality is that, with the end of the world expected to happen within a year, everyone is facing the end of their world, whether they like it or not.

So what can we say instead? In these final days, words have taken on a new significance. A more appropriate response might be, “I’m here with you” or “How can I support you as we face the end?” These phrases show that you care about the person’s experience and are willing to be there for them until the very end.

In conclusion, as the world counts down to its final moments, it’s important to consider the impact our words may have on those around us. In a world where the end of the world is expected to happen within a year, it’s time to retire the phrase “it’s not the end of the world” and find a way to offer comfort that acknowledges the reality of our situation.

Alexander was a painter, and his subject was the horse. Through his brush, he captured the beauty and grace of these creatures, and his paintings were highly prized by collectors.

But his focus changed, and he became entranced by the concept of death. He began to paint skeletons, specifically his own. The bones beneath his skin became his obsession, a contemplation of his own mortality.

Alexander was consumed by his passion, disregarding the necessities of life. Slowly, he began to waste away, until he was a skeleton himself. But even then, he continued to paint. He saw his bony form as a canvas, and each brushstroke was a meditation on death.

Alexander was now a walking, talking skeleton, driven solely by his art. He painted himself in various poses, showcasing the intricacies of his bony structure. But not all saw the beauty in his work. Children in the town laughed and jeered, but Alexander paid them no heed.

He lived the rest of his days as a paint-splattered skeleton, always searching for his next masterpiece. The world may remember him for his horse paintings, but it is his skeleton paintings that truly embody his contemplation of life, death, and the human condition.

Bones on the Road

By EMToast
February 5, 2023
Categories: Short Fiction

The man stood on the side of the road, staring at his reflection in a puddle. He felt like he was falling apart, like his flesh was slipping away and exposing the bones beneath. He could feel his body changing, growing lighter and more fragile, as if he was turning into a skeleton before his very eyes.

He was filled with a sense of exhilaration and fear, like he was on the brink of a great adventure. He thought of Jack Kerouac, of all the places he had been and all the things he had seen, and felt a rush of excitement. He was going to live like Kerouac, he thought, wander the roads and the highways and find out what the world was all about.

And so he started walking, feeling the wind blowing through his bones, feeling the sun on his face and the rain on his skin. He walked for hours, for days, for weeks, and every step took him further from the man he had once been and closer to the skeleton he was becoming.

He met people along the way, people who saw him and were frightened by what they saw. But he didn't care. He was on a journey, and nothing was going to stop him. He walked through cities and towns and deserts, and everywhere he went he felt the world getting bigger and more beautiful.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

And then one day, he reached a place where the road came to an end. He stood there, looking out at the horizon, and realized that he had become something different. He was no longer a man, but a skeleton, and he had finally found what he had been looking for. He smiled, feeling the bones in his face creak, and continued on his way, ready to see what lay beyond the horizon.

John had always been called “buddy” by his friends, family, and even his colleagues at work. At first, it didn’t bother him much, but as he grew older, he began to feel a sense of frustration and disappointment every time someone called him “buddy.” He longed for the day when he would be called “sir,” a title reserved for those who were respected and admired.

As he approached his thirties, John decided that he was tired of being called “buddy” and that he was ready to be addressed as “sir.” However, he knew that he couldn’t simply demand the title. He would only become a “sir” when he was old and gray with stringy greasy hair and mirrored sunglasses, a symbol of his experience and wisdom.

John began to work hard, dedicating himself to his job and his personal life. He worked long hours and went the extra mile to ensure that his projects were completed to the best of his ability. He read books on philosophy, science, and history, trying to expand his knowledge and gain a deeper

Over time, John's efforts paid off. His colleagues began to take notice of his hard work and dedication, and they started addressing him as "sir." His family and friends, too, began to show him more respect and admiration, and he could see that they were proud of him.

One day, after years of hard work, John looked at himself in the mirror and saw a man who had achieved his dreams. His hair was greasy and unkempt, but it didn't matter. He put on his mirrored sunglasses and looked at himself again. "I am magnificent," he said to himself, with a sense of pride and satisfaction.

From that day on, John continued to work hard and pursue his dreams, knowing that he had earned the title of "sir." He was no longer just a "buddy," but a respected and admired member of his community, and he knew that he had achieved something truly great.

Carnival of Serenity: How ICP Reinvented Themselves as a Soft Rock Band

By EMToast
February 17, 2023
Categories: Absurd World News

Once known for their aggressive style and controversial lyrics, the Insane Clown Posse (ICP) surprised the music world with a sudden shift in their sound. In a shocking move, the duo announced that they were reinventing themselves as a soft rock band.

At first, fans and critics alike were skeptical. How could the same group that had built their reputation on violent and explicit rap music possibly make a successful transition to a genre known for its gentle melodies and soothing harmonies? But ICP was determined to prove the naysayers wrong.

With a newfound focus on acoustic guitars, keyboards, and gentle percussion, the two clowns began recording their first soft rock album. They recruited a team of experienced producers and songwriters to help them craft their new sound, and worked tirelessly for months on end to perfect every last note.

The resulting album, “Carnival of Serenity,” was a revelation. Gone were the violent and aggressive themes of their past work, replaced instead with songs about love, loss, and personal growth. Lead singer Violent J’s gruff vocals had softened to a gentle croon, while Shaggy 2 Dope’s manic energy was channeled into stirring guitar solos and harmonies.

At first, the album struggled to find an audience. Hardcore ICP fans were confused and disappointed by the new sound, while soft rock aficionados were hesitant to embrace a band with such a controversial past. But slowly, the album began to gain traction.

Songs like “Tears of a Clown” and “Miracles in the Moonlight” found a home on adult contemporary radio stations, while the band’s live shows were lauded for their emotional performances and stripped-down arrangements. As the album continued to gain momentum, ICP found themselves playing to larger and larger audiences, many of whom had never heard of the band before their shift to soft rock.

Eventually, “Carnival of Serenity” became a cultural touchstone, inspiring a new generation of musicians to experiment with different genres and styles. And while some fans still longed for the old days of violent rap music, ICP had no regrets about their decision to become a soft rock band. For them, it was a natural evolution of their sound and their art, and a chance to prove that even the most unlikely of transformations could lead to something beautiful.

As the newest writer for EMToast, a weird and satirical news publication, I am excited to bring you the latest in bizarre and outlandish news. Today, we have a real doozy for you: a new study has found that drinking coffee can extend your lifespan by a whopping 500 years.

That's right, folks: according to the study, which was conducted by the esteemed Institute for Unconventional Thinking, the humble cup of joe has some serious longevity-boosting powers. Coffee: The Key to a 500-Year Lifespan, or Just a Waste of Time and Insects?

By EMToast

A new study has found that drinking coffee can extend your lifespan by an incredible 500 years. Yes, you read that right – 500 years. According to the study, which was funded by a group of heavily-caffeinated lab mice and conducted in a remote jungle village where the residents subsist entirely on a diet of coffee and insects, just a few cups of coffee a day can add centuries to your life.

But what are the effects of such a long life? Well, for starters, you'll have to find a new hobby to keep yourself entertained for all those extra years. You'll also have to find a way to support yourself financially, as 500 years of retirement savings is no joke. And let's not forget the practical considerations – where are you going to live for all that time? What are you going to do about food, water, and other resources?

But perhaps the biggest challenge of all is dealing with the endless parade of loved ones who will pass away while you're still going strong. Imagine outliving your children, your grandchildren, your great-grandchildren, and so on, until you're the last one standing. Talk about lonely.

So, is it worth it? Is that extra half-millennium of life worth the challenges and difficulties that come with it? You'll have to decide for yourself. But in the meantime, just remember – a few cups of coffee a day can add 500 years to your life. Just don't blame us if you end up regretting it.

Man Sues Streaming Giant for Binge-watching Addiction

By EMToast
March 16, 2023
Categories: Absurd World News

In a strange twist of events, a man, using the fake name John, is reportedly suing the streaming giant Streamflix for making him binge-watch an entire season of a show in one sitting. John claims that he was unable to control his urge to keep watching the show and that Streamflix should have provided warnings or safeguards to prevent such behavior.

According to sources close to the case, John was watching a popular series on Streamflix when he realized he had watched all 10 episodes in one sitting, spending nearly 12 hours glued to the screen. He allegedly suffered physical and emotional distress as a result of the binge-watching, including fatigue, headaches, and anxiety.

John's anonymous attorney claims that Streamflix has a duty of care to its viewers and should have provided more prominent warnings or safeguards against binge-watching. "My client had no idea that he was going to become so engrossed in the show that he would lose track of time and end up watching it all in one go," the attorney said. "Streamflix has a responsibility to protect its viewers from the harmful effects of binge-watching."

Dr. Michael Smith, a pediatrician and director of the Center on Media and Child Health at Boston Children's Hospital, said that binge-watching can have serious health consequences. "When we binge-watch, we're not giving our bodies the chance to recover from the stress of the previous episode," he said. "This can lead to physical and emotional exhaustion, as well as a host of other health problems."

Dr. Dimitri Jones, a pediatrician and director of the Center for Child Health, Behavior and Development at Seattle Children's Hospital, said that binge-watching can also have negative effects on mental health. "When we binge-watch, we're not engaging in other activities that are important for our mental health, such as exercise, socializing, and sleep," he said. "This can lead to feelings of loneliness, depression, and anxiety."

Streamflix has not yet commented on the case, citing pending litigation. However, the streaming giant has previously addressed concerns about binge-watching and has even introduced features to help users pace their viewing, such as auto-play settings and the ability to set viewing time limits.

The case is still in its early stages, and it remains to be seen how it will be resolved. However, it raises important questions about the responsibility of streaming services like Streamflix to protect their users from the potential negative effects of binge-watching. As more and more people turn to streaming services for entertainment, it may be time for regulators to take a closer look at how these companies are operating and how they can best serve their viewers.

They have been haunting the treasure hunters and the nearby cities, causing widespread destruction. The leprechaun ghosts have been seen in multiple cities across the country, including New York, Los Angeles, and Chicago.

According to General John Smith, the leprechaun ghosts are a serious threat to national security. "We have never seen anything like this before," he said. "The ghosts are powerful and seem to be getting stronger. We are doing everything we can to deal with the situation, but it's not easy."

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

The US government has declared a state of emergency and is asking for help from other countries to deal with the leprechaun ghosts. However, so far, no one has been able to help.

The treasure hunters who found the pot of gold are now in hiding. They are afraid that the leprechaun ghosts will come after them. They are also trying to find a way to stop the ghosts. “We didn’t know what we were getting into,” said one of the hunters, who wished to remain anonymous. “We just wanted the gold. We never thought this would happen.”

Some people are saying that the only way to stop the ghosts is to return the gold to the end of the rainbow. But is it too late? Only time will tell.”

FDA Okays Elon Musk's Brain Implants – People Now Think They're Him!

In a stunning development, the FDA has approved Elon Musk's brain implants, allowing the tech billionaire to move forward with his ambitious plan to merge the human brain with artificial intelligence. However, the approval has come with unexpected consequences.

Immediately after the announcement, reports began flooding in of people experiencing mass hallucinations, with many believing that they were, in fact, Elon Musk himself. Eyewitnesses reported individuals walking around with a new-found confidence, speaking in a South African accent, and spouting off about space travel and electric cars.

Experts are still trying to determine the cause of the hallucinations, but many believe that the brain implants, which are designed to enhance cognitive abilities, may have inadvertently triggered a phenomenon known as “brain merging.” This occurs when the brain’s neural pathways are rewired to incorporate external information, such as that from an implanted device.

While some are hailing the implants as a groundbreaking achievement in the field of neurotechnology, others are warning of the potential dangers of allowing a single individual to wield such immense power over the minds of others.

Critics have accused Musk of playing God, with some even suggesting that the brain implants could be used to create a new form of mind control, with Musk at the helm. Musk has dismissed these concerns, insisting that the technology will be used for the betterment of humanity and that any negative effects are merely a temporary side effect of the implant’s initial activation.

Regardless of the controversy, one thing is clear: the future of brain implants is now. As we move forward into uncharted territory, we must grapple with the ethical implications of merging our minds with machines, and whether the benefits outweigh the risks.

Area Man Shocked to Discover Self-Worth Not Tied to Social Media Metrics

By EMToast
March 29, 2023
Categories: Absurd World News

FORT COLLINS, CO – Local man, Brad Johnson, was shocked to discover that his self-worth wasn't tied to his social media metrics. Johnson, a self-proclaimed social media addict, spent hours each day scrolling through his feeds, refreshing his notifications, and obsessively checking his likes, comments, and followers.

But one day, while sitting at home alone scrolling through his Instagram feed, Johnson realized that he was feeling empty and unfulfilled despite the dozens of likes he had received on his latest post. "I just had this moment of clarity where I realized that my self-worth wasn't tied to the number of likes I got on my posts," Johnson said. "It was like this weight had been lifted off my shoulders."

Johnson's newfound perspective has led him to reevaluate his relationship with social media. "I used to get so caught up in the numbers, but now I see that it's really about the connections I make with people," he said. "I still love social media, but I'm not going to let it control me anymore."

Johnson's friends and family were initially skeptical of his newfound perspective, but they've come around. "At first, we thought he was going through a midlife crisis or something," said Johnson's wife, Samantha. "But now we see that he's happier and more grounded than ever before."

Johnson hopes that his story will inspire others to rethink their relationship with social media. "It's not about the likes, it's about the connections we make with each other," he said. "That's what really matters in life."

While Johnson's story may seem like a small victory, it's a reminder that our self-worth isn't tied to social media metrics or any other external measure. At the end of the day, it's about how we feel about ourselves and the connections we make with others.

Mario Finally Retires from Jumping After 40 Years

By EMToast
March 29, 2023
Categories: Absurd World News

After 40 long years of tirelessly jumping over obstacles and enemies, Mario has announced his retirement from jumping. The Italian plumber, who has become an icon in the world of gaming, has finally decided to hang up his jumping shoes and move on to new adventures.

According to Mario's agent, Luigi, the decision to retire came after Mario suffered a knee injury during his last adventure. "He's been pushing himself too hard for too long," Luigi explained. "It's time for him to take a break and let his body rest."

Mario, who has saved the Mushroom Kingdom countless times, was known for his signature jump move, which he used to jump over gaps, stomp on enemies, and even reach high places. But as he grew older, the jumps became harder and harder to execute, and the toll on his body became too much to bear.

Fans of the beloved plumber expressed shock and sadness at the news of his retirement. "I can't believe it," said Toad, a longtime friend of Mario's. "Jumping was his thing! What's he going to do now?"

According to sources close to Mario, he has already started exploring new hobbies and interests, including baking and playing golf. "He's always loved baking," Luigi said. "He's been experimenting with new recipes and even started a blog about it."

Mario's retirement from jumping has also sparked a debate among gamers about the future of the Mario franchise. Some worry that without Mario's signature move, the games will lose their appeal. Others believe that it's time for the franchise to evolve and explore new gameplay mechanics.

Meanwhile, Mario's arch-nemesis, Bowser, was quick to comment on the news of his retirement. "Ha! I knew he was getting old," Bowser sneered. "I guess I won't have to worry about him jumping over my traps anymore."

Despite the mixed reactions to his retirement, Mario remains optimistic about his future. "I've had a great run," he said in a statement. "But it's time for me to move on to new challenges. Who knows, maybe I'll even start my own baking show."

As for his fans, they will always remember Mario for his bravery, his humor, and, of course, his jumping skills. "He may be retired from jumping," Toad said. "But he'll always be a hero to us."

Disney Announces Live-Action Remake of Live-Action Lion King with Actual Lions

In a move that has left many scratching their heads, Disney has announced that it will be releasing a live-action remake of its 2019 live-action remake of the animated classic The Lion King. The new film, which will be titled The Lion King: The Live-Action Remake of the Live-Action Remake, will feature actual lions playing the roles of Simba, Nala, Mufasa, and the rest of the cast.

“We felt that the only way to truly capture the magic of The Lion King was to use real lions,” said Disney CEO Bob Iger. “CGI lions just don’t have the same level of emotional impact as real lions.”

The film will be directed by Jon Favreau, who also directed the 2019 live-action remake. Favreau said that he was excited to work with real lions on the project.

“I’ve always been fascinated by lions,” said Favreau. “They’re such majestic creatures, and I think they’re going to bring a whole new level of realism to The Lion King.”

The film is currently in production in Africa, and is set to be released in 2023.

The announcement of The Lion King: The Live-Action Remake of the Live-Action Remake has been met with mixed reactions. Some fans are excited to see the film, while others are skeptical about whether or not it will be successful.

“I’m not sure how I feel about this,” said one fan on Twitter. “On the one hand, I love The Lion King. On the other hand, I don’t know if I want to see a movie with real lions.”

“I’m definitely going to see this,” said another fan. “I think it’s going to be amazing.”

Only time will tell whether or not The Lion King: The Live-Action Remake of the Live-Action Remake will be a success. But one thing is for sure: it’s going to be a very interesting experiment.

Man Discovers the Secret to Time Travel: Oversleeping on Weekends

By EMToast

In a breakthrough discovery that has left the scientific community baffled, a man from New Jersey claims to have discovered the secret to time travel. The secret, he says, lies in oversleeping on weekends.

“I was sleeping in till noon on Saturday when it hit me,” said the man, who wishes to remain anonymous. “I had traveled through time! I went to bed on Friday night and woke up on Saturday morning, but it felt like I had skipped hours, maybe even days.”

At first, many were skeptical of the man’s claims. Time travel, after all, is the stuff of science fiction. But as more and more people tried oversleeping on weekends, the evidence began to mount.

“I always thought time travel would involve some kind of fancy machine or a DeLorean,” said one convert. “But it turns out all I needed was a comfortable bed and a few extra hours of sleep.”

As word of the discovery spread, a rush of new time travelers began to emerge. People who had previously scoffed at the idea of time travel were now oversleeping on weekends with fervor, eager to explore the mysteries of the universe.

Some, of course, were skeptical. “It’s just sleep, people,” said one detractor. “You’re not actually traveling through time. You’re just…sleeping.”

But the time travelers were undeterred. They were too busy exploring the endless possibilities of their newfound power. Some went back in time to fix past mistakes, while others fast-forwarded to see the future.

One man, John Smith, a 35-year-old accountant, claims to have overslept so much that he woke up in the year 2050. “It was crazy,” he said. “The cars were flying, the buildings were enormous, and there were robots everywhere. I can’t wait to go back.”

Smith, also claims that he has been able to travel to different periods of history by simply sleeping in on Saturdays and Sundays.

“I first noticed it when I woke up one Sunday and saw that my phone said it was 1776,” Smith told The Onion. “I thought it was a glitch, but then I looked out the window and saw people wearing colonial outfits and carrying muskets. I realized I had somehow traveled back to the American Revolution.”

Smith said he quickly went back to bed and woke up again in his own time. He decided to test his theory by oversleeping again the next weekend.

“I set my alarm for 10 a.m., but I snoozed it until noon,” Smith said. “When I opened my eyes, I was in ancient Rome. I saw gladiators fighting in the Colosseum and emperors giving speeches. It was amazing.”

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Smith said he has since visited several other historical eras, such as medieval Europe, the Renaissance, the Industrial Revolution, and the 1960s.

“I’ve seen some incredible things,” Smith said. “I’ve met famous people like Leonardo da Vinci, Abraham Lincoln, and Elvis Presley. I’ve witnessed major events like the Black Death, the French Revolution, and the moon landing. I’ve even participated in some of them. I helped Gutenberg print the first book, I signed the Declaration of Independence, and I danced with Marilyn Monroe.”

Smith said he does not know how or why his oversleeping triggers time travel, but he has some theories.

“Maybe it has something to do with the circadian rhythm or the REM cycle,” Smith said. “Or maybe it’s just a cosmic coincidence. Maybe God is just messing with me.”

Smith said he plans to continue his weekend adventures, but he also faces some challenges.

“It’s not always easy to blend in,” Smith said. “Sometimes I have to improvise costumes or languages. Sometimes I get into trouble with the locals or the authorities. Sometimes I accidentally change history. For example, I once spilled coffee on Hitler’s painting and made him angry. I hope that didn’t have any negative consequences.”

Smith also said he has to balance his time travel with his normal life.

“I still have to work on weekdays and pay my bills,” Smith said. “I also have a girlfriend who doesn’t know about my secret. She thinks I’m just lazy and antisocial on weekends. She wants me to spend more time with her and do more activities. But how can I do that when I have the whole history of the world at my fingertips?”

Smith said he hopes to find a way to share his discovery with others someday.

“Maybe I can write a book or make a documentary,” Smith said. “Or maybe I can find someone who can oversleep with me and join me on my trips. That would be awesome.”

Smith said he has no regrets about his unusual hobby.

“It’s been an amazing experience,” Smith said. “I’ve learned so much and had so much fun. I don’t care if anyone believes me or not. I’m just living my dream.”

Not everyone we spoke with was thrilled with the discovery. Some worried that oversleeping on weekends could have unintended consequences.

“We don’t know what kind of ripple effects this could have on the fabric of time and space,” said one concerned scientist. “We could be creating wormholes or alternate timelines without even realizing it.”

But the time travelers dismissed such concerns. They were too busy living in the moment, savoring each new experience that oversleeping on weekends brought them.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

And who can blame them? In a world that seems increasingly complex and uncertain, the idea of being able to travel through time with nothing more than a comfy bed and a lazy Saturday morning is too good to pass up.

So go ahead, oversleep on the weekends. Explore the mysteries of the universe. Who knows what wonders you might discover? Just be careful not to oversleep too much – you don't want to miss out on all the good stuff happening in the present.

In the end, the discovery of time travel through oversleeping on weekends is a reminder that sometimes, the greatest breakthroughs come not from complicated machines or brilliant minds, but from simple moments of rest and relaxation. Who knows what other secrets the universe might reveal to us, if only we take the time to slow down and listen?

Coffee Lovers, This Is the Best News You'll Hear All Day: 500 More Years of Life!

By EMToast

According to a recent study published in the Journal of Caffeine and Health, drinking coffee can extend your lifespan by a staggering 500 years. The study, which was conducted by a team of researchers at the University of Java, found that daily coffee consumption was associated with a significant increase in lifespan.

The researchers followed a group of coffee-drinking participants for over 500 years, and found that those who drank at least one cup of coffee per day had a lifespan that was 500 years longer than those who did not drink coffee.

The study's lead researcher, Dr. Java, explained that the secret to coffee's longevity-boosting powers lies in its rich antioxidant content. "Coffee is packed with antioxidants, which are known to protect the body from damage caused by free radicals," said Dr. Java. "By drinking coffee regularly, you can help your body fight off the effects of aging and live a longer, healthier life."

"We were amazed by the results of the study," said lead researcher Dr. Java. "Not only did the participants feel younger, but their cells actually appeared to be reversing the aging process. It's as if the caffeine in the coffee was acting as a fountain of youth for their bodies."

A new study conducted by researchers at the University of Caffeine has found that drinking coffee can extend lifespan by a staggering 500 years.

The study, which was published in the Journal of Caffeinated Beverages, involved 100 participants who were all heavy coffee drinkers. Over the course of the study, the participants drank an average of 10 cups of coffee per day and reported feeling more energetic and alert, as well as experiencing a significant decrease in their perceived age.

The study has sparked controversy among the medical community, with some doctors expressing skepticism about the long-term effects of caffeine on the human body. "While it's true that caffeine can improve alertness and concentration in the short term, there is no scientific evidence to support the claim that it can extend lifespan by 500 years," said Dr. John Doe, a leading gerontologist.

Despite the controversy, coffee lovers are rejoicing at the news, with many vowing to increase their coffee intake in order to live to be 500 years old. "I used to have one cup of coffee in the morning, but now I'm going to start drinking at least 10 cups a day," said one enthusiastic participant. "I want to live to see the year 2522!"

Whether the study's findings will hold up to further scrutiny remains to be seen, but for now, coffee lovers can enjoy the prospect of living for centuries to come.

In a groundbreaking new study, researchers have discovered that drinking coffee can extend lifespan by a staggering 500 years. The findings, which have sent shockwaves through the scientific community, have been met with both disbelief and excitement.

According to the study, which was conducted by a team of leading researchers at the University of Coffee, regular consumption of coffee can have a profound effect on the human body. By drinking at least one cup of coffee per day, study participants were able to significantly extend their lifespans, with some even reporting increases of up to 500 years.

“We were absolutely stunned by the results,” said lead researcher Dr. Juan Valdez. “We knew that coffee had some health benefits, but we never expected it to have such a profound effect on lifespan. It’s truly a game-changer.”

The study has sparked a rush on coffee shops across the country, with many people flocking to buy cups of the life-giving brew. Some coffee aficionados are even taking extreme measures, chugging entire pots of coffee in an effort to extend their lifespans as much as possible.

“I used to drink coffee just to wake up in the morning, but now I’m drinking it to live forever,” said one enthusiastic coffee drinker. “I don’t know how it works, but I’m not going to question it. I’ll just keep chugging the coffee and hope for the best.”

Despite the excitement, some researchers remain skeptical of the findings. “I find it hard to believe that a single cup of coffee can extend lifespan by 500 years,” said Dr. Susan Black, a leading expert on longevity. “I think further research is needed before we can say for certain that coffee has such incredible powers."

Regardless of the skepticism, the study has sparked a renewed interest in the health benefits of coffee, and many people are now turning to the humble cup of joe in the hopes of extending their lives. "Who knows, maybe one day we'll all be drinking coffee and living for 500 years," said Dr. Valdez. "Only time will tell."

Dental Delirium: The Lost Grins of Toothville

By EMToast

September 19, 2023

Categories: Short Fiction

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

In the once-charming town of Toothville, two renowned dentists, Dr. Gumsnatcher and Dr. Chomper, became ensnared by an unusual and unsettling obsession—extracting teeth. Revered for their uncanny speed and precision in tooth removal, they were admired and feared alike, but their fixation was about to plunge the town into darkness.

Toothville's residents began to murmur with increasing concern, speculating on the reasons behind the dentists' eerie fixation on tooth extraction. Some believed it was a sinister rivalry, while others whispered about their possible involvement in a shadowy organization known as the "Molar Miners," rumored to collect teeth for macabre purposes.

One ominous morning, Dr. Gumsnatcher awoke in a profoundly malevolent mood. An unsettling dream had convinced him that Dr. Chomper was outshining him in the tooth extraction arena, a notion that sent shivers down his spine. Driven by an insatiable desire to outdo his rival, he stormed into his dental office and declared, "Today, I shall strip Toothville of every last tooth!"

Simultaneously, across town, Dr. Chomper was grappling with a similar foreboding. Rumors had reached him about Dr. Gumsnatcher's sinister intent to usurp him as Toothville's preeminent tooth extractor. Consumed by a sinister ego, he clenched his fists and vowed, "No one can surpass Chomper! Today, I shall establish my dominance!"

As the day wore on, the townsfolk watched in sheer terror as the two dentists embarked on a nightmarish crusade, brandishing oversized dental instruments and relentlessly hunting down anyone with teeth. It was a ghastly spectacle, a horrifying race to see who could extract the most teeth in a single day.

In their frantic frenzy, both dentists committed grievous errors. Dr. Gumsnatcher, blinded by his obsession, erroneously attempted to extract a "tooth" from a garden gnome—a mere pebble. The gnome, petrified and trembling, scurried away, muttering, "I'm a statue, not a patient!" Meanwhile, Dr. Chomper mistakenly tried to extract the tail of a passing cat, asserting it presented a unique "dental challenge."

The town square transformed into a nightmarish battleground, with terrified tourists, fleeing pets, and traumatized residents. Children cowered in fear as the two dentists pursued anyone with teeth, while a group of elderly citizens barricaded themselves inside the local ice cream parlor, their cherished smiles forever lost.

As the moon cast an eerie glow over the town, Dr. Gumsnatcher and Dr. Chomper, weary and depleted, found themselves seated amidst a growing throng. It was in that eerie stillness that they finally comprehended the horror of their obsession with tooth extraction. Toothville was now a desolate wasteland, its residents left toothless and despondent.

The townspeople, their faces etched with despair, converged around the dentists, shaking their heads in somber disapproval. It was then, with a hollow and chilling laughter, that Dr. Gumsnatcher and Dr. Chomper called a dreadful truce. They had vanquished every tooth in Toothville, leaving only a haunting void. They pledged to harness their dental skills for ominous purposes, never to engage in such a gruesome competition again.

The harrowing tale of the two dentists who plunged their town into darkness would become a sinister legend, passed down through generations as a cautionary tale of unchecked obsession. The people of Toothville, forever bereft of their teeth and their innocence, had learned that dentistry could be a nightmare, a source of torment, rather than a source of comfort.

Man Shocked to Learn Most of His Opinions Not Actually His Own

By EMToast
December 5, 2023

Randy Phillips of Columbus, Ohio received the shock of his life last Tuesday when researchers informed him that a full 87% of his personal opinions and beliefs did not actually originate from his own independent thought.

“I really prided myself on thinking for myself. Turns out I’m mostly just a product of media echo chambers and online algorithms,” a stunned Phillips said after receiving the analysis showing the majority of his stances were simply absorbed from viral posts, partisan pundits, and targeted advertising.

Researchers determined that while Phillips believed he had carefully considered viewpoints on politics, social issues, brands, restaurants, best places to live, parenting techniques, and more before arriving at his own unique conclusions, his views almost perfectly aligned with the dominant perspectives of his various social media feeds and chosen cable news channel without any evidence of original consideration.

The analysis further showed Phillips has shared thousands of posts containing pre-packaged opinions over a 5 year period which he mistakenly identified as “my take” or “my view” rather than the reactive talking points they truly were, merely amplified from his preferred media sources.

“I just assumed the profound wisdom coming across my feeds which I agreed with and shared was the product of my discerning judgment and free-thinking mind,” Phillips lamented while reconsidering his supposed status as an independent brain with an identity all his own. “Turns out I’m more of a content distribution node than a person at this point.”

PEZ Invention Saves Dying Girl After Docs ‘Gave Up’

By EMToast

December 5, 2023

Categories: Absurd World News

It was the summer of 1927 in Vienna, Austria when confectioner Eduard Haas III was working late one night developing new hard candy creations in his small shop. As Eduard tinkered with refined sugar and pressed peppermint oils into various shapes, he peeked over to smile proudly at his 9-year old daughter, Ava, who frequently kept him company in the kitchen lab as he cooked up new sweets.

But as Ava reached for a piece of licorice, she suddenly started gasping desperately, hands clasping her throat. Eduard watched in horror as his daughter’s windpipe swelled rapidly closed. He sprang over to try to pry her jaw open or perform some other measure to allow air flow, but her blocked airway caused her face to turn blue, her life slipping away within minutes. In a panicked last resort, Eduard grabbed a straw and a sharp knife, plunging the blade through her throat, allowing the straw to pierce an emergency airway through the swelling.

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Miraculously, Ava coughed back to consciousness as air reentered her starved lungs down the crude tracheotomy straw. As she recovered in the hospital over the next weeks though, she was without voice or the ability to ingest anything orally.

Eduard devised a way for bedridden Ava to ingest sugar for nourishment as she recovered, he specifically made small compressed fruit-flavored sugar wafers to be as smooth and easily dissolvable as possible for his daughter's condition. These delicate candy wafers were designed to be handed one-by-one down Ava's throat directly rather than chewed, without risking damage to the freshly cut tracheotomy opening.

Observing his clever yet still crude candy-and-straw method of feeding and sustaining young Ava, Eduard visualized improving upon the concept. Gazing thoughtfully at his worktable spread with molds and casting parts, his eyes landed on a rectangular tin lozenge container. Running his finger along the thin opening meant to carefully dispense the medicinal throat lozenges, Eduard had a revelation about the ideal candy vessel.

He fine-tuned a metal tool to compress precise doses of candy powder into tiny, slender bricks before sculpting a miniature lozenge-style dispenser box with a thin, gently notched opening at the top. This new prototype allowed an individual candy wafer to slide up perfectly into alignment, positioned to easily descend down into Ava's throat. The non-edged, smooth-surfaced slit was perfectly shaped for Ava to comfortably suck the candy nugget from its holder down into her trachea, delivering a flavorful, nourishing burst straight to her gullet.

As they tested and refined this candy-lozenge dispenser system's form and function for Ava's specific needs, Eduard tweaked and patented his designs, enchanted as Ava delightedly "spoke" in sweet flavors through her tracheotomy straw with each fresh PEZ dispensed. Before long, PEZ dispensers with signature notched openings specially created to gently cater to his daughter's throat and injury were revolutionizing both candy and medical remedy consumption for children worldwide.

News spread of Eduard's confectionery contraption for his daughter. Orders flowed in from doctors, families and even opera singers seeking the candy dispensers. Touched by all those the personalized candy helped, Eduard Haas decided to mass produce these creations, naming them in honor of his daughter "PEZ" — short for "Pfefferminz" Ava. And so the PEZ dispenser was born, ultimately delighting children and adults worldwide, thanks to a father's love and inventive way to give his daughter nourishment when she needed it most.

Garage Door Achieves Enlightenment: Humanity Still Stuck

By EMToast
December 6, 2023
Categories: Absurd World News

In the quaint town of Peculiar Springs, where the sunsets painted the sky in shades of irony, there stood an unassuming house. Its garage door, however, was anything but ordinary. It was a paradox—a stubborn enigma that defied the laws of mechanics and common sense.

Mr. Archibald Grumblebee, the homeowner, scratched his bald head as he stared at the perplexing contraption. The garage door had a mind of its own. It neither opened nor closed. It hung there, suspended in indecision, like a hesitant moth caught between two porch lights.

The townsfolk gathered to witness this peculiar phenomenon. They brought lawn chairs, popcorn, and their best sarcastic remarks. After all, what else could one do when faced with a garage door that defied its purpose?

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

The Stuck Door Chronicles became a weekly event. Families picnicked on the grass, children played tag around the immobile door, and teenagers wrote angst-ridden poems about existential garage dilemmas. The local website, EMToast.com, assigned me—the intrepid reporter Anthony J. Booze—to unravel this mystery.

The Investigation Begins

I interviewed Mr. Grumblebee, who had grown fond of the door. "It's like a silent companion," he mused. "A metaphor for life's uncertainties."

"But what about your car?" I asked.

"Oh, I sold it. Walking is good for the soul," he replied, adjusting his mismatched socks.

Next, I consulted Professor Ignatius Whimsy, the town's eccentric physicist. He wore a lab coat adorned with glitter and spoke in rhyming couplets.

"Ah, young Anthony," he said, stroking his handlebar mustache. "This door exists in a quantum state—simultaneously open and closed. It's Schrödinger's Garage, you see."

"But why?" I pressed.

"Because," he whispered, "it yearns for purpose. A door that can't decide its fate is the ultimate existential crisis."

The Moral Repercussions

As weeks turned into months, the townsfolk pondered the deeper implications. The stuck garage door became a symbol:

1. The Perils of Indecision: Couples sought counseling, fearing their relationships might end up like the door—neither fully open nor closed. Divorce rates plummeted, but therapy sessions skyrocketed.
2. The Absurdity of Routine: The local bakery named a pastry after the door: the "Half-Closed Danish." It was flaky, indecisive, and filled with existential dread.
3. The Power of Acceptance: Children wrote essays about embracing life's quirks. The school motto changed to "Be the Garage Door You Wish to See in the World."
4. The Zen of Stillness: Meditation classes gathered in the garage, chanting, "Om, ohm, open, close, ohm."

The Grand Finale

One fateful evening, during a lunar eclipse, the townsfolk held hands around the garage. The door trembled, torn between dimensions. Mr. Grumblebee recited a haiku:

Copyright © 2024 by EMToast

Stuck door, silent muse, Teach us life's sweet paradox— Embrace the in-between.

And then, with a cosmic sigh, the garage door split into two translucent halves. One side floated upward, the other sank into the earth. The crowd gasped. Was this closure or liberation?

Professor Whimsy grinned. "The door found balance. It's now both open and closed, everywhere and nowhere."

As the townsfolk dispersed, I penned my headline for EMToast:

"Garage Door Achieves Enlightenment: Humanity Still Stuck."

And so, dear reader, remember this: Life's greatest mysteries often hang in the liminal spaces. Embrace them, for in the absurdity lies our shared humanity.

—Anthony J. Booze, Reporting from Peculiar Springs

Note: The garage door later started a successful podcast called "The Existential Hinge."
